One Hundred and Ten

CLOAKS,

MARKED DOWN!

ONE-THIRD OFF!

This is much less than they cost to manufacture, less than the cloth cost.

There is of course a large loss to us, but we make this extremely low price to close the lot at once, as we will not carry them over.

W. & S. W. ANDERSON & CO.

'85 Art Garand '85

We have on our floor a full line of those celebrated base burners. Their wonderful success of last season has led others to attempt to imitate; beware, a careful comparison and examination will be sufficient to satisfy all of their established superiority.

The Round Oak.

Although it has hundreds of imitators, it still LEADS as the most successful wood heater manufactured. Remember that by a few dollars additional outlay the "Round Oak" can at any time be converted into a first-class Soft-feeding Coal Stove.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CHRONICLES.

Prepare for storing crystal coolness for summer's use.

A fortunate of that blizzard has approached and coal is in demand.

We have heard that there were to be two dances in town to-morrow evening.

Mrs. Weber, Emma Rupp, Charles Rupp and child visited a Tecumseh gallery to procure pictures last Saturday.

We are sorry to learn that Willie Wallace, whom we have missed from the records at our high school for several weeks, on account of sickness, is reported on the decline and fears are entertained that his recovery is doubtful.

We judge something is to happen in the stock market, the Wills are becoming numerous. We noticed Will. Burtless of Manchester, talking matters over with Will. Gadd, yesterday, upon our streets.

Emma and Anna Rupp, of Monroe, were visiting at Frank Kirchgessner's last week and the first of this week.

D. B. Sherwood, formerly publisher of the Clinton Standard, published in this village some years ago, came here from Mantau Station, Ohio, last Saturday with the remains of a child, Ralph Waldo Sherwood, aged five months. Mr. S. procured a lot in this cemetery when here, and upon the death of the child, at once started with the body for interment, by the side of another that had been placed there previously. The editor of a long time ago, made a great many friends in Clinton who were glad to grasp his hand and bid him welcome, even though it were for but a brief exchange of words and a mere recognition, for he had changed materially, and some of the old pioneers failed to recognize him.

The new proprietors of the bank, E. R. Smith and Willis VanTuyle, are on the alert for improvements that will make all entrusted to their care and feel perfectly safe and reliable, and gain for this enterprise the patronage a good banking house justly deserves. They have just introduced a new safe which is a perfect beauty. It is an automatic, time lock, burglar proof repository, manufactured by Beard & Bro., of St. Lous, and is provided with a screw door which is entirely free from any cavity whatever, and therefore it would be a hard matter to convert it into an explosive missle; and, judging from the sample of material shown us, which was said to be the metal of which it is made, and which had been put to a severe test with a drill propelled by steam at the woolen mill, for several moments with but very little traces of the working of the drill, we think it would baffle the efforts of a burglar to work his way into it by that means, as he would be obliged to stop over for a time, and that is not what they are accustomed to. It weighs 30,000 lbs. and represents a $1,000 piece of furniture, and upon being placed in position in the vault, will make as safe a receptacle for valuables as can be found in the state. That the Clinton Bank justly deserves the increasing patronage it is receiving in return for the courtesy extended its patrons, is a noticeable fact.

The churches of this place are observing the week of prayer, by holding union meetings; the first of which, being a sermonizing and exhortation meeting, was held on Monday evening, at the Congregational Church, at which time Rev. J. A. Barnes treated the audience to a very clever discourse and the Rev. P. F. Ogden made some very appropriate remarks, exhorting the people to activity in moral work. It was announced that the Rev. E. P. Pierce had met with an accident and would not be able to take a part in the meetings. Tuesday evening meeting was also held at the same place, and the two following at the Methodist Church, and the Friday and Saturday meetings are to be in the Baptist Church.

We understand Ben. Ellis is in Hillsdale having gone out there to attend the wedding of his sister Lottie.

For some reason that we did not learn, L. F. Wheeler failed to put in an appearance at town hall last Monday evening, as was advertised.

There were no services at the methodist church last Sunday evening, Rev. E. P. Pierce, having met with an accident that forbade his officiating. He slipped upon the ice and fell, causing a sprained knee, which has come far from being a comfort to him for several days.

Paul Kress and wife, of Bridgewater, have been visiting Martin Kouech, Mat Staub, Frank Kirchgessner and their families, last week.

A fur buyer transferred about $80 worth of that article from Frank McClure's collar underneath his harness shop, last Tuesday, and shipped it to manufacturers.

Mrs. Weber, nee Lena Kirchgessner, of Sylvan, Jackson county, has been adding to the enjoyments ar und the parental hearthstone and making glad her many Clinton friends by her presence, for a few days past.

Robert D. Terryberry, has been expatiating in Canada and New York, upon the trampling grounds of former years, and reports a splendid holiday vacation, and says that farmers were ploughing both in the dominion and Yorkshire, unmindful of the approaching blizzard signalled last Friday. Rob. took a peep into the market at Detroit and saw them selling turkeys and best cuts of steak at 8 cents per pound. The holiday stock was undoubtedly too much for them with the weather indications.

The telephone announced on Friday last that A. W. Spafford—or as he was more familiarly known as "Tean"—was at Battle Creek, but we did not learn how long he would remain or what would be the destination of his journey. He has left behind him, many friends who miss his joyous smile in the choir, the cornet band and the social gatherings in our midst, and while they regret his departure, we believe, with one accord, they freely extend to him their best wishes for success in whatever enterprise it may be his good fortune to embark.

C. F. Field, of the Tecumseh News, was the guest of J. S. Kies last Sunday, and attended church at St. John's, in the evening. It must seem very much like home for him there as he was for a long time Sunday-School Superintendent and leader of the choir in this little church around the corner.

Some persons have inferred from the article in the last issue, that we meant to carry the impression that the instigators of the club dances were in favor of extortion, by the introduction of a fee [illegible], which was certainly the most remote they could have got from our thoughts. We merely wished to carry the idea that all present had paid what they should towards the support of such a band of music, and that the dancers and none other were to blame that they did not partake of respite from torture at an earlier hour. The matter was left entirely with them and was so mentioned from the stage. The money was taken to compensate the music and the boys inform us that as soon as the extra amount required by the quartet was raised, taxation ceased.

The Ladies Working Society of St. John's church will hold a meeting at the residence of Mrs. Ed. VanDeMark, this afternoon. All are cordially invited to call and participate, who wish to aid in the good work that is being accomplished.

There will be regular services at St. John's church this evening at 7 o'clock, at which time, it is hoped there will be a good attendance, as all are welcome, and it is good to dwell in the house of the Lord.

Report sayeth that the enterprising Dry Goods firm E. W. Freese & Son, are making preparations for the enlargement of their trading rooms, for the more convenient reception and display of the goods demanded by their scores of patrons, and that the addition will be a much needed convenience, as well as great improvement. Thus the good work goes forward, and we are enabled to announce as many improvements as any of our neighboring villages, which is a good showing that the place is in a very prosperous condition.

Uncle Tom has come and gone: he arrived last Saturday and produced his cabin with all its appertenances, fixtures etc. as toned in the widely circulated publication of Mrs. Stowe. They were greeted with a very fair audience, and for the most part, we believe the listeners thought they were well compensated for their attendance. We have seen this play brought out in much better style than at this time, but some of the parts were very good, especially little Eva, who for a child of her age had her part committed and recited it throughout, with remarkable dexterity and precision. The company are accompanied by an orchestra and give an entertainment above the average traveling show.

It is a boy and Leb Pomeroy is perfectly happy.

RIDGEWAY HACKET.

The signal flags were unfurled to the breeze Friday morning for the first.

Agent and Mrs. Frank Allen returned to Richland Wednesday morning of last week.

Ace Smith and wife left for Grand Ledge last week Wednesday to visit their daughter, Mrs. Horace Brown.

Elijah Raymond, of Dixon, Ill., came Tuesday of last week to visit his sisters, Mrs. Hall, of this village, and Mrs. Wm. E. Doty, of Holloway.

Lank Smith is attending the market while his brother is away.

Tommy McClure, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday with Dean Loree and Ambrose Arner.

Ida Arner is on the sick list at present.

Miss Frank Baker, a missionary, gave a very interesting lecture at the church Sunday evening. Her description and workings of the organization in the eastern land was very interesting and instructive. The attendance was very encouraging considering the stormy night.

Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Wilson returned to Blissfield on Friday to attend to their school duties there.

Prof. and Mrs. E. A. Wilson left for Vassar Saturday, and will resume their school work the first of the week.

Will Clack began school in the Eaglick district Monday.

A. E. Palmer and wife who spent a few days with his parents returned to their home in Hillsdale Friday night.

G. W. Jackson and Miss Ella Jackson left Saturday morning for their home at Hillsdale. Miss Kittie Clark went with them and will make relatives and friends a visit.

Martin Palmer returned to Hillsdale Monday to resume his College duties.

Quite a number went to Tecumseh Friday to attend the funeral of Thomas Osborn.

There will be no social this week, it being week of prayer.

Mattie Consul, of Adrian, visited her uncle Chas. Gove, and spent Saturday afternoon with friends in the village.

The young folks of the village spent of Samuel Rappleye last Wednesday evening.

Hattie Holloway, of Tipton, is spending a few days at her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Helm's.

Helen Travis, of Pennington's Corners, and who is attending school at North Adams, has been visiting her friends, Anna and May Smith, for the past few days.

Miss Frank Baker was the guest of Mrs. Joshua Waring Sunday and Monday.

The village school began Monday with Hattie Moon at the helm.

Geo. D. Arner is the possessor of a fine hat mark sent to him by his sister, Jessie Patton, of Chicago.

W. H. Arner and wife attended the festival given by the masonic fraternity at Tecumseh on Friday evening.

The Literary will meet next week Friday evening and carry out a short program, after which the election of officers will take place. Full particulars next week.

At the close of the Sunday school Sunday the board met and elected the following as officers for the ensuing year:

Supt.—Dr. D. W. Loree.
Asst. Supt.—G. P. Waring.
Sec.—Ella Cadmus.
Treas.—Ada Loree.
Chorister—G. P. Waring.
Asst. Chor.—J. D. Arner.
Organist—Belle Barlow.
Asst. Org.—Kittie Clark.

BRITTON BUDGET.

At last you hear again from Britton. Mud all around us. The brave six hundred would not advance in this.

The rain prevented the carrying out of the program of the literary Saturday night. A good program will be offered next Saturday evening. Come one and all.

Edgar Pilbeam captured an escape from jail last Sunday, returning to Adrian on the fast train with him.

Notwithstanding diligent search no trace can be found of the person who set fire to J. P. Beckler's store a week ago.

Our school progresses finely under the care of Mr. Briggs. He is sustaining the reputation he brought here as a good and efficient teacher.

J. T. Hallock spent Wednesday last with his son, our doctor.

F. M. Hallock, of Ann Arbor, visited his brother here last week.

Last Wednesday evening a host of friends strolled in upon Mr. and Mrs. Chas. DuBois, making a complete surprise and filling their large and pleasant rooms to overflowing. Notwithstanding its being a surprise the worthy host and hostess sustained their reputation as genial friends and worthy entertainers by serving the new arrivals right royally. During the evening Rev. Jas. Wright, in behalf of the church, presented a fine set of china dishes to Mrs. DuBois as a recognition of her services as organist of the Christian church during the past year. The time was spent in a social, pleasant manner, visiting and singing. Many old memories were recalled and all was followed by a splendid supper. Every one departed with pleasant wishes and kind farewells. The last thing heard, loud above all good nights, was Charley's strong voice with his "Come again." Mr. and Mrs. DuBois unite in returning thanks to their many friends.

HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS.

Several cases of scarlet fever in Dutch town.

Burt Arner is prolonging his holiday vacation a little on account of a very large boil on his neck.

Levi Coffin wears a very broad smile every time we see him, and we notice that when the boys remark that it is about time to smoke Levi walks up like a little man.

Flora and Dora Pease are at home at present visiting, after a long siege at the Blissfield school. They expect to return again ere long.

Cora Brainard, of Ida, Monroe Co., called on W. H. Brainard last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Weeks, and Mr. and Mrs. Weeks, of Hanover, spent New Year's with Dr. Begel's people.

Conrad Atwill entertained relatives New Year's day, and when we saw our supervisor there we just said within ourself: "Uncle Coon, we don't believe you carefully figured the cost before you undertook this thing."

Elijah Raymond is visiting his sister, Mrs. Wm. Doty.

ONSTED ODDS.

Peter Lee, of Lowell, is visiting his many friends and relatives here.

Byron Hill and wife, of Manchester, spent several days with friends here last week.

Robert Compton, who has been on a visiting tour in New York and Pennsylvania during the last two months, returned a few days since. He reports a good time, but says the Michigan best.

Fred Reed has moved to the farm which he purchased of J. W. Russell, and Mr. Russell has moved into his house in the village.

Thomas Sammons, who went from here to a farm near Lansing last spring, was in the neighborhood last week. Tom says he likes his new home first-rate.

E. C. Spalding, who has been station agent here for more than a year, has been sent to Ceresco to take charge of the station there. He is succeeded here by a Mr. Ketchum, from Wisconsin.

Mr. Reed has a magic lantern with which he entertains his friends when they call to spend the evening. With a little experience Marshall would become an excellent showman.

[Delayed last week's letter.]

Gideon Ellis, of Cone, was in town Friday and Saturday.

Luella Holt, of Jackson, is the guest of Jessie Short.

William Knapp spent Christmas in Tecumseh, and returned Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Winn, of Allegan, a former resident of this place is here visiting her many friends.

Nelson Kinney started last Saturday to visit friends in Saginaw and Bay City.

David Corwin has become one of the M. & O. bridge carpenters. Commenced work Tuesday.

Fred Hacket and wife spent Christmas and several days following with friends in Adrian.

A break-down near this station Saturday evening, caused a delay of about two hours to the east bound freight.

Among our young people who are attending school away from home, and have come home to spend the holidays, are Walter Wimple, Tecumseh; Jessie Short, Jackson; Alma Howes, Minnie Daniels, Flora Ross and Myrta Maxwell, of Raisin Valley Seminary.

The Christmas tree at Grange hall passed off pleasantly. A large number of presents were distributed, among which was a purse of eleven and one-fourth dollars to Mr. and Mrs. Dennett. The net proceeds of the evening were about sixteen dollars.

Ellison and Lisle Ross, of Adrian, started with a team and carriage to drive to their father's, to spend Christmas. Breaking down, they returned to Adrian, got a fresh rig and drove to Tecumseh and waited for the evening train, arriving here at eight o'clock. Pretty late to eat Christmas dinner, but we suppose they thought "Better late than never."

OUT OF THE WAY.

"It's out of my way," says the selfish man,
Unwilling to please another.
Or to put himself out of the daily rut
To comfort a needy brother;
"It's out of my way, and I haven't time!"
How common are these excuses;
And a chance is lost at a trifling cost
Of correcting the world's abuses.

"It's out of my way, and I haven't time!"
Says the flippant, unfeeling beauty,
Who quiets her conscience every day,
Resisting the call of duty;
And she's but one of a mighty host,
A prominent purse-proud faction
Who never out of their way will go
To do a generous action.

It's out of their way to be kind and true,
To furnish a balm for sorrow:
And they haven't time to do good to-day,
And they'll have less time to-morrow.
The cry of the sick and needy ones
They hear, but they detect mind it;
"Trouble comes," they say, "and it doesn't pay
To go out of our way to find it."

But the holiest deeds that are ever done
Take on the form of surprises,
And the heart that is eager for angel tasks
A plan for its work devises;
For the road of sympathy is not straight,
And the lines and the lanes of pity,
Beyond a doubt, are not laid out
Like the streets of a worldly city.

And every day, all along our way,
There are chances to help another,
Kind aid to give and kind words to speak
To a suffering friend and brother;
And he has the sweetest reward of all
In life—as he journeys through it—
Who, seeing the need of a kindly deed,
Goes out of his way to do it.

—Josephine Pollard, in N. Y. Ledger.

A BIG HALL.

The Assembly Chamber of the House of Congress.

National Legislators Are Arranged—Convenient Chairs and Unused Waste-Paper Baskets—An Excited "Objector"—Salaries, Etc.

The hall of the House of Representatives is the largest legislative chamber in the world. It covers fully a quarter of an acre of ground and six acrobats, each six feet high, might stand in it, one on the head of the other, and while the feet of the first rested on the floor the hair of the sixth would just graze the ceiling. The room is thirty-six feet high, and the floor inside the railing where the Congressmen's desks are placed, covers as much space as a city lot of sixty-nine feet front and one hundred and fifteen feet deep. The ceiling is of cast iron and glass. There is a checker-board network of cast-iron frames, and the panels of the board are filled in with glass which is glazed roughly and printed with the coats of arms of the various States. All of the light which the House gets comes through the ceiling, as there are no windows, except those in the many doors, and these which enter the House through vestibules of ten or twelve feet in thickness give only the radiated light of windows far away. This light is supplied by the sun by day, and by electricity by night.

The floor of this big hall is covered with a carpet of Brussels which was made to order for it. Its color is green mixed with red, and it takes [illegible] yards to cover it. It looks new and fresh now, and there are no tobacco stains upon it. But the average member chews, the wood, and though the Government gives him a spittoon beside his desk, he spits as often on the floor as in the spittoon. The desks used by the members are small affairs, much like those used in the common schools. They have a top which can be lifted up and gives room below for the stationery and papers of the member inside. Each member has one desk to himself, and his name is posted or tacked upon its lid. The chairs of the members are the common, [illegible] swinging office chairs with wicker backs, and these backs are [illegible] high that the Congressman can easily throw his back upon them and by [illegible] his feet to the top of the [illegible] assume pot-bamboozled in the [illegible] American attitude for sleeping. This is not in the most [illegible] position to the halls of the House during a session and the Forty-eighth Congress had members who did more sleeping than working.

Beside each Congressman's desk there stands a waste paper basket, but your average Congressman never uses this. He tears up his paper in bits like a moody lunatic and scatters it on the floor. After a day's session the floor of the House is littered from one end to the other and there is enough paper upon its carpet to buy the country tin ware for a whole Ohio County.

The desks at the right of the hall are those occupied by the Republicans. The Democrats sit on the left side, and Morrison and Randall have seats in about the middle point of the Democratic body. Tom Reed, the Republican leader, sits in the midst of the Republicans, and Congressman Kelley very near him. Kelley's seat will be the same this Congress as last. He has the choice of seats on the ground of being the oldest member in point of service.

The Speaker's desk is in the center, and is a very fine piece of work. It is three feet above the floor, and it is made of white marble with a base of Tennessee marble. Carlisle, who fills it, is a tall, lank, black-faced fellow, with a smooth face and with jaws which are always chewing tobacco when they are not talking. He sits generally on his spine, and his body rests on it in the form of a bow. He makes a good Speaker, however, and is generally fair in his rulings.

Just beside the right of the desk, on a pedestal of Vermont marble, stands the mace. This mace is the insignia of the authority of the House. It is always in the House when that body is in session, and the Sergeant-at-Arms must carry it in his hands when he wishes to arrest a member, or to force him to submit to the rulings of the House. The mace is a bundle of lictor's rods, bound together with silver cords and surmounted by a silver globe representing the world, which is crowned by the American eagle.

The House usually begins its sessions at twelve o'clock noon, and continues to sit until about four or five o'clock p. m. during ordinary times. The House clock is the timepiece that rules. It stands just over the entrance door at the back of the hall and opposite the Speaker, facing him. It is a very pretty clock, and is a fine work of art. It is the bete noir of long-winded speakers, and cuts off many a blowhard before his time for ending has come.

At the sides of the hall door over which this clock stands there are two cloak rooms, and at the left hand corner of the back there is a barber shop, where the members may be shaved while a stormy or dull debate is going on. At times members are in this barber's chair when some legislation which interests them comes up, and I have seen a statesman rush from the barber's office with half his beard off, the lather over the rest of his face, and a barber's sheet around his neck, and object to a certain ruling. Such speeches are more food for laughter than for good.

Half way up the walls of the House hall the galleries begin, and rise by graded seats almost to the roof. These galleries will seat twenty-five hundred people. The most important is the press gallery to both the speakers and the people, for it is through this that they hear of all the doings below. This is directly back of the Speaker's desk and above it. It is gilded and better arranged than the other galleries and has desks with little ink stands set into them for the use of the press. Each paper of note has a right to one seat here, and about one hundred and twenty-five men constitute the occupants. Just back of this gallery there is a telegraph office and a writing room. A speech is delivered in Congress at two p. m. and the words are in the offices of the newspapers all over the country almost as fast as they fall from the speaker's lips. The gallery opposite the press gallery is the diplomatic gallery, the seats of which are painted blue. It is often filled with foreigners, and none but the diplomatic representatives of foreign countries have the right to enter it.

At the desk in front of the Speaker the Clerk stands with his assistants behind him. He reads generally in a voice which is a cross between the rasping of a buzz saw and the sharpening of a slate pencil. He gets $5,000 a year for doing it. Below him at a shorter desk are the shorthand reporters of the House, who take down the matter of debate for the Record. These men each get $5,000 a year.

Running about through the House at all times are the pages, who are paid about two and one-half dollars per day. These are lively little boys, generally of about twelve or fourteen years of age. When a member wants them he claps his hands and they run to his desk. In addition to these, there are scores of other employes about the House of Representatives who do all kinds of work, from the cleaning of the spittoons and carrying in of cards, to the aiding the Speaker and Chairmen of committees in their work. These get from $500 to $2,500 a year. Doorkeepers are paid from $1,200 to $2,000 for merely opening and shutting a door about six hours a day, and when the numerous servants are considered it is no wonder that the expenses of a Congressional session run up so high. The average cost of a session is about $3,000,000, and the Congressmen receive mileage in addition to their salaries of $5 per [illegible] amounting to a total of $113,624. The newspapers and stationery consumed by a Congress runs as high as $70,000 yearly, and the salaries of the Senators amount to $380,000 and that of the Representatives to $1,665,000 every year. The Speaker of the House and the President pro tem. of the Senate each receives $8,000 a year, and one of the poorest paid men in the Senate is the Chaplain, who gets but $900 a year.—"Carp," in Cleveland Leader.

AFTER NINE YEARS.

A Pair of Pincers Lead to the Conviction of Three Criminals.

At Frankfort-on-the-Oder three men have just been sentenced to the penitentiary for eight years each for a crime committed by them nine years ago. December 11, 1876, a farm at Haselfelde, lying isolated from the village, was visited by three masked men, who broke open the door and by threats compelled the farmer and his wife to give up their small savings, amounting to about forty dollars. The robbers then disappeared, leaving no other trace behind but a pair of pincers which they had used for breaking open the door. Yet these pincers, after the lapse of nine years, brought about their arrest and conviction. One of the men, with the name of Fiddicke, inadvertently mentioned a short time ago to a fellow-workingman that he once lost a pair of pincers, which he valued very highly, as they had done him good service. His remark was overheard by a detective, who knew Fiddicke to be a criminal, and who had also been employed to trace the perpetrators of the above robbery. By careful inquiries he soon fastened the ownership of the pincers on Fiddicke, and also secured his accomplices.—Chicago Tribune.

Sun-Glows in Sweden.

Toward the end of October the remarkable sun-glows were again seen at Stockholm. In the western horizon a yellow cloud-bank, strongly illuminated, appeared behind a number of tiny clouds, grayish in color, the sky above the former, to a height of forty-five degrees, being lurid, entirely coloring the clouds. Later on in the evening the glow imparted to the edges of the clouds the most remarkable reflections of color, varying from ochre to yellow, violet and pink, with shadings of blue. At times the higher-lying clouds formed most remarkable formations. It seemed that the glow was situated between cumulus and cirrus clouds.—N. Y. Post.

"GENUINE ENTERPRISE."

Successful Business Methods of a Firm of City Street Peddlers.

"Just watch that little game down there—it works as slick as if it was greased," said the big policeman in front of St. Paul's Church yesterday as he pointed his club toward Vesey street. Fifteen yards further down Broadway, in the middle of the block, was a brisk young man with a big push cart full of hand mirrors, brushes and combs, which a big placard proclaimed "were the last of a bankrupt stock at half the cost price." In front of the cart, which stood up against the curb, was an ingenuous looking man with a long ulster and a well brushed silk hat. He had just bought five hand mirrors and was looking at the brushes as the reporter came up and began examining the "bankrupt stock."

"Well, I declare! Did you ever see anything so cheap?" exclaimed the ingenuous man as he turned to the reporter. "Here they're selling these mirrors for twenty-five cents apiece. Real Venetian mirrors and solid brass frames. I can tell that, for I was in the importing business once. They're worth one dollar apiece at the lowest! I've just bought five. I'm going to give one to my wife and one to each of my girls."

"You're right, sir," said the brisk young man behind the cart; "they're almost given away. Just look at one, sir, and you, too, madame," as he stopped wrapping up the parcel for the ingenuous man, and thrust one mirror into the reporter's hand and another into the hand of a lady in a sealskin sacque who had heard the eulogies of the ingenuous young man and had stopped for a moment in an undecided sort of a way.

"Upon my word," continued the ingenuous man in an enthusiastic tone that floated forty feet away. "I never saw anything like it—yes, it's a real ivory comb and a genuine ivory backed English made hair brush—I've dealt in 'em myself. How much did you say, my man? What! only a quarter apiece? You may wrap me up four of each. I never saw anything so cheap in my life. Just given away; yes, given away is the word, sir," and again he turned his radiant countenance upon the reporter.

The lady's doubts seemed dispelled by this emphatic approval and she bought a hand mirror, brush and comb. A dry goods clerk, who looked as if he was going to see his best girl, so resplendent was he, was also encouraged to the point of buying a mirror. Three shop girls fluttered up and bought two hair brushes between them. Messenger boys sprang up from nowhere and stared. Small girls appeared mysteriously and gazed with longing eyes at the mirrors and celluloid-backed hair brushes. Before the ingenuous man had gotten his change there was a crowd of fifty people around the cart wanting to buy something.

"What's the game? I don't see any except that twenty-five cents is about twice as much as those things are worth," asked the reporter, when he had at last disentangled himself from the crowd.

"You're not very fly," said the big policeman, pityingly; "that man in the ulster is only a 'capper.' He'll go off now and wait till this crowd goes away and business gets dull again. Then the feller at the cart will move to [illegible] Broadway a block or two, and the 'capper' 'll turn up again and buy a whole lot of things. He'll enthuse about their quality and cheapness and another crowd 'll collect and buy a lot—tumble? I tell you, a couple of fellers working that way will sell as much as a good sized store will. I've seen that cart there emptied six times in a day. It's what I call gen-u-ine enterprise."—N. Y. Herald.

ITALIAN ETIQUETTE.

A Nationality Which Is Not Given to Familiarity.

No one gets very intimate with the Italians. They are very warm-hearted, sociable and easy up to a certain point; there it ceases. The young dipomats who live in Rome notice this; although they have lost their costumes, they have kept their customs, and one of these is a certain repellant atmosphere when extreme intimacy is expected. There is in Rome—the more's the pity—a slow vanishing of the picturesque; but although a Roman Princess may wear a modern gown, and retain nothing of the past but her splendid jewels, she is the same proud lady that she was, or that her great grandmother was, and she, like her, repels intimacy or familiarity beyond a certain point. One very important point is that they never wish to be touched. In our country a lady talking with another will often lay her hand on her friend's arm; this is considered a very great and objectionable familiarity by an Italian. "Never touch the person; it is sacred," is an Italian proverb. A lady in Italian society, to be very polite, will shake hands when introduced to an American the first time, but she rarely extends her hand the second time; she makes a deep and graceful courtesy. If her friend is in affliction, she comes, takes her hand, and presses it to her heart; but there is nothing of the free, easy caressing, none of that intimate kissing, nothing like the superficial intimacy, which we observe between American women.—Chicago Interior.

—A person struck by lightning does not know it, the fluid being much quicker than thought. The nerves which convey pain are rather slow in their power to convey information. Stick a pin in the tail of an elephant and quite a perceptible interval occurs before the noble animal gives his opinion of the man or boy at the end of the nervous system on trial. Lightning does its work before the victim knows anything. Two men were struck while taking refuge under a tree. Both were carried into the house, and laid out for dead. One of the men revived, and after weeks of suffering and infirmity, he got out again, and is still living. He said that he knew no more about having been struck by lightning than he was conscious of having lived before the flood. It was all news to him when told of the fact.—Boston Globe.

MONEY FOR LIFE.

The Business of Getting Loans on Insurance Policies Rapidly Increasing.

"There goes a man who is mad all over," said a prominent financial agent to a reporter, as a gentleman with a perceptibly ruffled aspect left his office. "He called to negotiate a loan on a life-insurance policy, which I had agreed to make for him, but his collateral turned out to be a life policy in favor of his wife, and I could do nothing with it."

"Do you have many applications for loans on life insurance?"

"Indeed I do, and the business is growing every year. There was very little done in it eight years ago, but since then it has been increasing steadily, until now it plays a prominent part in the loaning business."

"What kind of people generally resort to offering such security?"

"All kinds. There are some who feel ashamed to ask for a loan on anything, but those who do it as a regular thing think no more of borrowing on life insurance than on a house and lot. Why, there are any number of prominent men in this city to whom I have made such loans, and who take out large policies for the express purpose of being able to realize in case they need any ready money."

"What kind of policy do you prefer?"

"The endowment, by all means. The President of a city bank took out such a one which fell due last year, and in speaking of it to me he said that after figuring up the whole thing he found that it had paid him much better than Government bonds would have done."

"Why are endowment policies preferred?"

"Because they have a specific time for expiring. For instance, the last loan I made was on a policy of this kind. It was a twenty-year policy. Fourteen years had expired, and there were, consequently, but six years more to run, so that I am certain of my money in six years. If the holder fails to pay his premium when due I shall take the policy to the company that issued it and get a paid-up policy for fourteen twentieths of the amount, payable at the expiration of the original policy."

"What margin do you require?"

"Well, I will generally make a loan for ninety per cent. of the face, allowing a margin of ten per cent. I do loan on life policies, but they must be made out payable to the insured, his heirs and assigns, in which case he can assign his interest, but when he makes it out to his wife, as in the case of the gentleman you saw leave here just now, I can do nothing. I have had men come here to make a loan on such a policy, who have been separated from their wives, and when they found out that the policy was worthless to any one else to say they were wild [illegible]

"A number of insurance companies are beginning to make loans on their own policies, which are transferable, and the business in my line is becoming general all over the country, notably in New York. An endowment policy two or three years old, with the premiums paid, is as negotiable as a Government bond and I will loan money on it as readily."—Chicago News.

FIGHTING COCA.

A Movement in New York to Prevent the Indiscriminate Sale of the Drug.

A bill is being prepared by the New York Medical Society for submission to the State Legislature providing for the addition of coca to opium and other drugs forbidden to be sold except on physicians' prescriptions. Cocaine has been generally adopted into medical practice as a local application to produce insensibility, and its success for that purpose has led to a promiscuous and very hurtful use as a swallowed exhilarant. So great has the demand for it become that, in the form of chewing-pastes, it is on sale in most of the drug-stores. These preparations are usually put forward as composed of the green leaves of the coca plant, with a slight impregnation of lime, making just such a cud as that which the Indians of Peru chew to relieve their fatigue and exhaustion. The disastrous effects on the Peruvians is a matter of notoriety, and at times the Spanish rulers of that country have forbidden its cultivation. Many New Yorkers have become victims to the coca habit through substituting the drug for tobacco, opium or alcohol, than either of which the doctors declare it more deadly. Into the discussion of the qualities of cocaine, incidental to the preparation of the bill to regulate the traffic in it, has entered a powerful commercial influence. The various manufacturers of the coca preparations for lay use have fought hard for non-interference, because they see a big business ahead if let alone. They are bound to interpose at Albany against the passage of any law on the subject.—N. Y. Star.

—Residents of the backwoods of Pennsylvania do not relish the appearance of too many hunters in their preserves. Several lumber camps in the northwestern part of the State have been lately burned to prevent their occupation as lodges by hunting parties, and a number of hounds have been poisoned. Deer are unusually plenty.—Philadelphia Times.

THE PHILADELPHIA Weekly Times!

Attractive, Entertaining, Instructive. The Family Journal of America

STORIES OF THE WAR

ILLUSTRATED IN EVERY ISSUE.

A Paper for the Homes of the Land. Sparkling and Original in every Feature.

ON the First of January, 1886, a new departure in every feature of the WEEKLY TIMES will be made. Every number will be liberally illustrated in its War contributions, which have so long been a specialty in its columns, and its stories, which will be greatly enlarged, from the pens of the best writers, and in current History, Biography, Politics, Art, Science, and the leading events of the day.

The time has passed for the weekly journal of the city to fill the place of a newspaper. The daily newspaper from the great centers of news now reaches into every section of the land. Every inland city and every town of importance have their daily newspapers and the local weekly, with the wonderful progress in provincial journalism, meets every want that the daily newspaper fails to supply. The metropolitan weekly of to-day must be much more than a newspaper; it must be a magazine of family reading; it must lead the magazine in popular literature; it must lead it in popular illustration, and it must meet every requirement of the intelligent reader of every class.

Stories of the War!

Will be published in each number from the ablest writers who participated in the bloody drama of civil strife, and each will be profusely illustrated. The most entertaining and instructive stories from the best writers of fiction will appear in each issue, with illustrations.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Works through the blood, regulating, toning and invigorating all the functions of the body.

Ringworm Humor and Salt-Rheum.

RAYNHAM, MASS., Aug. 12, 1879.

C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen— * * * * I have had ringworm humor and salt-rheum so badly that my body was covered with raw sores; so, also, my head and face. I have had any number of doctors in the last seven years, and none of them could cure me. One day my mother was in the city of Taunton, and found one of your cook books, and in reading it I found many people testifying to cures from the use of your Sarsaparilla and Olive Ointment. I felt forced to try it, although I had seen many things advertised that never did me any good. I have now taken two small bottles and one large one of Sarsaparilla, and used three boxes of Ointment. I now call myself cured. Nothing can be seen of the humor but the dim outlines of the sores. I shall take two more bottles, and then the cure will be complete.

I am gratefully yours,
EDGAR F. WHITMAN.

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gents—Please send me by express two bottles HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA and a few Cook Books for distribution. Your preparation has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who has been troubled with sick headache and biliousness for years. She only took one-half teaspoonful at a dose, and has not been so well for five years as now. She found that within a week after taking it she felt very much better, and is now entirely free from those severe headaches. She has not taken any of any account since last spring, and what little she had is lent to do some others some good, and we must have it in the house.

Yours truly,
HOMER B. NASH.

FASHION NOTES.

Various Articles Destined to a Tide of Feminine Favor.

Even Russian blouses are made of jersey webbing.

The homespun suit for men is as popular as for women.

The graceful draped skirt dies slowly, but it is certainly doomed.

Undraped, pleated or gathered skirts grow more and more in favor.

Jackets of all kinds are exceedingly fashionable, both for home and street wear.

A simple throat bow, without ends, is the proper finish for the short bonnet strings of the season.

Owl feather fans, showing the head of the bird flattened at the handle, and the tail expanded for the fan, come among other fancy feather fans.

Bonnets, though very small, are made warmer as the season advances by trimmings of fur and fur plush, and linings of thick, soft satin or surah.

Every importation of hats and bonnets shows increased height in the crowns and also in the trimming, which, to be fashionable, must rise above the apex of the crown.

Feather fans in oblong form, with long ivory, bone, celluloid, or carved wood handles, are coming in vogue for dressy occasions. Several different kinds of feathers compose the fan, and frequently the feathers are made more brilliant than natural by the addition of tinsel and bright dyes.

Jersey waists are more worn than ever, but they now have seams like any other bodice, plastrons, waistcoats, bretelles, collars, cuffs, embroidery and so many accessories of one kind or another that they are really bodices, basques, or jackets, as the case may be, of jersey webbing, trimmed and decorated to resemble anything you choose in the way of a waist.

Kismet, or filagret, is the latest fancy work craze. It is entirely new, and consists of flowers, sprays, leaves and insects in tinsel wire, formed into motifs for applique on plush or velvet or fine heavy satin. These flowers, leaves and insects are not flat, nor in low, but in very high relief in real form. They look as if actually molten of silver, copper and gold, and have all the color shades and softness of flowers combined with the brilliancy of the metal. Roses, fuchsias, buttercups, tube roses, morning glories, fern leaves, dogwood, Virginia creeper and water lilies are reproduced in this kismet, or filagret work. It is destined to a rapid and long tide of feminine favor.—N. Y. Sun.

AURORA BOREALIS.

The Brilliant and Beautiful Display of Light a Storm Warning.

Dr. Christison has observed than an unusually display of aurora borealis was invariably followed on the third day by a storm—a theory which was proved at a most appropriate moment, when the British Association sat at Edinburgh in the year 1834. He applied his observation practically on another occasion as follows: A few years afterward, while visiting in September a Dumfriesshire friend, who farms a portion of his estate as a study and amusement, we were returning late from a dinner party, when we were greeted on the way home by a magnificent aurora. The weather had long been extremely beautiful and favorable for the operations of a rather late harvest. I therefore told my prognostic, relating the previous incident as an illustration of its accuracy. My friend was good enough to say that, as he confided in my observation, he should apply it next morning. Next morning, at breakfast time, the farm steward arrived, as was his wont, for the day's orders. In reply to a question what his people were doing, he said the weather was so fine and steady that he was thinking to take them from the "stocks" to repair a river embankment. "Do no such thing," was the rejoinder; "finish the leading of your corn; there is to be a great storm." "Weel, sir," observed the steward, "I'm sure neither you nor me ever saw a brawer day than this in Nithsdale. "Never mind that," replied his master; "lead your corn and thatch your stacks—you have got all this day to do it. To-morrow you may do what you like; the storm will set in to-morrow forenoon." At breakfast time the next day the steward reappeared for his orders in a most lovely autumn morning, to which he did not fail to call our particular attention. His master was staggered, till I reminded him that Nithsdale storms usually set in not till eleven in the forenoon. At half-past ten the south and south west began to put on an ominous aspect, at eleven he recognized every indication of a serious storm, and it was resolved that we should go to the field and see what the steward thought of the matter now. Before we reached him, drops of rain began to fall, and the atmosphere had a most lowering appearance. The steward looked steadily aside at his workpeople, and was evidently shy of opening the conversation. But when appealed to for his opinion by his master, he said, with great emphasis: "Weel, sir, it's just looking awfu'. But how ye cam to ken o't yesterday morning is mair than I can tell." A great storm and flood ensued, and lasted for two days. This prognostic, Dr. Christison adds, he has never found to fail.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Diseases in Canada.

Blindness in Canada is commonly caused by small-pox, cataract, or injury. Contagious diseases—such as small-pox, measles, and whooping-cough—are more common than in Europe, especially in winter, when fuel is saved at the expense of ventilation. In the whole of Canada the proportion of the insane is one to seven hundred and twenty. Dr. Hingston states in a recent work on "The Climate of Canada" that the mortality commonly diminishes with the temperature, and that the colder parts of the country are in reality the more wholesome.—N. Y Post.

FORGERS.

Their Methods, Intrigues and Stratagems.

"You speak of the forger's skillful ways. What is the general method of their operations or have they any particular system?"

"They have. To track it in brief, it is this: First, as respectable a looking man as they can command will be sent to the house marked for plunder to sell a good bond and get a check for it. In that way the firm's signature is obtained. Then the adroit forger, who always keeps himself in the background goes to work. He makes a lithographic fac-simile of the blank check, practices in the writing of the firm's signature and in the chirography of the filling in on the good check, and then he makes three false checks. One, which is intended to be a feeler, is only for a hundred; a second, to be passed, if the first goes, is for $1,500, or thereabouts; and the third, to follow the others, if they go off safely, will be for say $3,500. Then an agent to pass the final one is selected; somebody who is not known to the police, generally a young man who is just going 'crooked,' and who has the nerve for the task, and he is thoroughly drilled in the part he is to play, and taught just what he is to say. When he goes into the bank where the forged check is to be tried, an accomplice, apparently a stranger to him, enters at the same time, and manages to get right behind him in the line at the cashier's window. The man who passes the check is not trusted to get into the street with the money. If he obtains it, he must instantly drop his hand and slip the notes into the hand of the accomplice behind him, who will when they go away give him his 15 per cent. for passing it. But suppose the cashier hesitates over the check, seeming to suspect it. Then instantly the accomplice reaches over the shoulder of the passer, and, thrusting a good fifty-dollar bill into the cashier's window, asks the favor of change for it. That makes a temporary diversion, under cover of which the passer glides out into the street and escapes. But, suppose that the cashier, the instant after paying out the money, seems to have an intuitive perception that something is wrong, or has his suspicions in some way awakened about the check, and calls out, 'hold on there! wait a moment,' and begins examining the check more attentively. Then it is not the passer who glides out and escapes, but the accomplice, to whom the money has been passed. The passer remains, looking as calm and innocent as possible, to deny everything. The cashier may swear as he will to the payment. He simply denies it; says 'You have paid me nothing; search me, if you like; you are mistaken in the person; perhaps you paid some other person, but certainly not me.' He has not a dollar of the money in his possession, and it is simply a question of veracity between him and the cashier. The chances are that he will escape. They never risk more than three checks on one house at one time, and only one is taken to be cashed at a venture, the others being held by the 'scratcher'—or forger—until trial gives assurance that the forgery is sufficiently good to be successful. The real forger is hard to get at."

How the Algomah Forced a Passage Across the Straits of Mackinaw.

It was a noble chance for a graphic descriptive article—a powerful steamer in mid-straits surrounded by a solid field of ice in thickness varying from one to twenty feet. A black column from the smoke-stack tells of the fierce fires beneath the steamer's boiler and casts a grateful shadow over the painfully white fields. The rapid pulsations of the engine and the lightning-like revolutions of the screw are even felt by those who stand at one side upon the ice. She goes ahead, slowly, but ahead. The ice breads, now like the crack of a pistol, next with sullen sound—crunching, grinding, with stem rising, then falling, she still moves, and the air rings with cheers. Astern great chunks of ice come jumping half out of water, shot fearward by the screw, then glide swiftly down the steamer's wake in waters moving like a mill race. The boat's stem rises, and progress becomes slower, slower, stops. The Algomah is stalled, half poised in air; forward men with pick, with axe and pike. Ring bells to reverse engine. The rapid blows of Foreman Madden's crew, the rushing current sent forward by the wheel count fast and imperceptibly she moves, she moves astern. Hurrah!—drills and dynamite ahead. All hands away. The blast! the blast! There she goes, dull and heavy. The gorge trembles; showers of ice rise in air, great seams open, rent by the mighty explosive—but see! the Algomah, back there, is already under way. "She's wide open, boys," cried Capt. Ames from in front the pilot house, the first words out of him in hours. With gathering speed the gallant boat springs forward and fairly leaps upon the gorge, while scores stand breathless. Will she go through or stick? The ice melts before her front. She rises, falls, rolls, grinds, smashes. Hurrah! she's through! Capt. Ames turns to First Officer McCarty with "She's a dandy, John!" "Aye, aye, sir," assents the mate, looking at the sun disappearing over the western headland.

A Timely Warning.

New York Letter.

A startling bit of private news has just reached me, and I want the whole American people to get it as soon as possible. It is this. The plumbers of the United States, from Maine all the way to California, are insidiously engaged at the present moment in getting up a national organization. You remember the thrill that passed down the backbone of the great republic when the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter. What sort of national calamity was that in comparison with the one now threatened? The entire American people absolutely at the mercy of a gigantic combination of plumbers? Who would talk about railroad monopolies, or any other kind of monopolies, with the terrible possibility of universal bankruptcy hanging over our heads? The project originated here in New York, where the "master plumbers" organized an association a couple of years ago, and I am told it is going straight ahead. All the plumbers of the country, my informant (himself a leading conspirator) says, will soon be combined in a general association. You may possibly have noticed that the number of failures in New York during the past year was very large. It may not have occurred to you, however, to connect them with the Association of Master Plumbers. When a great public danger arises the people should be notified as quickly as possible. I sound the warning and my duty is done.

Political Luck and Palaces.

Washington Cor. Boston Transcript.

A correspondent, who has evidently sold real estate short, seeks to discourage the construction of palaces in Washington by the statement that the men who build them never have any political luck afterward. Senator Windom, ex-Senator Blaine and Mr. Robeson are given as frightful examples of the wilting, ruinous example of expensive house building, and Senator Pendleton is warned that he, too, is doomed to political decay by the same token. It is remembered, however, that Gen. Butler builded him a palace in Washington, and he cannot be enumerated in the list of political cadavers at this writing.

Georgia Major.

There was an alarm of fire turned in from an Atlanta artist's studio Wednesday morning, but by the time the department got there the conflagration had been subdued.

"What was it afire?" asked Chief Ryan.

"Col. Bumgardner's portrait!"

"How did it catch?"

"I had it nearly all finished—all except the nose—and when I laid the the proper color on it she blazed up like a political bonefire!"

"And what put him out?"

"Water! water will put the colonel out at any time!"

Discretion.

When he gets a letter for his wife out of the postoffice and he forgets to give it to her for a week or so, the safest way of letting her have it is to tie it on the end of a long fishing-pole and poke it through a window to her.

A distinguished scholar and writer recently said: "I flounder in a sea of scraps." In these days, when the papers contain so many fine sentiments, beautiful descriptions, touching incidents, items of importance, and matters of permanent interest, culled from all departments of life, there is scarcely a day in which something does not strike the eye which the reader wishes to preserve, in order to remember and perhaps to use. One of the first things a bright boy or girl should make is a scrap-book of things which interest most. If you have no book, put your selections in different envelopes, according to subjects. The newspaper is a circulating library, with little of everything in it, and a little for everybody. Make sure of your part of it as you read.

Those who believe that nature will work off a cough or cold should understand that this is done at the expense of the constitution. Each time this weakens the system, and we all know that the termination of this dangerous practice is a consumptive's grave. Don't take the chances, when a fifty cent bottle of Dr. Bigelow's Postive Cure will safely and promptly cure any recent cough, cold or throat or lung trouble. Buy the dollar bottle of George Ferguson for chronic cases or family use.

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book club or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and china may be bought, but books must be hired for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that "the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time." Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

O'DONNELL'S DOUBLE.

The Detroit Evening Journal of recent date contains the following from its Washington correspondent:

There is a remarkable resemblance between Congressman O'Donnell, of Jackson, and 1st. As't. Postmaster General Stevenson. Soon after O'Donnell's arrival here he was introduced to Mr. Carleton. That same night Carleton and Tarsney were seated in the Ebbitt house when Carleton said: "There is Stevenson; I want to speak to him for a moment."

He walked up to O'Donnell and began talking to him about a postoffice in his district.

"I have no personal feelings in the matter,' said Mr. O'Donnell, 'and if you will present your man's name and papers to me at the office I think you can be accommodated."

Just then Tarsney laughed out loud, and Carlton discovered that he had mistaken one of his colleagues for the caliph of the postoffice department. Still later in the evening the two democrats stole down to the National hotel.

"By George!" said Tarsney, "there goes O'Donnell, I want to speak to him a moment." He went up to the supposed O'Donnell and began talking to him of the joke on Carleton, when he discovered that it was Stevenson whom he was addressing. The Michigan delegation will take supper with Messrs. Carleton and Tarsney as soon as the bill of fare is arranged.

A Woman's Triumph.

The initial volume of ANDREWS' NUTSHELLS" is received from the publishers, A. H. ANDREWS & Co., CHICAGO, whose valuable LOOK WITHIN we recently took occasion to notice. This book is entitled A WOMAN'S TRIUMPH. It is a true story of western life, the scene being first laid in Illinois, then in the Wisconsin pineries, and lastly in the orange groves of California. The story is most interestingly told, and takes such a strong hold on the reader that he will not lay the book down till he has read it through. It is published in the prettiest form for a cheap book we have ever seen. It is printed on heavy antique paper with wide margins, has two covers, the main one a pretty shade of heavy antique cover paper, and the outer wrapping being a thin cover to protect the inner one from soiling. On both covers is a pretty design of a squirrel feasting upon a choice nut he has just gathered in his rambles. If the present issue is an earnest of this series of "nutshells" those who crack them will find the meat most relishable. The price is 25 cents; for which sum in stamps it will be sent post-paid by the publishers if not found at the bookstores.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1, 1886.

As usual the New Year was ushered in here with a grand reception at the Executive Mansion. The official world of Washington rolled out in its carriages en masse and shook the President's hand. Just before a presidential inauguration or New Year's reception, the weather, that always interesting subject, becomes an absorbing question of speculation here. The Signal Service Bureau was frequently interviewed yesterday to learn whether the old year would leave us with sunshine or storm. Blue skies favored the event of to-day however, and there was nothing to mar the success of Mr. Cleveland's first New Year's reception.

The Marine band was there as usual and discoursed fine music from the main ante-room, while the callers passed in and out. The newspaper correspondents were promptly on hand also and some few drivers of the fair sex were dissatisfied with their accommodations, and wanted vantage ground in the Blue Room where they could more accurately note the dresses and laces and diamonds.

A few minutes before 11 A. M. the band commenced playing "Hail to the Chief," and the president with Miss Cleveland and the ladies of the Cabinet took their position in the Blue Room. Only the Cabinet ladies, neither the speaker's wife, Mrs. Carlisle, nor Mrs. Sherman, the wife of the president of the Senate, were of the receiving party. Mr. Cleveland wore a Prince Albert coat, dark necktie and white kid gloves.

The Cabinet officers came first on the program to greet the Executive and his assistant receivers. Next came the representatives of foreign countries in their showy attire of velvet, gold, lace, sashes, stars, crosses and other insignia of rank. England, France, Germany, Spain, Russia, Japan and China were conspicuously represented by bedizzined diplomats, while some of the South American Republics came in Democratic attire, meaning the customary evening dress of American gentlemen.

The reception of the Supreme Court and the various courts of the District of Columbia, Senators and members of the lower House, military and naval officers followed close. Each division of the procession defiled into the East Room as it passed the President. The diplomatic corps remained there until it was reinforced by the gilt epauletted officers of the Army and Navy, and the scene became exceedingly gay, animated, varigated, brilliant, picturesque, statuesque, &c. For once the gentlemen outshone the the ladies in "splendor of attire, and that is saying much, for the ladies of the foreign legations reflected every tint of the rainbow.

When all the dignitaries and officials in Washington had grasped the President's hand and passed on into the East Room and gradually out to their carriages again, the people's reception began. For an hour another varied scene was presented, of gray headed men and women, young people, children, and middle aged, black and white, rich and poor.

The President bore his fatiguing task patiently and cheerfully, and remarked in reply to some expression of sympathy from a friend that this was one of his easiest duties. He looked each caller in the eye, and to each greeting gave a "Thank you," or "I am pleased to see you."

Secretary Bayard gave the usual diplomatic breakfast to the Diplomat. Corps after leaving the President's reception, and his rather small house on Highland Place was taxed to its utmost to accommodate these foreign gentlemen, as there is quite a number of them now in Washington. The Diplomats continued in full court dress at this breakfast given in their honor, and after that assumed frock coats for general calls.

The cabinet ladies repaired to their homes after the White House ceremonies and held their own New Year's receptions assisted by lady friends.—For some years the leaders of society here have discouraged the use of liquor as a feature of New Year's hospitality. The ladies of the new administration also agreed not to begin the New Year by keeping an open bar for their gentlemen callers.

Gen. Beauregard will give a history of the Shiloh Campaign in the January number of the North American Review. He claims that Gen. Algerson Sydney Johnson acted only as a corps commander at Shiloh. Gen. Beauregard emphatically asserts (contrary to the general belief) that he was the sole commander on both days, and, without naming them, controverts the reports of Grant and Sherman as to the nation's forces being taken by surprise.

Canon Farrar has an article on the Church in America in the January number of the North American Review.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

Mr. A. VanValkenburg entertained the Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club, Dec. 30th. The members of the club are not afraid of dark nights or muddy roads, so there was a good turn out. The selections for the literary program were good and well rendered, after which the ladies withdrew to another room to consider subjects of more interest to them than the one under discussion per club. Not having heard their conversation I cannot report it, but am confident from its source that it was interesting and profitable.

The gentlemen then took up the question, "What kind of grass is most desirable to raise on our farms?"

Mr. W. S. Osborn in opening the question said: I prefer clover, as you can get two crops a year; a crop of hay and then a crop of seed or cut it a second time for hay, which we cannot do with Timothy and that it leaves the land richer and it works easier, while a crop of Timothy is as hard on the land as a crop of wheat. I prefer a little timothy in the clover, but would not sow over two quarts per acre, in the spring; if sown in the fall it is apt to hurt the wheat. I think cut worms cut the corn more on timothy than clover sod. I know of a farmer in this town that seeded with clear timothy till he can not get more than half as much of any kind of crop as his neighbors.

President Hurry: I have been in the habit of sowing timothy in the fall with my wheat and find it a good plan. I think a timothy sod preferable to June grass, which we would have on clay soil if the clover killed out.

Mr. H. Wilson: I do not believe in sowing any timothy, it exhausts the soil too much. When the clover kills out, plow it up. I think that a crop of clover improves the soil and that it leaves the land in better condition, than timothy, especially for corn. Raise the big kind of clover, put it in the barn quite green, but it comes out in good condition and the stock eat it up clean and do better than they would do on timothy. I think that timothy sowed with the wheat will hurt the wheat; have known it to reduce the crop five bushels per acre.

James Updyke Jr.: I planted timothy sod that had laid three years and had over 100 bushels per acre. Do not believe that the worms cut the corn any more than on clover sod. I think it all bosh about timothy killing out clover; but if the clover kills out the timothy will take its place, and for pasture prefer mixed grasses.

Mr. H. Hoeg asked had anyone tried any other kinds of grass.

Geo. Swarts: I sowed a field with Alsike clover and find it preferable to the other kinds of clover. Had 21 loads on nine acres and think it went 2½ tons per acre, and I prefer it for pasture.

(No other member had any success with any thing but the old kinds.)

A Van Valkenburg: I seed with 2 quarts of timothy in the fall with the wheat and sow clover in the spring on the up-lands, clear timothy on the muck. I do not think that timothy injures the land, but that part timothy makes better hay. The clover grows large and coarse on the muck and it is hard work to cure it. I think that if the wheat is weak the fall sowed timothy will hurt it some.

Mr. Chas. Mathews: I cannot agree with Messrs. Osborn and Wilson that timothy will injure wheat; think that if the wheat grows good and does not winter kill, the wheat will keep the timothy back; but if the wheat winter kills, the timothy will come on and you will have something besides seeds. I prefer part timothy for hay and think we are more certain of a good crop of hay.

S. Mangus: I find that clear clover grows so large that it is hard work to cure it, but do not have any trouble with part timothy and it makes better hay. I think to get the most benefit from clover we should cut a crop of hay and one of seed, then plow it up. I do not think one can get much pasture from a timothy meadow after a crop of hay.

B. Hurry Esq.: I have known men that pastured their timothy meadows all winter when the snow was not too deep, but I think that we all pasture our meadow too much after haying. We should have some grass as a protection to the roots. Clover is not likely to winter kill with some protection as when the roots are bare.

During intermission Mrs. Van Valkenburg treated the club with taffy candy, which was duly appreciated by all. The committee on program reported the following for next meeting to be held at H. Hoag's, Jan 13, 1886.

All male persons of the age of 18 years and upwards, especially those who have been in the habit of using intoxicating liquors to greater or less extent, are eligible to membership in the League. A cordial invitation is extended to all to meet with us and commence the new year by turning a new leaf and giving a helping hand in this work of reform.

BY ORDER COM.

The last number of the Deerfield Star says: "The fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Van Antwerp, of Tecumseh, was celebrated at the residence of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Cannon on Wednesday evening, Dec. 23. Between fifty and sixty guests were present, and the occasion was highly enjoyed by all. Below we give a list of presents received by the happy couple." Here follows a long list of the presents given. Among the donors we notice the names of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. VanAntwerp and Mr. and Mrs. John Orr, of Tecumseh. Parties were also present from Adrian and Clinton. It was one of the pleasantest social events that Deerfield has lately witnessed.

Mrs. J. W. Brown and Lulu, and Mrs. Alva Waring and family left for Wilburn, Ford Co., Kansas, Tuesday afternoon. Messrs. Brown and Waring went about a month ago. We are sorry to lose two good families from our midst.

The Salvation army having failed to make any impression on Tecumseh, Joe Sage, of Macon, is making a vigorous effort to save the people with his patent weather strip, and the fact is Joe seems to be succeeding pretty well.

Don't forget the Farmer's Social Club at I. H. Schreder's next week.—The question to be discussed will have a little added, and will be this: "Resolved, That our taxes are becoming burdensome. What are the causes? What is the remedy?"

A party of young folks to the number af 20 took D. P. Anthony's residence by storm last Thursday night, surprising the young ladies of the house. The time was pleasantly spent until the new year rolled in and warned them to go home and "swear off."

Lyman Thorpe started yesterday for a trip through the western states selling his patent corer. He will travel during the cold weather in Missouri and Kansas and as spring approaches go farther north. He expects to be gone from home several months this trip.

The Michigan Flooring and Handle Manufacturing Co., of Summit City, Mich., met Jan. 5th, at Tecumseh.—The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—H. L. Stewart.
Secretary—A. W. Slayton.
Treasurer.—John Gilchrist.
Supt.—M. Bowerman.

A. H. Ford, of Ionia, spent New Year's with his parents and friends in this village. His wife came with him and their visit was prolonged two or three days. Mr. Ford is building up a large and lucrative business in his present location. His old Tecumseh friends are glad to note his prosperity.

Dr. W. E. Burtless, of St. Clair, was in town last Tuesday to attend the celebration of the 77th birthday of Dr. Hamilton. As Dr. Burtless is an old Tecumseh boy, his many old friends will be glad to hear that he is very pleasantly situated in St. Clair; and enjoying a very lucrative practice.

A large crowd gathered at the rink New Year's night to see the mile race between Mont. Rowland, of Tecumseh, and Wm. Nisley, of Manchester. The two boys were about evenly matched, but Mont. succeeded in "downing" his opponent by about one lap. The time made was four and one-half minutes.

It affords us more than ordinary pleasure to note the steady increase in the HERALD subscription list. During the five weeks, from Nov. 30th to Jan. 2nd, last past, the HERALD lost fewer names and added more new subscribers than in any previous year—reckoning the same period of time—since we bought the paper in November, 1874. It shall be our earnest endeavor to merit the continued good will of our many new subscribers.

Miss Lena Sizer, of Adrian, is visiting at A. Vedder's.

W. & S. W. Anderson & Co. have a new card in to-day's paper.

Don't forget the pew renting and chicked-pie supper at the Baptist church, Tuesday Jan. 12.

C. T. Chapin, formerly of Tecumseh, has become interested in a new paper called the Express at Cadillac.

Thursday evening, Jan. 21, a grand masquerade will be given at the rink. Suitable prizes will be given and a big time is expected. J. C. Richardson, of Adrian, will furnish costumes for all who wish them, and he will be in town that day.

The annual pew renting of the Baptist church of Tecumseh, will take place on Tuesday Jan. 12, 1886, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M. continuing during the afternoon and evening. The ladies will serve a chicken-pie supper commencing at 4 o'clock continuing during the evening. Price of supper, 25cts.

C. A. Slayton entertained a large number of relatives and friends on New Year's day to a sumptuous dinner, and a most happy afternoon was enjoyed by all present. Among the guests present from abroad were—C. M. Cone, Jos. Laing, Abram Grant and wife, Stephen Hoag and wife, Wesley Willitt wife and son, Mrs. Stephen Angell son and daughter, C. T. Lord and wife, Mr. Tilton Penn, wife and children, Miss Angie Cone and Miss Emma Laing, of Adrian, Miss Eva Moultrop, of Toledo, and B. I. Laing, wife and daughter of Lenawee Junction.

THE MASONIC FESTIVAL.

The festival given by the Masonic Lodge at their capacious rooms on New Year's eve was a decided success. From the proceeds of the excursion given last summer the committee had purchased table, dishes, a cook stove etc., and the members responded liberally to the call for provisions.

The meeting was called to order by the master Dr. E. M. Conklin, and prayer by Rev. J. M. Getchell. A piece of vocal music followed sang by Dr. House, C. F. Field, Mrs. Gage and Mrs. Hale, with Miss Gowdy at the organ. The music was finely rendered. Rev. T. G. Potter followed in a few remarks upon the objects of masonry, and who are Masons. Supper was then announced. Between the first and second tables Abner Wilson proposed the toast—"Our mother's, wives, sister's and sweethearts," which was responded to by Rev. Getchell in a few appropriate remarks. The second table was then announced and the remainder of the company partook of refreshments. The balance of the evening was pleasantly passed with vocal and instrumental music and in social intercourse.

The committee of arrangements, which was printed last week, is entitled to great credit for the admirable manner in which the entire entertainment was carried out.

DEATH OF CAPT. CROWELL.

On Thursday of last week, Supervisor Bresie received a telegram from Glenville, O., announcing the sudden death of his son-in-law, Capt. John Crowell. The deceased was a member of the Cuyahoga Co. bar, was mayor of Glenville and was one of the most highly esteemed citizens of that county. Mr. Bresie took the first train for Cleveland and remained there until after the funeral services, returning on Tuesday last.

On Saturday the Cleveland bar held a meeting and passed resolutions of respect to his memory, and the Loyal Legion, of which he was a member, passed similar resolutions.

The funeral services were held on Sunday and the following notice thereof is taken from the Cleveland Leader:

With tender hands and sad hearts members of Loyal Legion and Memorial Post, G. A. R., laid away the body of their late comrade, Capt John Crowell, the Mayor of Glenville, yesterday afternoon. The funeral services were held at the family homestead in Glenville. The house was well filled with mourning friends, members of the Cleveland Bar Association, and the Loyal Legion, while the lawn was filled with war veterans and friends of the deceased, who stood in the rain during the services. The casket rested on pillars in the middle of the east parlor, and was covered with wreaths, crosses and other floral tributes of immortelles, calla lilies and roses. Among the flower pieces were a pillow from the Grand Army, a pillow from the Loyal Legion, and a harp from the clerks, in M. D. & L. L. Legget's office. Seated in the same room were General James Barnett, Commander of the Loyal Legion, General M. D. Leggett, with whom Capt. Crowell was formerly associated in business, Mr. H. C. Ramey, and members of the Bar Association. In the adjoining room were the family and near relatives of the deceased. Rev. Mr. Lyle read the burial services of the Episcopal Church, after which those present took the last earthly view of their departed friend. The pall bearers, Hon. John C. Hutchins, Mr. H. C. Hutchins, Mr. Frederick Kinsman, Mr. Walter Shumway, Mr. Wm. James, and Mr. Povaurde, then took up the casket, and followed by the mourning family passed from the house to the hearse, through the double column of veterans that had been formed from the door to the gate. The funeral cortege then formed and marched to Lake View Cemetery, where the remains were placed in the vault of Mrs. Henry Clark.

THE NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.

The Board Decide to Erect a $4,600 One which Will be an Ornament to the Village.

The adjourned school meeting to consider the advisability of erecting a new school building where the west branch school is now located, was called for last Monday night, at the Central school building, and drew a small number of the tax-payers of the village, who were interested in providing a suitable place for their children to learn "reading, riting and rithmetic," and a very profitable meeting was had. That Tecumseh is to have a new school house is an established fact, and that it will be a [illegible]

The plans for the new building, which were furnished by A. C. Varney of Detroit, hung on the wall, showing the different rooms and sides, and every one was invited to examine them.

About eight o'clock the meeting was called to order by Moderator A. W. Mills, after which the minutes of the last meeting were read by the Director, L. G. North. The chairman of the building committee, David McNair, was called to the floor, and proceeded to explain the plans. The building will be one story in height, and a basement, built of brick with a slate roof, with two recitation-rooms and a large hall in front, all on the ground floor, facing the south. The size of the rooms will be 30x35 feet and the hall 14x30 feet. The use of pillars in the large rooms will be avoided, and they each will have 56 single folding seats, and be heated by furnace, and have all the modern appliances for good ventilation. The basement will be built of good cut stone penciled, and be four feet above the grade line. The walls will be of brick and made hollow except around the openings, with three windows on the west side, two on the north, three on the east, and two on the south. In conclusion Mr. McNair stated that the building alone would cost about $3,500, and furnished and ready for use about $4,400.

Mr. O. P. Bills moved for a recess of fifteen minutes, which motion was carried.

At the close of the recess Mr. Mills stated that he found that some objected to the idea of having both rooms on the ground floor, as the cost would not be so much if one room was above the other. He stated that the tendency of the times was toward one story school buildings, as it saved the children the trouble of running up and down stairs, and thereby that which is most important for the success of a child's education—health—is benefited. He had seen plans in Detroit for a school building containing six rooms, all on the ground.

The following resolution was then offered by S. W. Anderson which after some discussion was adopted.

Resolved, That the report and recommendation of the Board of Trustees be accepted and adopted, and that said board be authorized to secure the erection and completion of a building as they recommend; Provided, that said board shall be authorized to make such slight changes as in their judgement may seem best; Provided, also, that the entire cost, including warming, seating and furnishing shall not exceed $4,800.

Dr. House then offered the following resolution, in regard to the raising of the money, which was also adopted.

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees be, and is hereby authorized to borrow in behalf of the district, at lowest obtainable rate of interest, not to exceed thirty-eight hundred dollars, to be used in payment for the construction of such building as this meeting has authorized them to build, the same to be due and payable as follows: Sixteen hundred dollars on the 1st. day of February 1887 and the balance, twenty-two hundred dollars on the first day of February, 1888.

A BIRTHDAY FESTIVAL.

The residence of Dr. Hamilton on Chicago street was filled to overflowing last Tuesday, to celebrate a very important event in the life of the doctor. It being his 77th birthday, Mrs. Hamilton had invited a large number of their old friends and relatives to join in making the event one long to be remembered. The time was pleasantly spent in interchange of reminscences and conversation, and last but not least, in discussing a dinner that reminded the guests that the doctors services would be needed if they satisfied their appetite for the good things.

Among those present from abroad were Dr. Peters of Blissfield, W. S. Wilcox and wife of Adrian, F. R. Stebbins and wife of Adrian, J. S. Holmes and wife of Adrian, Mrs. Col. Saviers of St. Louis and Dr. W. E. Burtless of St. Clair. Telegrams of regret and congratulations were received from a large number of friends and members of the medical profession, and the day will be remembered as one very pleasantly spent by the venerable Doctor and his wife.

We have received a copy of Vol. 1, No. 1 of the Kerr City, Fla., Advertiser. It contains some business ads which will be recognized here. J. B. Swan is proprietor of the Lake Kerr House, S. L. Satterthwaite & Co., run the one price cash store, Swan & Henley run the Lake Kerr nurseries.

THE G. A. R. INSTALLATION.

The newly elected officers of Beer's Post G. A. R. were duly installed last Friday evening in the new Post quarters over Spark's store. The hall was well filled with members of the order and their invited guests. The audience was called to order by Commander Perry Hosmer, who introduced C. G. Hampton, Assistant Inspector Gen. of Detroit, who acted as installing officer. The following list of officers elected were then installed in due form:

P. C.—A. W. Mills.
S. V. C.—Chas. Davis.
J. V. C.—Elwin Camburn.
Q. D.—Levi Thompson.
Q. M.—Geo. VanTyne.
Chap.—Charles McNeil.
Surgeon—Alex. Turner.
Adj.—S. P. Hosmer.
S. M.—Geo. W. Marsden.
Q. M. S.—Wm. Jay.

Gen. Packard of LaPorte, Ind., was then introduced and addressed the assemblage in a few soul stirring words. Mrs. Lucy A. Beers, relict of Lt. Beers, whose name the Post has taken, being present, the honors of the Post were duly extended to her.

The order was given to fall in for supper which was obeyed with alacrity.

After refreshments the company returned to the Post room, when a few toasts were given. "The Women of the War" was responded to by Rev. J. M. Getchell. Mr. Hampton spoke in very flattering terms of this response. "The Grand Army of the Republic" was responded to by Mr. Hampton of Detroit. His talk was very warmly received.

The comrades then rallied to the front of the hall and united in singing a few of the old war songs, after which the meeting adjourned. Many visiting Comrades were present from Addison and other places, all of whom acknowledged themselves to have been royally entertained.

I. O. O. F. INSTALLATION.

The Odd Fellows Lodge held a public installation last Tuesday evening. The hall was well filled with members of the order and visitors. Promptly at 7:30 the N. G., Mr. J. W. Wooden rapped the Lodge to order and the opening ode was sung. Miss Jennie Root presided at the organ and Mrs. Gage led in the singing. Prayer followed by Rev J. M. Getchell.

The ceremony of installation was then proceeded with under direction of Dist. Deputy, C. E. Williamson, acting as installing officer. The Grand Officers were admitted in due form and assumed the chairs. The officers elect were then admitted and as they marched around the room the installation ode was sung.

The following officers elected and appointed were duly installed:

N. G.—Eugene Hodges.
V. G.—Rev. J. M. Getchell.
Sec.—Thos. Cummins.
Treas.—C. E. Williamson.
W.—John Hibbard.
C.—Wm. Smallidge.
I. G.—Geo. Hanford.
O. G.—Wm. Gray.
R. S. N. G.—A. L. Chapman.
L. S. N. G.—Geo. Williamson.
R. S. V. G.—F. S. Wilson.
L. S. V. G.—F. Herning.
R. S. S.—E. Herning.
L. S. S.—John J. Orr.

The closing Ode followed.

At the close of the installation ceremony, the Dist. Dep'ty called upon Rev. Getchell for a few remarks. He responded briefly with well chosen words which were earnestly spoken and heartily endorsed. Supper was then served to the brothers and invited guests in the Montague vacant store. Over one hundred partook of refreshments which closed the exercises of the evening. The committee in charge of the Festival consisted of C. E. Williamson, E. A. Hodges and Wm. Gray. They called other brothers for such assistance as was needed, but they were responsible for the smoothness and success with which the entire entertainment was carried out.

DEEP SEA TRAWLERS.

Twelve Thousand People Who Are Without Churches, Chapels or Libraries.

Crossing the North Sea in fine steamers plying to Rotterdam, Hamburg, or the Baltic ports, some readers may have had their interest awakened and their curiosity aroused while passing through fleets of little vessels, whose white and brown sails sparkling in the sun seemed in the distance like the wings of seafowl, but on nearer views were resolved into light, handy smacks, apparently innumerable, dancing on billows for miles around, and dotting the horizon far as eye could reach. What are these vessels? A trawling fleet.

Perhaps some one may have asked, where do all the fish come from? A few years ago the answer might have been from the coasts; and a description of a fisherman, generally accepted, would have been one who goes forth at sunset, or sunrise, as the case may be, and returns the next day, to be welcomed by his anxious wife and smiling bairns. Very pretty, and very true of the coasters, but by no means applicable to deep sea smacksmen. Their lot is cast in different places—their fishing grounds lie far off in the North Sea, where they toil, summer and winter, all the year round, with only a few days break occasionally, when they run home to refit. Out on the North Sea there are of course neither churches nor chapels, reading rooms nor libraries—neither clergyman nor minister ever comes round that way; the Scripture reader and the missionary find it too far off. So far as ordinary means are concerned, the deep sea fisherman, our own flesh and blood, hailing from our own shores, working within a hundred miles or so of our coasts, toiling on our behalf, trawling the fish that come to our markets and tables, might as well be cruising in the Caribbean seas. Year in, year out, it is drudgery and toil unceasing, without any of those privileges and joys which raise our hopes and ennoble our souls. The Gospel is to them an unfamiliar sound. True, in boyhood they may have heard of such things; but far off in the North Sea, beyond the reach of pulpit or press, cast in the company of those who knew not and care not for such things, they soon catch the prevalent tone and go with the rest. Bygone lessons are forgotten in present isolation, and they are apt to sink to the general level. As a rule, singularly sharp and intelligent in their own line, and in many ways attractive in their fine, frank, fearless style, but neglected or forgotten, it is little wonder they have let slip teachings and truths. These deep sea fishermen are not a small and numerically insignificant body. There are over twelve thousand of them cruising in the North Sea.—Quiver.

FAGGING AT RUGBY.

A System of Abuse Practiced Upon Young Scholars.

A very important custom in which new-comers have to be instructed is that of fagging. They are purposely allowed a fortnight's grace that they may carefully study the duties exacted of them. It is with fagging as with foot-ball and hare-and-hounds. Its greatest days are past. Think of a boy having to warm three or four beds on a cold night by lying in them until the heat of his body has destroyed their chill, and then having to rise at four o'clock in the morning to run two miles to the Avon to attend to the fishing-lines of the sixth-form boys, and then to be back in time for first lesson! Fancy his being obliged to form one of a team of four or twelve in harness, to be raced around the school-yard, or "close," by the præpostors of the Four-in-hand Club, and compelled to make flower-beds for the same mighty beings, having half a pewter spoon and a whole fork for his only garden tools, and the flowers to be supplied by fair means or foul! Yet these were a few of the services expected of fags in the days when "there were giants in the land," as a Rugby song says. Now they are treated with much more leniency. Only the sixth-form boys are allowed to have fags. The younger boys must wait on them at breakfast, tea and supper; run their errands to the nearest pastry-cook shop, clean out their studies, attend to their wants in the dormitories, and sometimes "field" for them at cricket. As in several other public schools, when the sixth-form boy or præpostor wants anything, he calls out "F-a-a-g!" in answer to which call all the fagging boys must run, the last to arrive having to do the work. It is but for a short time, fortunately, that fagging is really a serious and perhaps tiresome duty. For the rule is that during a boy's first term, he must run at the first call; during his second, he need only answer the second, and so on; so at the end of his second school year he has comparatively little to do as a fag.—Elizabeth Robins Pennell, in St. Nicholas.

SELECTION OF LAND.

Geology a Unreliable Guide to the Nature of Soil.

In choosing land for agricultural purposes it is very unsafe for the farmer to be guided by any loose notions of the geological features of the locality. Geology in this respect and for this use is one of those things of which a little knowledge is dangerous. There are few places where the overlying soil has been derived from the breaking down of the underlying and outcropping rocks, and these can only be detected by an expert geologist and mineralogist. Generally the soil is made up of drifted materials, which have been brought from distant places by the force of great floods of water or vast bodies of ice, and have been spread over the surface and moved back and forth in much the same manner, but to a much smaller extent, as we see them now. It is only where the rocks lie near the surface and in the most ancient geological formations, as in Northern Michigan, Eastern Canada, and all along the Alleghany ranges, as far south as Alabama, that this primitive condition of the soil exists. Elsewhere the character of the rocks of the neighborhood can not be safely taken as a guide to the nature of the soil.—N. Y. Times.

FAMOUS SPENDTHRIFTS.

Tiberius' Boats of Cedar, Covered With Gold and Precious Stones.

The ancients more than equaled the modern in their ingeniously profuse ness of expenditure. A history of the spendthrifts of ancient Rome alone would fill a good-sized volume and be of unique variety. Apicius, Crassus, Probus, Claudius, Nero, Vitellius and Caligula all squandered vast sums on most trifling objects. Apicius spent nearly a million pounds on his palate, and then casting up his accounts and discovering that he had not quite one hundred thousand pounds left, immediately hanged himself to avoid the privations of threatening poverty.

Elagabalus regaled the attendants of his palace on the brains of pheasants, the tongues of thrushes and the eggs of partridges. At his own meals the peas were sprinkled with grains of gold, pearls were scattered in dishes of rice, and the costliest amber was used to render palatable a dish of beans.

Crassus made a great feast for the populace during his candidacy for the office of Consul, at which ten thousand tables were heaped with luxuries. Even this was surpassed by Cæsar, who, at the funeral feast on the occasion of his daughter's death, spread seventy-two thousand tables, accommodating three guests at each.

Tiberius, like Cleopatra, gulped down precious stones, crushed and mixed in wine; and he heaped the plates of favorite guests with gold and jewels for them to carry away. It was Tiberius, too, who caused to be built boats of cedar, covered with gold and precious stones, and large enough to admit of their being turned into floating gardens, in which were planted flowers, vines, and fruit trees. No scene from the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments" could have equaled this in splendor.

But it is to Nero that the prize for senseless prodigality must be awarded. In the simple recreation of fishing he used lines of purple silk and hooks of gold. His tiara was estimated to be worth five hundred thousand pounds, and he never wore the same costume twice. When on a progress through his dominions five hundred asses followed in his trail to supply milk for his daily bath. Had Elwes, the famous miser, who performed his ablutions in a convenient nook and dried himself with sand to save the expense of soap and towels, been a spectator to this reckless extravagance, he would, in all probability, have gone clean out of his mind.—Saturday Review.

THE JEZREELITES.

Ceremonies of a Strange Society of Religious Cranks.

A writer in the Chatham and Rochester Observer, England, describing the secret rites of "the Jezreelites," or the members of "the New and Latter House of Israel"—a strange religious sect which has gathered at New Brompton, Kent—says that among the ceremonies carried on with closed doors, and to which only the initiated are admitted, is that of "washing the feet of the saints"—a duty which is performed by the women. A sword and a bunch of keys, representing Peter's keys, are introduced into the service as mystic symbols, the Scriptures are interpreted in the light of the "Divine Roll," and hymns are sung of a lewd character. The terms of membership are based on strictly commercial principles. A candidate for admission into the faith must undergo a probationary course of six months. At the expiration of this period he is required to write out a full account of his or her past life, omitting nothing. Thus having passed the "second sword," the tenth part of his worldly income is to be given to the "common fund," and should he possess a pension or property the same is to be yielded to "the Church." Insubordination on the part of the members is a punishable offense. The adult members are chastened in various ways. In one instance an aged couple, for a month or more, were placed upon a diet consisting of biscuits and unleavened bread (six ounces for two) and water for breakfast; boiled peas or beans or dough dumpling and maize for dinner, no milk, salt or pepper being allowed. Another and perhaps milder form of punishment is being denied the privilege of eating at the same table with "the Messenger of the Lord," or Queen Esther. The juvenile offenders are attired in red coats, with the letter P written on their backs as a symbol of punishment.

A NEW STIMULANT.

Catchax Root the Latest Poison Used by Weak Mortals.

"Do you see that pale, emaciated young man leaning in a half-dazed condition against the lamp-post over there?" said a prominent physician to a reporter, in answer to the inquiry, "Anything new?"

"Why, yes; he seems to be recovering from a prolonged spree. Is he much addicted to it?"

"Nothing of the kind. I doubt if he ever touched a drop in his life. He is a catchax-root eater."

"A what?"

"Why, an eater of the root of the catchax, a small shrub that grows on the table-lands of Mexico, and is found nowhere else. It is a species of opium, and almost unknown, at least to the medical profession, until a short time ago. It is a deadly poison, and prolonged indulgence is certain extermination. The effects are something like that of an opiate, except that it is by far more powerful, half a grain being sufficient to cast one into a sleep that bears the closest resemblance to death. A pallor spreads over the features, and the heart beats almost imperceptibly. The limbs grow stiff and cold, and the whole body assumes the appearance of a corpse. It beats cigarette-smoking, don't you think?"—Philadelphia Patriot.

—Mrs. Rhoda Howard, who died recently in Kentucky at the age of one hundred and sixteen, called for her pipe just previous to her death and smoked with evident relish. She contracted the fatal habit when she was twenty-five years of age.—N. Y. Journal.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. "H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it cures readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 10 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

BIG THINGS.

Some of the Greatest and Most Remarkable Things on Earth.

The greatest wall in the world is the Chinese wall, built by the first Emperor of the Tsin dynasty, about 220 B. C., as a protection against the Tartars. It traverses the northern boundary of China, and is carried over the highest hills, through the deepest valleys, across rivers and every other natural obstacle. Its length is one thousand two hundred and fifty miles.

Among the most remarkable natural echoes is that of Eagle's Nest on the banks of Killarney, in Ireland, which repeats a bugle call until it seems to be sounded from a hundred instruments, and that of the banks of the Nahe, between Bingen and Coblentz, which repeats a sound seventeen times.

The most remarkable artificial echo known is that of the Castle of Simonetta, about two miles from Milan. It is occasioned by the existence of two parallel walls of considerable length. It repeats the report of a pistol sixty times.

The most remarkable whirlpool is the maelstrom of the northwest coast of Norway and southwest of Moskenæsol, the most southerly of the Lofoden Isles. It was once supposed to be unfathomable, but the depth has been shown not to exceed twenty fathoms.

The greatest cataract in the world is that of Niagara. The Horseshoe fall, on the Canadian side, has a perpendicular descent of one hundred and fifty-eight feet. The height of the American fall is one hundred and sixty-seven feet. The Horseshoe fall, which carries a larger volume of water than the American fall, is about six hundred yards wide and extends from the Canadian shore to Goat Island.

The biggest diamond in the world, if indeed it be a diamond, is the Breganza, which forms a part of the Portuguese crown jewels. It weighs one thousand eight hundred and sixty carats. However, not a little doubt exists of its being a diamond, as the Government has never allowed it to be tested. It was found in Brazil in 1741.

The largest tested but uncut diamond is the Mattam, belonging to the Rajah of Mattam, in Borneo. It is of pure water, weighs three hundred and sixty-seven carats, and is of pear shape, indented at the thick end. It was found about 1760 at Landark, in Borneo. It has been the cause of a sanguinary war. Before it was cut the Koh-i-noor, which is one of the English crown jewels, was the largest tested diamond. It then weighed seven hundred and ninety-three carats. When in possession of the Emperor Aurengezbe it was reduced by unskillful cutting to one hundred and eighty-six carats. During the Sikh war it was captured by British troops and presented to Queen Victoria. It was re-cut and now weighs one hundred and six and one-sixth carats.—Philadelphia News.

LIGHTHOUSE TESTS.

Is Oil or Electricity the Best for Illumination Purposes.

The long series of experiments made during summer and autumn at the South Foreland to test the respective merits of oil, gas and electricity for lighthouse illumination have been brought to a close, and the report will be drafted and published. Pending their appearance—which will necessitate some delay, owing to the voluminous character of the observations—we may mention that the evidence is in favor of the electric light on the whole, because of its far penetrative power. While the rays of oil and gas-light were lost sight of at a distance of eight miles, the electric light could be seen for fourteen miles; and with gas or oil at its maximum power, and visible for ten miles, the electric light could be seen for fourteen and a half miles. Although the arc is very much reduced in fogs it still appears to be visible further than gas or oil. By direct testimony of observers the electric light became visible in dense fogs at a distance of nineteen hundred to fifteen hundred feet, whereas gas and oil were only discerned at distances of from fifteen hundred to twelve hundred and sixty feet. This is an important point, because it was thought that gas and oil might have the advantage over electricity in dense fogs. There is no doubt that fog does quench the direct rays of the arc light in a remarkable manner; but how much this would diminish its efficacy in a practical sense was not well known hitherto. Probably the white haze surrounding the lamp is detected for a considerable distance, although the arc itself in a fog has lost its brilliance. So long as this haze is seen, mariners will learn to distinguish it as the lighthouse. The heating due to the use of gas was found to be very considerable. With the original eighty-eight jet burners, the temperature rose to two hundred degrees F.; but the subsequent use of one hundred and eight jet burners brought it to three hundred degrees and three hundred and twenty degrees F. These burners gave an illuminating power of twenty-four hundred candles. The electric arc lamps used gave a light of twelve thousand candles each. Four of the gas burners were superposed in a quadriform arrangement, and three arc lights were sometimes used. For the oil lights, the Trinity House six-wick burners were employed, each giving a light of eight hundred candles. We may add that although the experimental trials are for the present over, the photometric observatory and testing towers will be allowed to remain for further use and testing purposes. This is a sensible decision, since, whatever the result of the trials at present, they can not be regarded as conclusive while the subject of illumination is engaging so much attention.—Engineering.

—Luminous trees are reported to be growing in a valley near Tuscarora, Nev. At certain seasons the foliage gives out sufficient light to enable any one near at hand to read small print, while the luminous general effect may be perceived some miles distant. The phenomenon is attributed to parasites.

—The Mississippi Valley has an area of one million two hundred and forty thousand square miles.

THE MARION RANGERS.

How Mark Twain Came to Join the Confederate Army.

I was visiting in the small town where my boyhood had been spent—Hannibal, Marion County. Several of us got together in a secret place by night and formed ourselves into a military company. One Tom Lyman, a young fellow of a good deal of spirit but of no military experience, was made Captain; I was made second Lieutenant. We had no first Lieutenant; I do not know why; it was long ago. There were fifteen of us. By the advice of an innocent connected with the organization we called ourselves the Marion Rangers. I do not remember that any one found fault with the name. I did not; I thought it sounded quite well. The young fellow who proposed this title was perhaps a fair sample of the kind of stuff we were made of. He was young, ignorant, good-natured, well-meaning, trivial, full of romance and given to reading heroic novels and sing forlorn love-ditties. He had some pathetic little nickel-plated aristocratic instincts, and detested his name, which was Dunlap; detested it, partly because it was nearly as common in that region as Smith, but mainly because it had a plebeian sound to his ear. So he tried to ennoble it by writing it in this way: d'Unlap. That contented his eye, but left his ear unsatisfied, for people gave the new name the same old pronunciation—emphasis on the front end of it. He then did the bravest thing that can be imagined, a thing to make one shiver when one remembers how the world is given to resisting shams and affections—he began to write his name so: d'Un Lap. And he waited patiently through the long storm of mud that was flung at this work of art, and he had his reward at last; for he lived to see that name accepted, and the emphasis put where he wanted it, by people who had known him all his life, and to whom the tribe of Dunlaps had been as familiar as the rain and the sunshine for forty years. So sure of victory at last is the courage that can wait. He said he had found, by consulting some ancient French chronicles, that the name was rightly and originally written d'Un Lap; and said that if it were translated into English it would mean Peterson; Lap, Latin or Greek, he said, for stone or rock; same as the French pierre, that is to say, Peter; d', of or from un, a or one; hence d'Un Lap, of or from a stone or a Peter; that is to say, one who is the son of a stone, the son of a Peter—Peterson. Our militia company were not learned, and the explanation confused them; so they called him Peterson Dunlap. He proved useful to us in his way; he named our camps for us, and he generally struck a name that was "no slouch," as the boys said.—Mark Twain, in Century.

NEW YORK PAUPERS.

No Class of Workers Exempt from Absolute Pauperism.

A gentleman who is connected with a charitable organization that contributed to the relief of about nine thousand distressed people in this city during the past year, when speaking of the liability of different grades of working persons to come to want, said:

"My experience shows that no class is exempt from absolute pauperism, but it is very plain that some trades furnish better livelihoods than others, and that any trade is better than no trade, unless it is the trade of seamstress for a woman. Thus we were called on to relieve 549 laborers and only 55 carpenters, 79 longshoremen and 7 plumbers, and that shows, too, the difference between trades. Among builders we notice a striking peculiarity. Relief was given to 86 painters and 26 masons and bricklayers, while only 6 hod carriers were found to be in need. I think this is due to the solid front presented by the Hod Carriers' Union. Among the metal workers we relieved 12 brass fitters, 7 boiler makers, 23 blacksmiths, 26 machinists, 13 molders and 15 tinsmiths. I was somewhat astonished to find that 21 engineers were needy. They were men trained to care for stationary engines in nearly all cases. Horsemen seem to be as well off as most wage-workers. We relieved 19 coachmen, 63 drivers and 23 truck drivers. The clerks and salesmen relieved numbered 105, but the saleswomen numbered only 5. Against this small number we have to place 389 seamstresses and 656 washers and scrubbers. There are 34 nurses on our lists also. The servants of the city, considering their number, are not badly off. We relieved 49 cooks, 64 waiters and 35 other servants. Among other trades we supplied the wants of 41 printers, 1 press-feeder, 2 shoe cutters, 1 trapeze performer, 67 tailors, 1 undertaker, 3 watchmakers, 1 rope maker, 5 milliners, 4 paper hangers, 18 seamen and 3 photographers. The professions were not exempt, for we had 5 physicians, 1 organist, 5 clergymen, 13 teachers, 4 lawyers, 4 artists and 1 editor. There are no paupers among the reporters."—N. Y. Sun.

—Attention is called in German medical journals to the fact that, so far back as 1849 the usefulness of inoculation with rabies-poison, as an antidote and preventive against the effects of bites by mad dogs, was discussed in Jahr's Klinischen Anweisungen, in the articles on "Poisoning" and "Dog-Rabies." Constantine Hering, a physician then living in Philadelphia, is there mentioned as having actually made use of this remedy.

—A very conceited author was in the habit of presenting autograph copies of his works to his friends. On one occasion he presented a lady, who was a relative, a Bible as a birthday present. She asked him to write her name in it. He did so, inscribing the sacred volume to her as a gift "From the author."—N. Y. Ledger.

—When a young and beautiful but poor girl marries a rich old man, it may be that she loves him truly and sincerely, but it is all the world to an orange that she'll never repeat the experience if she becomes a young widow, says a wise old man.—Boston Post.

The Death Dealing Influence of Malaria.

The most fatal and subtle poison which afflicts humanity is the gas arising from the effects of the sun upon the earth after a shower. The vapor which arises at such times will produce the most malignant type of Malaria, and cause a diseased condition of every organ in the body. To prevent this, take a bottle of Dr. J. B. Henion's Sure Cure for Malaria. It is kept by all druggists and will only cost you One Dollar, which will save you any amount of suffering, besides a large doctor's bill. Dr. Henion solicits correspondence with all those cases that have been pronounced incurable. Write him at Rochester, N. Y.

CATAARH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, only ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The Application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

Our winter term of school commenced Monday, Jan. 4, after a two weeks vacation, with Will Clack at the desk.

Mary Mellon has returned from a long visit with her sister, Mrs. Hugh Ager, of New York.

The dance at Lake Ridge House on New Year's night was a social as well as financial success. Net receipts $100.

C. F. Bacon and wife are off on a two weeks visit among friends in Ohio.

Stephen R. Smith and wife of York were the guests of W. D. Easlick New Years.

Steps are being taken for a pole and signal flags at Lake Ridge postoffice.

There is an effort being made to extend our local telegraph line to Lake Ridge hotel. By the way, we received over the wire Sunday the announcement of foul play in the death of Mrs. Knoch of Springwells fame, also a dispatch from Adrian, requesting officer Pilbeam of Britton, to arrest the first colored man that came along, and in less than ten minutes he had one on the [illegible]

Mrs. S. Henry, is visiting her son, Hon C. R. Henry, of Au Sable.

Installation of officers of Macon Grange, Friday afternoon, Jan. 15. All grangers and their families are invited. The ladies will provide supper and a good time is anticipated.

Now is a good time to talk, write and preach political prohibition. When prohibition conventions are being called, when the country is being deluged with crime and the enormous tax resulting in a great measure from the traffic in liquors, is being gathered in. A good time for those of conscientious scruples, in village or country, who by their votes, legalize and sanction the traffic therein, to determine who is most responsible for the crime, misery and excessive taxation thereby, they or those engaged in the traffic. Saying nothing about the ill-gotten gains from the tax thereon. A good time for all others, when tramping to the tax-gatherer to balance account in a business way and find the loss or gain from the stupidity of sticking to party. Would not a national prohibition law be a God-send? And how are we going to get it except through political organization?

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

School opened with a fair attendance. The bad roads delayed somewhat in organizing, but everything is now running smoothly.

All report a pleasant holiday vacation, and judging from the returns, Santa Claus made the complete rounds.

The cold snap delights the hearts of the Seminary people with the prospect of splendid skating in the near future.

Celia Jones of '79 spent the holidays with her parents, and has since returned to her work in Hanover.

Judge Joseph H. Steere, of '71 has been resting under the paternal roof for the past fortnight.

Mary Cornelius, Will Green and Charlie Comfort were all home from college, and spent their vacation eating oysters, pulling taffy and such other ways as best to delight their own hearts and those of their friends.

Surprise parties and those where there was evident premeditation seem to have found plenty of supporters during vacation.

Deckie Eddy of '85 has been visiting her former teacher, Mrs. Maggie Cox, of Westfielder, Ind.

Carlisle Simonds, having returned from the west, pays us occasional visits. He seems just as much interested in base ball as ever and is even now looking up a game for the first pleasant day. No, thank you, we prefer to wait till we can play, without overcoats and mittens.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Burgess of Chicago, is visiting her son, Horace Burgess.

Auntie Hotaling is suffering from a severe illness, and her recovery is doubtful. She is now in her 88th year.

Miss Stella Miller is visiting friends at Douglas, Mich.

Mr. Ed. Osgood is off on a visit to Grand Haven.

Ransom Remington who was so severely injured by an infuriated cow while leading her out to be slaughtered, is much better.

Will Avery, Frank Augustus, Bert Ames, and Lon Camburn returned to school at Ypsi, Monday. It is rumored that the boys will soon be under the necessity of seeking another house-keeper.

Isaac Boughner, of Portland, Mich, is stopping in the place.

After a visit home during the holidays, Elmer Hendershot has returned to his studies at the medical department of the University.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson have returned from a visit to Mrs. Wilson's daughter, Mrs. W. C. Burns, Fairport, N. Y.

A WORD FROM UP NORTH.

OTSEGO LAKE, Dec. 30, 1885.

MR. EDITOR:—Another year has rolled around and we are still in the land of the living, and able to eat our allowance, and thankful that we can get our allowance to eat. We are having a very mild winter, so far, in Otsego Lake. Just snow enough to make good sleighing. Business is very lovely. The main branch of business is lumbering; that is the staple commodity; there is some fifteen or twenty camps that supply from this place, and they employ from forty to 100 men each, and these men are not the most mile tempered men in the world, especially when they get a quart or two of rot-gut whiskey down their thoats. They sometimes make our town ring with their midnight yells. Christmas night one man got his head split open with a club and left senseless on the ground. The offender was arrested and bound over to the court. Monday another demon in human flesh defied the law to arrest him. After various attempts by the deputy-sheriff and failed, he commanded a posse of men to arrest, and they finally succeeded in getting the hand-cuffs on him. He was a powerful fellow. Such is life in the northern woods. Please give this a place in your valuable paper; it comes to us as a weekly messenger from home.

"Keep the Pot Boiling."

If farmers, generally, would follow the city fashion of beginning their dinners, as a customary thing, with some kind of soup, they would find it healthful as well as economical. Much meat in odds and ends is wasted in farm houses, that might be made into good, rich soup. It is the French fashion, and certainly a wise one, to have a pot perpetually on the back of the stove or range, into which all the scraps of meats and vegetables are thrown, and sufficient water added, from time to time. This kept, not boiling hard, but simmering, and the family manage to have a supply of bouillon, or broth, for their daily use. If farmers would save their pieces of veal, and beef, and potatoes, and make use of them in the same way, they would certainly on a cold, wintry day, bless the house-wife who kept "the pot boiling."—American Agriculturist for January.

Harper's Weekly.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Weekly has now, for more than 20 years maintained its position as the leading illustrated weekly newspaper in America. With a constant increase of literary and artistic resources, it is able to offer for the ensuing year attractions unequalled by any previous volume, embracing two capital illustrated serial stories, one by Mr. Thomas Hardy, among the foremost of living writers of fiction, and the other by Mr. Walter Besant, one of the most rapidly rising of English novelists; graphic illustrations of unusual interest to readers in all sections of the country; entertaining short stories, mostly illustrated, by the best writers, and important papers by high authorities on the chief topics of the day.

Harper's Bazar

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is the only paper in the world that combines the choicest literature and the finest art illustrations with the latest fashions and methods of household adornment. Its weekly illustrations and descriptions of the newest Paris and New York styles, with its useful pattern sheet supplements and cut patterns, by enabling ladies to be their own dressmakers, save many times the cost of subscription. Its papers on cooking the management of servants, and housekeeping in its various details are eminently practical. Much attention is given to the interesting topic of social etiquette, and its illustrations of art needle-work are acknowledged to be unequalled. Its literary merit is of the highest excellence, and the unique character of its humorous pictures has won for it the name of American Punch.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Items scarce this week.

The cold wave put in an appearance Friday and has stuck by us like a brother ever since.

D. W. Loree went to Dundee Wednesday on business.

Misses Allie Rhoda and Lou Arner visited Mrs. Sena Potter, at Britton, last week. They found the young lady very nicely situated in their new home.

Clara Mead, of Dundee, who has been spending a few days at Mrs. D. W. Loree's returned to her home Saturday.

Mrs. John Arner visited friends in her old neighborhood Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week.

Willie Allen went to Richland Monday and will go in the office with his brother to learn telegraphy and railroading. He has our best wishes for success.

The Literary Society will not hold a meeting this week as there are meetings at the church, where all are welcome.

The first mash of the new year was made by the undertaker, who undertook to make favorable and lasting impressions on one of the dressmakers of the village one evening last week near the post office. She had better carry her little lantern as of old.

A. W. Haight, of Tecumseh, who is agent for the Orient insurance company, was in the village on business Monday.

Burt Tate, of Tecumseh, was in the village Monday in search of a housekeeper.

Fannie Schwab went to Monroe Saturday to make her sisters, Mary Randolph and Theresa Hacket, a visit for a few days.

J. A. Santus went to Adrian Tuesday on business, and Mrs. Freer attended the post office during his absence.

H. W. Stevens, of Tecumseh, was in the village Tuesday on business.

We had the pleasure of taking tea with our friend Mr. Erastus B. Morley, of Macon, one evening last week. Mr. Morley has sold his farm and will leave for Kansas about the first of April to seek a new home. We are sorry to have him leave us for he is one of our best farmers and a live man in buying stock, &c.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Mercury clear down.

Cold waves coming right along.

The Literary Society had an interesting meeting last Saturday evening. Next Saturday the meeting will be held in Britton's hall, where a fine program is promised.

On Wednesday evening, Jan. 20th, a donation for the benefit of Rev. Jas. Wright will be held in the basement of the Christian church. Come one and all.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Farmers are in a pickle as to whether to pickle their pork and sell it pickled to consumers or to be pickled themselves by selling to picklers, at present prices, and re-pickled in buying it back after being pickled, or words to that effect.

M. Yates has bought of Charles Bidwell the piece of land known as the Mrs. Rogers place, of 20 acres for $1,000.

Joe Daykin has sold 40 acres from the south side of his farm.

Sam and Brose Arner of Ridgeway, and Mr. Weatherston, friend of M. Yates, from England, visited our school Friday afternoon. Mr. Weatherston responded to an invitation from the teacher and gave an interesting exhortation to the school, comparing the educational systems of the two countries. He is a teacher when at home, and now contemplates stopping in this country.

"Lan" Hunter writes from Kinglan county, Kansas, that he is husking corn, which is used for fuel, it being cheaper than coal. Corn is worth $7.50 per ton.

Fred Morrell says the English language don't fill the bill, just because he broke down in trying to describe the condition of the roads during the recent rough spell.

The school inspectors of Ridgeway and Macon will meet at the schoolhouse in dist. No. 8 of Macon, Saturday Jan. 23d in compliance with a petition asking for the detaching of certain portions from Fractional dist. No. 4, of Ridgeway and Macon, whose school house was demolished by the cyclone last summer, and attaching the same to adjoining districts.

F. W. Yates' youngest child was quite sick with inflamation of the lungs, but is now improving.

Mrs. John Wiggins is quite sick.

W. L. Stewart writes from Fort Buford, Dakota, that he is clerking in a sutler store at $45 per month, $20 out for board and washing. Is 60 miles from railroad. Has seen considerable of the western country and intends to see more.

Supposing this country was thoroughly underdrained to the depth of two or three feet so that all the water falling, or otherwise accumulating on the surface should be filtered thro' this two or three feet of earth, passing off into the streams perfectly pure and free from all vegetable matter, what a halo of health would pervade each home, and the enhanced productiveness of the soil insure peace and prosperity throughout the land.—While now the water is so impregnated with earth, drift and surface fertilizers as to lay in pools and ponds, decomposing and drying away from the action of the elements, spreading malaria, disease and death. Should there not be a commissioner of sanitary drainage, with a law providing for the annual construction, proper distribution and a liquidating fund, say from our protective tariff, demonitizing gold and silver, and making TILE a legal tender for all demands? "Think of these things."

ONSTED ODDS.

Great scarcity of news.

Our cold wave hangs on pretty well.

D. A. Sickner has just returned from a business trip to Gratiot county.

Nelson Kinney has returned from his northern trip.

Squire Greenleaf is a lucky chap.—He earned two dollars in a few moments Sabbath evening besides making two young people happy.

While the section men were returning from their work last Friday evening, their hand car jumped the track, and one of their number was badly bruised and brought home unconscious. It looked rather serious at the time, but he was able to be out of doors Sunday and is doing well.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Uncle David Richmond arrived home last week from Batavia and other points in New York state, where he has been visiting for some time.

Rev. E. B. Sutton, of Adrian, state lecturer of the Michigan Temperance Alliance and deputy at large of the I. O. G. T., will speak on "The overwhelming issue before the American people," at the M. E. church this place to-morrow evening, Saturday, Jan. 16th. The gentleman comes well recommended and we trust he may have a full house.

J. P. Cutting, of Toledo, was in town looking up business matters early in the week.

We learn through the Hudson Gazette that Mr. L. Frensdorf, of that place, has received his son, Edward, into partnership with him in the grain and produce business. Ed had been stationed at this point for some months previous to the death of his mother, and secured many warm friends in this community, who will unite their best wishes with those of the Hudson people for his success in the new connection.

John Terpening has a couple of car loads of shingles for sale at the elevator.

Those who want law and justice may be accommodated at the office of Parker & Waterman, Harrington Block, as the two gentlemen now hold forth at that location.

James Ash is in receipt of letters from friends at St. Augustine, Florida, who report everything in blossom and like our June month here, and when they say they suffer with the heat it is but little comfort to our enjoyment of the cold wintry blasts.

John Graham had the remains of his wife removed from the Hetfield lot to a new lot purchased for himself and family in the Dibble graveyard, last week.

Bert Bailey visited his brother, J. H. Bailey, Monday night.

Such of the old students of the Addison schools as still reside near here are requested to meet at the school house next Thursday evening, Jan. 21st, for the purpose of choosing the date and otherwise maturing arrangements for the proposed reunion of the class. Let every one turn out and have a voice in the matter.

The Grand Rapids real estate dealers are considering the feasibility of calling a meeting to organize a state association. The purpose is to bring property up to a commercial standing, to fix rates commissions, facilitate the interchange of land, secure better laws and in deciding suits.

COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Lenawee county horticultural society met as per announcement at the Plymouth chapel, at 10 o'clock A. M. Wednesday. President Woodward in the chair.

The secretary being absent D. G. Edmiston was chosen secretary pro tem.

PEARS

was the subject for the meeting, as continued from last meeting.

On motion of Mr. Coller, the list of five varieties of pears, as adopted at the last meeting, was reconsidered. The list being a selection desired for family use, without reference to market value, after considerable discussion the following list was named, in the order of their ripening: Bartlett, Flemish beauty, Seckel, Anjou, Lawrence.

The Anjou and Lawrence were substituted for Buffum and Winter Nellis, as the list appeared last month, the following gentlemen stating the reason of the change: Hough, Coller, Niles, Steere, Davis and Edmiston.

On motion of Mr. Steere, Doyenne de Ette and Gifford were added for early varieties.

Clapp's favorite was also added, as coming between the Gifford and the Bartlett.

To those who desire to grow dwarf pear trees, the Duchess and L. B. de Jersey were commended.

A report from the state society's meeting was called for.

Mr. Edmiston said, that he had writen up as full a report as the circumstances would permit for The Adrian Times, and as most of the members present had doubtless seen the report, a review would hardly be desirable here. He stated, however, that at this meeting he learned that the state secretary would accept an invitation from our society to hold its winter meeting in Adrian, and that immediately after returning home he consulted with several members and then called a meeting of the executive committee to consider the matter. The meeting was held, the invitation extended and accepted, and the time for the meeting fixed for February 9, 10 and 11. This much the executive committee have done since the last meeting, and the matter of further arrangements, is now in the hands of this society.

On motion of Mr. Niles, the society adjourned one hour for dinner.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

President Woodward, after calling the meeting to order, called Mr. Mann to the chair, and made a short address, returning thanks to the society for the honor conferred upon him by placing him in the chair for the past year, and also stated that he did not wish his name to be used in connection with the position longer.

The election of officers for the ensuing year being the ord r of the day, a committee on nominations was appointed as follows: B. I. Laing, B. W. Steere, and H. C. Bradish.

After due deliberation the committee reported the following names:

President—F. J. Hough.
Vice President—S. B. Mann.
Secretary—D. G. Edmiston.
Treasurer—E. W. Allis.
Librarian—Dr. W. Owen.

On motion of Mr. Allis, the ballot of the society was cast for the nominations made by the committee, and they were declared elected.

An executive committee was then appointed as follows: B. W. Steere, A. Sigler, J. W. Davis, Peter Coller, H. C. Bradish and M. R. Palmer.

On motion of D. G. Edmiston, a committee of two was appointed to revise the constitution and by-laws of the society. The chair appointed F. J. Hough and D. G. Edmiston as said committee.

On motion of S. B. Mann it was decided, when this meeting adjourn, that it be till the first Wednesday in March, allowing the state society's meeting to take the place of the February meeting.

The subject of entertainment for the members of the state horticultural society was then taken up.

Mr. Edmiston was called for, and stated the method adopted by the Benton Harbor society, for the entertainment of the state society at the late meeting; also at other meetings that he had attended in years past. He also stated that he had made inquiry of Secretary Garfield as to the probable number of members that might be expected from abroad, and the number was estimated at thirty to forty. This, however, would not include the many friends that might be expected from the various towns and villages of our own county, who would not be able to go to and from their various homes, and of course should be provided for.

Mr. Stebbins was called for, and said that he thought there would be no difficulty in getting places of entertainment for all that would be here.

Mr. Coller thought we might find it pleasant and convenient to furnish a picnic dinner in the hall for one day, which would lighten the tax on citizens.

Mr. B. I. Laing thought the people from the country, who were too far out to entertain visitors, would be glad to help in the way of a picnic dinner.

The whole matter of arrangements for the meeting was finally referred to the executive committee.

Mr. Mann called the attention of persons present to the matter of becoming members of the society, when about twenty persons came forward and gave their names, and paid their membership fee of $1 each, which makes each person a member of the county society, and of the state society, to which this society is auxiliary.

The society then proceeded to make a list of varieties of pears for market purposes, each man writing his selection on a slip of paper and handing it in; Bartlett had eleven, Flemish Beauty ten, Duchess five, Clapp's favorite five, and Anjou five; Seckel, Lawrence, Onondaga, Sheldon, Buffum, and L. B. de Jersey each had their friends; the Lawrence, Onondaga and Sheldon were highly spoken of by several speakers.

On motion of S. B. Mann, the society then adjourned.

D. G. EDMISTON, Sec.

THE END OF AN ADRIAN PAUPER.

Things seem to be considerably mixed since the supervisors smashed up the old system of pauper maintenance. An unusually sad case has arisen in the third ward, where a lame and indigent person whose name our reporter has not learned, but who, for the unfortunate circumstances in which he is placed, will undoubtedly lose his life. A short time ago William Henry Harrison Graham was arrested, tried, convicted and sent to jail for disturbing the repose of a turkey, after he had gone to roost, and he still languishes—we refer to Graham; the turkey has ceased to languish. Graham left behind him a horse, which for the period of one week has not tasted food or shelter. The case was brought to the notice of Ald. O'Mealy, and City Attorney Helm and the marshal were taken into counsel. The question of responsibility for this poor pauper was a perplexing one, the master being in jail leaving behind no visible means of support for the animal. The city attorney, the marshal and even O'Mealy, though an alderman, were touched to tears at the harrowing recital of the equine's pitiful destitution. Drying his eyes, the city attorney, in a husky voice, directed that the pound-master take the horse into custody, maintain him at the expense of the city, and sell him afterward to pay expenses. Charlie Dean, thereupon, sought out the pauper, examined the fine points about him—hip bones, dorsal fin, gambrel joints, etc., and returning reported, "Dat ole 'hoss' am mo'n fo' hundurd yea's ole if he's a day, an' he am lame an' he's got a stiff leg, an' he ain't wuff a cent; can't git nuf'n for dat ole pelter, boss, you heah me; he ain't wuff the keep'n." This was a new feature of the case. Again the city authorities shed tears. It was a hard thing to do but it had to be done and by advice of the city attorney the marshal was directed to kill the poor old pauper either in person or by proxy, and give him a decent burial at the expense of the city.—Adrian Record.

Bitter Bread.

Complaint is frequently made by those who use baking powders that they leave in bread, biscuit, or cake raised by them a disagreeable, bitter taste. This taste follows the use of all impure baking powders, and is caused either by their containing alum (introduced to make a cheap article,) by the impure and adulterated character of other ingredients used, or from the ignorance of their manufacturers of the proper methods of combining them. These baking powders leave in the bread a residuum formed of lime earth, alum, or other deleterious matters, not always, though frequently, tastable in the food, and by all physicians classed as injurious to health. The Royal Baking Powder is free from this serious defect. In its use no residuum is left, and the loaf raised by it is always sweet, light, and wholesome, and noticably free from the peculiar taste complained of. The reason of this is because it is composed of nothing but absolutely pure materials, scientifically combined in exactly the proper proportions of acid and alkali to act upon and destroy each other, while producing the largest amount of rising power. We are justified in this assertion from the unqualified statements made by the Government chemists, who after thorough and exhaustive tests recommended the "Royal" for Governmental use because of its superiority over all others in purity, strength, and wholesomeness. There is no danger of bitter bread or biscuit where it alone is used.

The Ypsilanti opera house, one of the finest in the interior of the state, is not paying, and Messrs. Curtis and Bogardus, the managers, have concluded they must have assistance, either by the forming of a stock company or in some other way.

What is Catarrh?

Catarrh is a dangerous disease which thousands are consciously or unconsciously suffering from. It is a mucopurulent discharge caused by the presence of a vegetable parasite in the lining membrane of the nose. The predisposing causes are a morbid state of the blood, the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphillis, mercury, toxomoea, from the retention of the effete matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments and the germination of other poisons in the blood. Irritated by these, the lining membrane of the nose is ever ready for the reception of the parasite, which rapidly spreads up the nostrils and down the fauces, or back of the throat, causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachain tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness; usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes, ending in pulmonary consumption and death. Many ingenious specifics for the cure of catarrh have been invented, but without success, until a physician of many years' experience discovered the exact nature of the disease and the only appliance which will permanently destroy the parasite, no matter how aggravated the case. Sufferers should send stamp at once for discriptive pamphlet on catarrh, to the business managers, A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King street West, Toronto, Canada.

CLINTON PAGE.

C. K. SPAFFORD, REPORTER.

CLINTON, MICH., JAN. 14, 1886.

Wood is arriving in market in plentiful supplies.

We have not enough of the beautiful to make sleighing.

George Freese visited Detroit last Friday on business.

The past few days have been cold enough to suit the most anxious seeker of the frigid.

S. U. Stacy, of the Herald, was in town Tuesday calling upon old friends and acquaintances.

Dan. Davis has been suffering for several days from the painful effects which sometimes follow the extraction of a tooth.

Eugene Holmes, a nephew of Allen Dillingham, has been enjoying a pleasant visit with his uncle and family in Bridgewater.

The woolen mills received ten bales of logwood from Detroit Tuesday, which will soon be consumed in the dyeing room.

"Ed." Van De Mark has been busy for a few days helping Sell look over the balance of his stock in trade and cast up the figures.

Business is looking up at least we infer so from the crowds of daily calls at the various business places we have happened to call in at.

E. W. Freese and wife, Miss Cornelia Ellis and "Ben" Ellis from this village attended the wedding of Miss Lottie Ellis at Hillsdale, last week.

Miss Katie Schreder, of Tecumseh, who has been housekeeping for A. G. Burton, was called home on Monday because of the severe illness of her sister.

Comfortable ? — To get up one of these 10-above mornings and find the fire out in the coal stove. We tried it last Monday morning, and know whereof we speak.

The week of prayer concluded last Saturday evening, the union meeting being held at the Baptist church, and was very sparsely attended, but it was an enjoyable occasion to those that were permitted to be there, and none regretted the effort put forth upon that stormy night.

"Minn" Rose, whom we have spoken of heretofore as being quite sick with the rheumatism at his father's, S. B. Rose, had so far recovered as to start for his home in Detroit Friday last. He was accompanied to the "City of the Straits", by his attending physician, Dr. Cameron.

We are sorry to hear of the addition to the number of sick in the village, caused by a sudden attack of bleeding at the lungs last Saturday, upon our townsman E. W. Freese, of the firm of E. W. Freese & Son, but hope that it may prove of short duration and that we may see him again in his accustomed place ere long.

The meetings at town hall, Rev. Madison Miller officiating, are bringing out some historical facts connected with Scripture, that are really very interesting to the listener, and are calling for, and receiving an increasing attendance each evening. Go and hear them. They can injure no one and may be the means of much good.

Eugene Van De Mark has taken the agency for the Detroit Free Press and is distributing that paper daily to subscribers in this village, of which, we understand there is a large and increasing list. Eugene is an energetic and ambitious lad and we think the interest of that paper will be well looked after, and wish him success in his new venture.

The ladies of the Congregational church have in process of accomplishment the introduction of a Japanese Wedding to take place in the near future, and we have no doubt from the preparations going forward, that our entertainment patronising, fun-loving community will be permitted to enjoy an evening of diversion, very profitably and help on the good work going forward in our midst. The requisite characters are thirteen, and much pains have been taken in the cast and costumes that it may be gratifying to all.

Mrs. M. Stanclift and her six daughters left Clinton last Saturday, to join their husband and father at Harrison, Ohio. They have been residents of Clinton about three years and have gained many friends during their sojourn among us, that regret very much their departure from our community. As far as the experience of your correspondents family went, it was but to respect and cherish their memory as of those tried and true who not only sympathize in times of affliction, but are never ceasing in well doing, and thereby add their mite towards the comfort of others at all times, and rejoice in a nature of unselfishness. A host of warm friends can join with their relatives in this vicinity to wish them every success in their new home.

William Wallace, whom we spoke of in the last issue as being very low, died on the night of publication, last Thursday at 7 o'clock. Willie Wallace, as he was familiarly known, was 18 years of age and was a favorite with many of the young people of this village. He attended the high school here, was a pupil of Prof. Laflin when the illness which just ended, bringing so much sadness to the community, overtook him, and he was cut off in the midst of youthful usefulness when all seemed brightness and happiness in his presence, because of his natural and imposing devices for making each effort in a good cause, a success. His afflicted parents have the sympathy springing from many warm hearts in their bereavement. The funeral services were held at the Catholic church and were attended by a large congregation.

The club dance at the hall last Friday evening was a success in every particular. The hall was filled with enjoyment seekers who had come prepared for a good time, and they were not to be disappointed. The committee had made every preparation for the production of the dance of the season and their efforts were recompensed. The music—Ollie Hunt's band, from Adrian—put quite a different feature on this party from that of the previous ones, and to admit that it was simply [illegible] we who have a weakness for a modification of melody, simply state that the change is directly from the ridiculous to the munificent, with no fear of contradiction by any party who might have been present, and the mere mention of their coming again, diverts attention to the fact that Clinton needs a hall of greater capacity, that all may be accommodated who desire to be present and put on good behavior. There are many who would enjoy the harmonical sounds, produced by Ollie and his staff for an hour without detriment to either themselves or the members of the club.

Living Monuments.

The "Clinton end" of the Tecumseh Herald evidently failed to relish the club dance at the town hall Chrismas night. As he was there without an invitation we presume no one cares whether he was exactly suited or not.—Clinton Local. A previous issue of that paper, after striking out logically a time on the presumptuousness of Tecumseh publishers entering the field at Clinton to compete with a paper that is printed in Manchester, states, "and perhaps we are not so highly educated as some of our brother editors!"

From this, then we infer some other person must have penned the "Clinton end" article for it evidently required a most liberal education to put so much much truth ? in such a compact item. We are not of the highly educated ourselves but have caught the inspiration from our previously enterprising employers. We have never written for the New York Tribune, Christian at work or Christian who was not at work, that we know of. We never inquired into their political or religious standing, but we have sent items of our production to the "Enterprising end" of the Local. We have breathed over to the "City of the Straits" and items of GREAT interest have been manufactured therefrom for the enlightment of the commonweal. That we have acquired, there is not the least particle of a doubt and it seizes us more now than at the time the little gun shop was in vogue. He says we failed to relish the DANCE. We are glad he did not substitute therefor, MUSIC—as in the same issue, he takes the liberty to assert that "the Record man must have been interviewing the 'champion liar' of this or some other place." We are glad of another skip from the traces; that he uses the "end" of a paper instead of correspondent; possibly there might have been such there, we were not looking for ends of newspapers and perhaps did not pay as much attention to the "Clinton end" of the "Gimlet" as we ought, or should have conferred with the enterprising handle had it been present. If we are an end, and the writer of that article refers to us, firstly, we DID have an invitation to the dance from one of the many deserving members and an active one too. Secondly, as far as we participated in "shaking," we enjoyed it mightily, and the music did not disturb us as much as some others, and 'my countrymen!' who could the Record man have been interviewing?

A Rare Talent.

The faculty of drawing out of persons with whom one is conversing the best there is in them—brighter things even than they suppose themselves capable of—is the rare gift with which Nature has endowed some women. George Eliot was a most charming person in conversation, though she was a women of few words, because of her intuitive insight into the thoughts of others. A few words would put her in possession, not of what they said, but of what they would fain have said, and she would so improve upon it that ordinary people went away charmed with her who had made them for once at least feel themselves to be wise. Long afterward, perhaps, she would call to their remembrance the wise or witty things which they could hardly believe themselves to have said, and which they assuredly never would have said but for her quickening influence.

ABOUT FOOTGEAR.

How the Fancies of Men and Women for Foot Coverings Have Changed.

There have been notable changes in the fashions of footwear within a generation. In earlier days males wore long top boots the year round almost exclusively, only varying in thickness. Even in this respect the variations were frequently brought to a process of oiling or "greasing." The women stuck quite persistently to low-cut shoes, or, to speak precisely, to slippers for sampling, and pumps for winter. These latter shoes, adorned with galloon upon the ankle, produced a bewitching effect. One company one saw a goddess in them. These were the pioneers of [illegible] which came along later. On [illegible] were some better, prohibition prohibited overcoming the [illegible] snow and weather of [illegible] which [illegible] were not so bewitchers and they were [illegible] by the ubiquitous women [illegible] were worn over the shoes [illegible] in large [illegible] of the new rubber shoes were [illegible] These were luxuries seldom indulged in, because of the cost and of the lack of knowledge as to their resistant qualities, as well as to the labor required in conforming the ungainly things to the contour of the shoe. In the course of events customs have changed materially. With the incoming of women's gaiter boots men began to grow more partial to shoes, and gradually discarded the long-leg appendage. The prevalence of hoop skirts among women rendered a [illegible] necessary, while on the other hand the style of right-fitting trousers with men made the legs of boots an incumbrance. Rubber shoes, meanwhile, have become cheap and popular, so that both sexes are on a plane of equality in the matter of covering for the feet.

Alluding to oiling or greasing boots in early times for winter service recalls the cheerful fireplace where the operation was conducted. This was before the era of stoves, when sitting around the ample wood fire of a winter's evening was a signal for conviviality, with such wholesome refreshments as apples, pumpkin-pie and sparkling cider, and such amusements as checkers, fox and geese or twelve-penny morris. The operation of greasing was usually performed with melted beef fat, though many affected neatsfoot oil as superior. The task was usually allotted to one of the youngsters, who rubbed the grease in with bare hand so long as the leather thoroughly heated by the fire, would soak it. This proceeding rendered the surface impervious to water, kept it soft and pliable as well, and helped to exclude cold. The objection to this treatment was that boots could never be polished, but plain country people didn't do that much, unless it might be some young men with a taste for sparking.

The custom of measurement shoemaking that formerly prevailed so extensively is worth mentioning. Sale work, called derisively "slop work" was rarely seen or handled. A shoe store in the most populous towns was a place where ready made shoes could be procured, though the largest portion of its customers left their measures, which were in turn transferred to various cordwainers to be attended to. Many of these latter made periodical visits to the houses of customers and supplied their wants. The nicest boots were found among the importers. We had not then acquired the facility for producing a boot equal in style and fit to the French article.

When shoes began to supersede boots, over-gaiters came into use and have been worn ever since with scarcely any change. Not a few persons use them. There was not much difference in contour or construction between the gaiter of 1840 and that of 1885. At one period an alteration was tried, a steel spring was substituted for buttons, but it was an unsuccessful experiment, and was followed by a return to the original method.

The immediate predecessors of india-rubber shoes for wear in cities where paths were prepared during the snowy seasons, were articles technically described as "galoches." They were, in fact, leather overshoes, save that the protection came to the sole of the foot rather than to other parts. The prototype of this shoe was the ancient "clog," which, indeed, was worn as a shoe or foot covering, instead of as an extraneous protector. In later years the "patten" of England was kindred to the "galoche." There was always something natty in the appearance of this article, and the facility with which it could be donned was in its favor as well. Yet, woe to the individual who attempted the use of a new pair upon icy walks where the hard and smooth soles beguiled frequent downfalling to the unimitiated. The original vulcanized rubber shoes had a leather bottom, and it constituted an objection hard to overcome because they were so slippery. The use of rubber bottoms came as a benison to the appreciation of this species of footwear.—Chicago Shoe and Leather Review.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

How a Despondent Boston Maiden Brought Her Romeo to Time.

"It is a beautiful song," he said, as the flute-like tones of her voice and the tum tum of the piano accompaniment died away in the frescoes of the ceiling, "but I am not partial to secular music. I love the grand old hymns best."

"Indeed?" she said, as she ran her fairy fingers up and down the seven octaves.

"Yes," he exclaimed, enthusiastically, "the grand old hymns for me."

"Well," she murmured, as a rosy blush stole over her damask cheeks and the long, silken lashes shaded the bright and beautiful eyes, and a sigh soft as the perfumed zephyr that rustles the leaves in the umbrageous grove at eve when the diamond dew-drop trembles on the petals of the modest rose slightly stirred her bosom, "well I do not know that I can blame you, for I am fond of a certain hymn myself."

Then a season of osculation ensued, over which we regretfully drop the curtain.—Boston Courier.

ISMAEL PASHA.

The Once Prodigate Khedive of Egypt in the Role of an Economical Gentleman.

Ismael Pasha's eccentricities and extravagance while he was Khedive of Egypt have become proverbial, and it must strike the reader as something very new and extraordinary to hear that the great spendthrift has grown to be as penurious and saving as he was, it is said, in his early days. The world knows that for years the ex-Khedive threw millions of money out of the windows, so to speak, of his numerous palaces. His extravagance has reached the culminating point at the opening of the Suez Canal. Long after his creditors, enticed thither by the promise of pay, had assembled with the company of the Pharaohs that their property was gone, after the close of the festivities had to be shouldered by the officials, he had hinted to a trusted Government official that it was time they should begin to think of returning to their respective homes. One fine day Ismael Pasha had to relinquish his place to Tewfik Pasha and to take up his own gripsack. Since then he has travelled all over Europe, and having taken good care to lay up a dollar or two in case of unforeseen eventualities, he has been enabled to continue his luxurious style of living pretty much as of old. His favorite resorts are Naples and Vienna. At the latter city he never fails to take up his abode in the hotel of the "Goldenen Lamm" (gilded sheep), which he had frequently visited while Khedive of Egypt, having [illegible] Emperor Franz Joseph, to take part in some festivity or other. Times have wrought many changes since. But last year it was discovered that one of the followers of the Khedive had made a serious financial miscalculation in his own—not in the ex-Khedive's interest, and that a sudden change was noticed to have overtaken the latter. Society of Vienna upon a sudden heard with great amazement that Ismael Pasha had become economical; that he had discharged his paymaster; that he audited every bill, even the smallest, himself, and that he scrutinized every charge and claimed it extravagant. It must not be supposed, however, that the ex-Khedive has suddenly become a pauper; to the contrary, although, as compared with his former mode of living, he may be called so, he still manages to get along very comfortably. He occupies with his suite, thirty rooms in the "Goldenen Lamm," and recently purchased three thousand dollars worth of stores for the new building he has erected in Naples for his harem. He knows that even Naples is occasionally visited by frosts, and being a personal friend of warmth he also wants his wives and their slaves to be comfortably housed. He does not take much interest in his harem. It never did interest him much, and he only maintains it because it is a requirement of a Mussulman of distinction. Upon his recent sojourn in Vienna he was accompanied by his favorite wife, the mother of Prince Ibrahim. He does not appear in public with her, but the well-preserved lady is often seen in company with her waiting-maid upon the streets of the Austrian capital, dressed in the most elegant French toilet, and no one would suspect she was the wife of the well-known ex-Khedive.—Figaro.

EXCITING ELECTIONS.

How Mexican Partisans Fight Parliamentary Election Battles.

Parliamentary elections must be rather exciting in Mexico, judging from the liveliness which accompanies municipal contests in that delightful country. Even when local feeling runs high it is rare that these latter struggles give rise in the United States to anything worse than strong language. In Mexico, on the contrary, deeds are considered far more effective than words, especially when carried out with revolver and bowie knife. Thus, we read without surprise that at Buztamente the other day the two factions turned out heavily armed, and fought in the streets for several hours. After a time, too, they appear to have fired and stabbed quite promiscuously, without caring whether they killed friend or foe. The fighting, we are told, "was of a perfectly indiscriminate character. When hostilities were at last suspended by nightfall the state of the battlefield demonstrated the prowess of the combatants. Six dead, fifteen mortally wounded and a large number of less damaged Mexicans were included in the list of casualties. The result was not considered satisfactory, however, from an electioneering point of view, and the leaders consequently agreed to renew the struggle on the following morning. We are not aware how often municipal contests take place at Buztamente, but if they are of frequent occurrence the population must be in a fair way to reach its vanishing point.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Early Utah Juries.

In those primeval days the petit juries were in the habit of exercising the functions of both jury and court. They would not only bring in a verdict of guilty, but would also proceed to sentence the prisoner. In the case of the United States vs. Platts, in 1855, the jury found the defendant guilty, and sentenced him to thirty days imprisonment, and to pay a fine of three hundred dollars. The verdict was signed "Phineas H. Young, one of the jury."

Here is another amusing verdict, found in the case of the People vs. Moronol Green: "We, the jury, find a verdict of guilty on the second count in the indictment unanimously by imprisonment for a term of six months." Another jury found a man guilty of larceny, and sentenced him to pay a fine double in amount the value of the property stolen.—Salt Lake Tribune.

—A couple in Franklin County, Ga., were married a few days ago, during the dinner-hour, while they were making sorghum. They were dressed up, married and then dined and went out again into the field, where the groom began the honeymoon by feeding the mill, and the bride by skimming the sorghum.—N. Y. Graphic.

ILLUSTRATED. [illegible]

A Paper for the Homes of the Land—Sparkling and Original in every Feature.

On the first of January, 1886, a new department will be added to the Weekly Times, which will be devoted to a specialty in its columns, and its stories, which will be exclusively contributed by the pens of the best writers, and its articles, entitled Biography, Politics, Art, Science, and the leading events of the day.

The time has passed for the weekly journal of the city to fill the place of a newspaper. The daily newspaper from the great centers of news now reaches into every section of the land. Every inland city and every town of importance have their daily newspapers and the local weekly, with the wonderful progress in provincial journalism, meets every want that the daily newspaper fails to supply. The metropolitan weekly of to-day must be much more than a newspaper; it must be a magazine of family reading; it must lead the magazine in popular literature; it must lead it in popular illustration, and it must meet every requirement of the intelligent reader of every class.

Will be published to [illegible] who participated in the bloody drama of civil strife, and each will be profusely illustrated. The most entertaining and instructive series from the best writers of fiction will appear in each issue, with illustrations.

WHAT WILL convince you of the wonderful curative properties combined in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, if the remarkable cures that have been effected by its use fail to impress upon your mind this repeatedly proven fact? Thousands are using it, and all declare that it is a medicine of merit. WILL they do all and more than we claim for it. My friend, if you are sick or in that condition that you cannot call yourself either sick or well, go and get a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and realize yourself how this medicine hits the right spot, and puts all the machinery of your body into working order. CONVINCE

From the Registrar of Deeds for Middlesex County, Northern District,
LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—It affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's SARSAPARILLA. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that hit my wants as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours,
J. P. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

HAPPY BACHELOR.

The bachelor is feeling good
And deems himself a lucky wight;
He saws and splits no kindling wood,
He has no kitchen fire to light.

When day is done his cares are o'er,
And once in bed he takes his ease;
He need not rise to walk the floor
These chilly nights a child to please.

For him there are no household cares,
The breakfast bell his slumber breaks;
He dresses and he eends the stairs
To oatmeal mush and cracked wheat cakes.

For him life's river smoothly runs,
He's happy, jolly and content,
He has no wife to fill his ones
On whom his earnings must be spent.

Let him enjoy it while he can;
When age and loneliness shall come,
He'll wish he was a married man
With sons and daughters, wife and home.

HEARTS OF GOLD.

Made for Each Other, They Were United at Last.

I fancy that I can see him now almost as plainly as I did when he told me the story five long years ago. He lounged in the depths of a large easy chair before the grate, his arm resting carelessly upon a table covered with letters, the fingers of his right hand wandering nervously through his light hair, as he pushed it upward and away from his high and intellectual forehead. The firelight lent a charm to the room, imparting a glow to his kindly and not unhandsome face, and his eyes, the very embodiment of dreaminess, reflected the light.

It was a cold night, piercing cold, of the bleakest of the season, in fact. A terrible storm was raging outside, rattling doors and windows, and sending keen draughts of cold air through every available crevice. The street lamps threw out fitful gleams, flickering in the night wind, as if there was no encouragement, whatever, in illuminating the almost deserted thoroughfares, when the mercury sought the bulb of the thermometer, and the winter blast shrieked and howled and moaned as it swept by. Dick Benham's cozy apartments in the second story of a down-town block, of which he was owner, were then a favorite haunt of mine, and on this particular night I had dropped in to enjoy a game of euchre and a social chat, always including the inevitable social smoke. I found him seated at the table, reading over some old letters and consigning not a few of them to the flames. He was not himself, but moody, reserved and abstracted; so much so that after a painful silence of fully fifteen minutes' duration I fidgeted about, kicked the tongs viciously, and muttered something to the effect that he was confoundedly entertaining.

"Pardon me, Lyn, old fellow," said he, rousing himself. "I was thinking deeply, and forgot everything."

"Indeed! Thinking of what, pray?"

"Of a story, an o'er true tale—too true, in fact," he replied, with a half sigh.

"Good!" I cried briskly, "tell it me, mine host. You are always a capital story teller, and I have the enviable fame of being a good listener."

"You will find it tame and wearisome, I fear," he said, smiling at my manner, but I insisted; and lighting a cigar he settled himself in his chair again, and looked thoughtfully into the fire. His face grew darker, and his brows knit themselves into a frown.

"It is not a long story," he said, at length, "but its depth is immeasurable. Those letters contain a portion of it, and I am gradually reducing them to ashes, that it may be easier to forget. Ah, if we poor mortals could only forget as readily as we forgive, there would be more sunshine in our lives. It was about four years ago that I met Alice Lake, while I was up in the Adirondacks, writing and sketching for the magazines. I had been accustomed to look at women through ultra-critical eyes, and maintained a supreme indifference toward the fair sex in general. But when I met her, my armor of indifference was pierced; my critical eyes defied, and I found that I had met a woman who could be all in all to me. She was handsome, refined, sensible and womanly, a woman with a mind—in fact, all that I could ask; and having found my ideal, I yielded and paid court to her. I was always at her side, a most devoted cavalier, and delighted in sketching her fair face. Indeed, my employers began to complain mildly, saying that my sketches of types of the opposite sex were well executed and natural, but had a tiresome degree of sameness—advising me to hunt up a new model by way of a change.

"Well, I proposed, was accepted, and she named the day. A year seemed a long time, but I consoled myself by thinking of the happiness awaiting me—poor fool. About this time I was sent on a junketing tour through Colorado, Wyoming and the Yellowstone country. The postal service suffered at our hands, you may be sure, and I spent many a happy hour by the camp fire, after a day of extensive rambling, reading and re-reading her dear letters, and fancying that I could see her dear face in the embers. But one day a letter came, bearing an entirely unexpected burden of sorrow. It contained my ring and a brief note to the effect that after mature deliberation, she thought it best that our engagement be broken forever. She assigned no reason, but entreated me to think of it calmly and be lenient in my judgment of the act; so find some good girl and marry her—adding, that some day I should know all, and would then see that her burden was greater than mine, and acknowledge that she had acted for the best. I was thunderstruck by this ambiguous letter, and stunned with the grief it bore. I sat for hours, endeavoring to unravel the tangled skein, imagining everything—indulging in all sorts of conjectures and mental vagaries. I wrote letter after letter, but all were returned unopened, and finally I came to the conclusion that I had been cleverly victimized by a coquette. It was bitter—as bitter as worm-wood. After all my dreams and fancies, my romantic ideas, my charming love speeches, and my tender letter, to admit that it had all been a mockery and I a deluded fool.

"Shortly afterwards I was seized with a fever, and confined to my bed for several weeks. Upon my recovery I packed up my traps and came East. I went to her home in Philadelphia, that I might meet her face to face, and demand an explanation; but the house was closed and inquiry disclosed the fact that the family had gone abroad, to return no one knew when. Disheartened by this I decided to accept a correspondent's commission to the West Indies and Mexico, when my father died, leaving me this and other property. I then resolved to go to some spot and live away from the world. In society, I admit, but infinitely superior to that shallow-minded, false-hearted, slangerous and negative mass of humanity the world calls 'society.' I disliked it always. I abhorred it then, as I do now. It seemed false and hollow before. I knew it to be empty then. My business is all in the frames of an agent. The world knows that I exist because the itch for scribbling has not left me. Few know where I am, and there are not many who would suppose for an instant that plain Dick Benham, Bohemian, is Richard Benham, owner of the Benham block, etc. That is my story. A trifle sad, perhaps, doubtless gressome. There has been no sequel, there may never be. The years have failed to bring it, and I have lost all hope."

At this juncture a tired knock was heard at the door, and in response to an invitation to enter, the door was opened just enough to admit the diminutive form of a tattered urchin.

"Please sir," said this strange and uncouth visitor, tearfully and hurriedly, addressing Dick, "would ye be so kind as to come to our room, if it is no trouble? Mither's in an awful strait."

"Why, certainly," said generous hearted Dick, in his kindly manner, adding aside in an answer to my inquiring look, "poor creatures, I try to alleviate their sufferings as much as I can, much to the disgust of my agent; but they seem doomed to poverty and misfortune. But come, Lyn, our young friend is growing impatient."

Through cheerless, dimly-lighted corridors, and up dark stairways, we groped our way, until we reached the upper story of the tenement, and were ushered into a poorly-lighted and poorly-furnished room by our tattered guide.

In the semi-darkness we found a poor woman with a babe at her breast and a child of three clinging to her sleeve; crouching before a sorry stove that contained a small fire, wholly insufficient for comfort. In a dilapidated rocker, near the one small window the place afforded, sat a well-dressed lady, whose face we could not see, and by her side a staid appearing personage stood as erect as a pine. Her servant, no doubt. Before us was a thin, bent and wizened specimen of humanity, with an evil face and a cruel eye, who rubbed his bony hands together with a crackling sound and said harshly, as we entered:

"No use, no use. You must get out of this, and to-night at that. I've given you a week's time; more than you deserved, and now, unless the money is forthcoming at once, out you go."

"What, into such a night as this!" exclaimed Dick.

"Yes, into such a night as this, if it's any of your business," said the other sharply; and I could see that Dick cherished a strong inclination to kick him.

"If you can, and will wait until morning, I will pay her rent. Unfortunately I left my purse at home," said the lady of the rocker in a low, sweet voice. Dick started and nervously clutching my arm, looking eagerly at her, striving to catch a glimpse of her face.

"No," snarled the collector, "she goes to-night, and it will be a good riddance."

"She stays," you flint-hearted wretch, "and if you dare to eject her I'll throw you down stairs," thundered Dick, his form trembling and his blue eyes blazing with anger.

The lady in the rocker turned suddenly, and I could see, through the gloom, that her's was a beautiful face, but sad and careworn.

The collector stared at him in dumb surprise. "Brave words, brave words, my fine gentleman," said he with a sneer, "perhaps you don't know who I am."

"Yes, I know you well, Silas Upham, miser, coward and scoundrel, who lives by the falls and misfortunes; who bullies weak women, and who starved his wife to death because of his avarice. Do I know you, my friend? There is my card, you go. Take that card to Mr. Dare, my agent, and tell him that I desire to see him in the morning. He will not need your services as collector after to-night."

The fellow stood irresolute, as if he would like to speak or act, but, perceiving that words would be useless, and actions futile, he sneaked away, muttering to himself.

"Oh, sir," exclaimed the poor woman, rising, with tears in her sunken eyes, "you are so good and kind. I couldn't help it, indeed, it has been so hard since poor Sim died—and—"

"There, there, my good soul, be quiet or you will make me nervous, and that would be terrible," said Dick, good-naturedly, as he finished writing a line or two upon a slip of paper. "Here, tell the little one what fuel and groceries you need to make yourself comfortable, and he will run down to the store below and order them up. They will send the bill to me. Now order all you need, and I will step in and see you in the morning."

"Such feeling, such nobility," said the lady. "I trust, sir, that you will allow me to share the expense."

"My God," exclaimed Dick, turning pale, that voice again. "I would know it anywhere."

She arose to her feet, retaining a hold upon the chair, and, as the dim rays from the little lamp on the mantel fell upon her face, he sprang to her side, crying:

"Alice, my darling, look at me, speak to me again!"

She sank back into the chair again, and said, in tones of unutterable sadness:

"Alas! I can not look at you. I can not see you. I am blind!"

He staggered like a drunken man, and reeled against me. I grasped his hand, which was as cold as ice, and bade him be a man. Controlling himself by an almost superhuman effort, he knelt at her feet, and said, softly:

"And that is why you gave me up?"

"Yes."

"You could not trust my love. Thinking that because the light of your dear eyes had been dimmed I could forsake you. Was it lack of confidence?"

"No, no," she answered hastily, "not that, not that. It was that you should take me, even though I was blind, and I be a burden to you. It was very strange and sudden," she continued, wearily. "My sight began to fail me for some unknown cause, growing worse and worse until it was beyond the power of human skill to restore it. I then returned, your ring, and, like a heart-broken fool gave you up. I could not bear to be a burden or put your love to such a test. We went to Europe as a last resort, but physicians could not help me, and totally blind, I returned to America with my father. We took up our residence in this city, where he is striving to repair his shattered fortune. I, to forget my sorrow and affliction is administering to others."

"And a good angel she is, sir," said the woman whom they had both befriended, while the children clung to her skirts and stared in open-mouthed wonderment at the progress of the denouement.

"But now, my darling," said Dick, with all the impetuous ardor of a young lover, and entirely forgetful of his surroundings, "I am rich. I have more than enough for both, and you can never be a burden. Surely you would not refuse me now, after all these years of trial."

"Would you always love the blind wife as you loved the happy girl whose eyes spoke the owner's love for you?" she asked.

"As I have always loved her."

"It would be a sin to spurn such love as your's," she murmured, with a sweet smile, as she tenderly stroked his handsome face. In answer, he drew a ring from his pocket and slipped it upon her fore-finger.

"I have never been without it," he said, as he kissed her shapely hand.

"James," she said, turning toward her phlegmatic attendant, who was discreetly looking in an opposite direction during this scene, "the Trinity bell is striking eleven; we must go home."

"Let me be your escort, Alice, with James for a guide. I can not lose you again, so soon." Wait for me in my room, Lyn, if you are not too tired—I will return in an hour or so." And with the old, sunny smile upon his noble face, Dick led his beautiful betrothed away, followed by innumerable blessings from the poor creature who had thus strangely been the means of reuniting them.

I went to his room and ensconcing myself in his favorite chair, awaited his return, smoking and thinking vigorously. He had much to tell me when he came. They were to be married in three months, and were to live in the prettiest and cosiest of places and lead the happiest of lives. She was the dearest of women, crowned by an affection that made an angel of her, and he was the most blessed of men. The old letters were carefully gathered up and reverently laid away, with many self-reproaches on his part, that he had ever destroyed any, that he had ever doubted her.

The sequel had come after many years, bringing added happiness. To-night, in the embers of the fire, I can see this loving couple. He, one of nature's noblemen, gentle and kindly, with no thought save that of unrestrained affection for his beautiful wife, whose eyes are but heavily-curtained windows to a noble soul. She sees through him; he is her sight, and she is his life; they are each other's happiness. And, as I muse, I am happy, for I know that in this cold, empty world there are at least two hearts of gold.—Frank W. Lee, in Iowa Register.

BURLY WALNUT.

How Valuable and Desirable Burls are Produced in Trees.

In planting trees for profit the planter should be guided by the natural growth of the forest. In open sparse woods he finds crooked, branchy, knotty trunks which are of small value for lumber, while in dense forests the trees are long and straight and free from knots and branches. Moreover, the growth is more rapid, and the trees sooner attain a marketable size. But this fact is to be taken with due allowance for the use of which the timber is to be applied. For ornamental timber, such as walnut, chestnut, bird's-eye maple, cherry and others, crooked, knotty and branchy trees are the most valuable, and the more room given the better this object is secured. So that thin planting and a slow growth are necessary rather than a tall straight growth produced by close planting. It might be mentioned here that the burls which are so desirable and valuable in ornamental woods are produced by gnarls and wounds in the young trees and in the forks of the limbs. The enormous value of burly walnut, several thousand dollars having been paid for one log of this character, is an item of great interest to farmers who are planting timber for profit.—*N. Y. Foul Cisterns.

Cisterns become foul from organic matter chiefly flowing in with the water from the roof. The only way to purify the water, while in the cistern, is to throw in some substance or substances that will chemically unite with the impurities, forming an insoluble compound that will be precipitated to the bottom. Dissolved alum will affect this, but will leave the water hard. Hypermanganate of potassa, which can be purchased at any drug store, will precipitate the impurities and at the same time leave the water softer. About one ounce of the compound to fifty gallons of water is the usual proportion. The chemical reaction is marked by a purple coloring, and the hypermanganate should be added until this coloring disappears.—Toledo Blade.

What Miss M. L. Crowe, the Niece of the Rev. Geo. Moody Crowe says about Dr. J. H. Henion's Sure Cure for Malaria.

Miss M. L. Crowe, who resides at No 6, Beacon St. Boston, Mass., was a great sufferer for eight years. Physicians failed to do her any good, and her friends had given up all hopes of her being any better, and decided that she must be a confirmed invalid for life. Miss Crowe says: For eigh years I suffered more than tongue can tell. I was taken with a nervous restlessness while attending school. After a few weeks I was annoyed by not beable to sleep. I would retire feeling very sleepy, but would be awake until three or four o'clock in the morning before my eyes would close in sleep. Then I commenced to have pains in different parts of the body, and just before my monthly period—say a day or two—I would have regular spasms of pain that would be impossible to describe. I lost flesh gradually. My skin would be sallow part of the time, and at other times a deadly white. I lost my appetite and could neither sleep nor eat. I would have chilly sensations pass over me, followed by hot flashes, which was very annoying. My mind became affected. I had a constant dread of some impending danger, and at times I had a strong desire to take my own life. I became very blue and melancholy, and wished to be alone and undisturbed. I worried over imaginary trouble, and nothing could satisfy me. I became very irritable and could not bear to have any talk to me. My menses entirely ceased, and there was not a spot in my body that was not filled with pain. I had given up doctoring, for everything I took seemed to make me worse, and I had grown tired of dosing. A friend of mine brought me a bottle of Dr. J. B. Henion's Sure Cure for Malaria and urged me to try it. I commenced the use of it without any faith; in a day or two however, my pain grew less, and things commenced to look a little brighter to me. I continued the use of the Sure Cure until I had taken nine bottles, and my health was restored, the pain all disappeared, the monthly functions were restored, my appetite returned, and I have gained thirty pounds in flesh. I freely give this testimony in favor of Dr. J. B. Henion's Sure Cure for Malaria, hoping and trusting that it may be the means of helping others to find relief."

Taken together, all the beauties of art and nature do not interest the inquisitive female so much as the view she gets through the key hole.

A citizen of the Quaker City, Mr. F. Freed, living at 122 Vine St., recently spoke as follows: "Being afflicted with a distressing cough, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup was recommended to me for relief. I am happy to say that a few doses not only gave me instant relief, but effected a complete cure."

CATAARH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 200 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The Application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

IN the matter of the estate of Joseph Taylor deceased.

The undersigned, having been appointed by the Judge of Probate for the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against the estate of Joseph Taylor, late of Ravensmoor England, deceased, hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the office of Charles Burridge, in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the second day of January, 1886, and on the 24th day of May 1886, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days, and that six months from the 23rd day of November 1885, are allowed by the said court for the creditors of said estate to present said claims for examination and adjustment.

Dated Nov. 26th, 1885.

JEHIEL DAVIDSON,
DAVID JONES,
nov5 Commissioners.

ESTATE OF STEPHEN HUNTER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 11th day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Stephen Hunter, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of James A. Hunter, a son of said deceased, praying that administration of the estate of said deceased may be granted to James I. Gilmore or some other suitable person.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 11th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 14, 1886.

Senator Beck has received a letter from Jeff. Davis endorsing his silver speech. This is the severest criticism on Senator Beck's speech that we have seen.

Fadover informs us that Mrs. Fadover says that the goose bone hangs high. The ice crop is rapidly approaching maturity, and a boom may now be expected in the cutters business.

The Adrian Record apologizes for failing to be out on time one evening last week. The gas machine refused to work, and recourse was had to the water motor. Water is rather a thin drink to propel an Adrian paper with and hence the delay.

Look out for fires during this cold snap. See that the stove pipes are properly secured and examine your premises every night. An ounce of prevention, in the matter of fires, is worth a pound of cure. A small bit of precaution may prevent a disastrous conflagration.

The Adrian Record says: "The Tecumseh total abstinence league still holds together and maintain its integrity." You are right neighbor, and it is having a healthy growth also.—Knock and you shall be admitted, Bro. Smith. The league is no respecter of persons. Even editors are made welcome.

The old county offices are to be sold at auction this afternoon. The building which has preserved the county records for so many years, will be "knocked down under the hammer," and ere many days have flown not one brick will rest upon another.—The old must give way to the new.—Improvement is the watchword.

The Michigan members have been well treated in the appointment of the committees by Speaker Carlisle. Col. Eldredge is chairman of the Pension committee. Mr. Maybury is given a good place on Ways and Means, and all the other members are well provided for. Most of the chairmanships fall to old members of the House.

A fierce railroad war has been raging several days between the Detroit, Lansing & Northern and the Toledo & Ann Arbor roads at Howell, the latter seeking to cross the former line. Hostilities, however, are now closed with a victory for the Toledo road. The time has gone by when any railroad in Michigan can prevent another road from crossing its track.

The thermometer in this latitude last Monday morning ranged from 5° to 10° below zero, according to the locality. The cold was seriously felt, as the winter has been so mild thus far. This section however was very much favored, when compared with some other locations. Oranges were frozen on the trees in Florida, and it is feared that many groves have been destroyed.

The storm of last Friday and Saturday extended over the entire country and the blizzard swept down to the Gulf. The mercury was 5° below zero at Chattanooga, Tenn., which was the coldest weather ever known there. Frost occured in Florida as far South as Tampa Bay. A fisherman froze to death at Galveston, Texas. Up in Manitoba the thermometer struck 52° below zero.

President Cleveland, in rather vigorous language, tells an interviewer that all the newspaper men are liars. Grover was probably a little hot under the collar when he made the statement, and in his cooler moments would undoubtedly qualify his assertion. It is too true, however, that many newspaper men are liars, and in this respect they are very much like other people.

Sam Jones, the Evangelist, says: "When I began preaching, I was afraid I would hurt somebody's feelings. Now I'm afraid I won't". Newspaper men generally go through with the same experience. The first year a man runs a country newspaper, he tries to please everybody, and pleases nobody. In about five years, he conducts his paper to suit himself, and finds that it gives better satisfaction generally.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8, 1886.

When Congress reassembled this week after a fortnight of holiday making, the scene in both houses was interesting. The Senators plunged into work with a spirit that betokened they were refreshed by their relaxation and the Representatives were on hand, eager to learn where fate and Speaker Carlisle had cast them with regard to the standing Committees.

The Speaker looked weary and careworn, having been up nearly the whole night before working upon his committee list and trying to make fifty good places go around among three hundred ambitious politicians. Of course there was some disappointment, as there always is and some ill feeling over the list when it was announced. Still the less favored members are disposed to acknowledge that Speaker Carlisle desires to be just and fair to all. Owing to the great diversity of opinion on important questions, even in his own party, the Speaker's position is a peculiarly difficult one.

The work of the session will now begin in earnest. An immense amount of new business will be presented for consideration, though the country is more interested just now in the quality than the quantity of measures passed. Thus far seventeen hundred House bills have been introduced, and several States are yet to be heard from.

It is hoped the re-organization of the House committees, the changes and promotions made among them, will have a salutary effect upon legislation. The revisions of the rules, which attracted the attention of the country, will certainly have the effect of expediting such measures as are of urgent importance. It will enable committees to select their important bills and consider them, if a majority so wishes. There will be no wrangling over "points of order" as to legislation on appropriation bills, and there will be far less friction than before as to precedence of business.

Considerable interest has attached to Senatorial proceedings during the last few days. Senator Beck disclaimed any attack upon the Administration in his ante-holiday speech, and inquired if Senator Morrill had not misconstrued his recent utterances on the Silver question. The Senator from Vermont said he had misunderstood Mr Beck's allusions to the President and his financial adviser, the Secretary of the Treasury, and took pleasure in saying so.—Both Senators seemed to feel better after this explanation and immediately was sprung the question of Woman Suffrage in Utah.

That clause of the Utah bill prohibiting women from exercising the right of suffrage in the Territory came up. Senators Hoar of Mass., and Blair of N. H., two prominent champions of woman's rights, combined in an attack upon this section of the bill, and stirred Senator Edmunds to some of his old time spirit. Senator Edmunds declared that the majority of the women of the United States do not sigh for the right to vote. At present he thinks society is better off without such a union of the home and the field of politics. "Whenever our wives, sisters and sweethearts," said he, "believe that they can serve society and themselves better by going into politics than by confining themselves to the sphere in which they are now employed, they shall have the aid of my vote in attaining their object."

Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, answered Senator Beck's recent speech by sustaining the Presidents position, advocating the suspension of silver coinage. Senator Gray, the successor of Secretary Bayard, made his maiden effort in the Senate in defense of the same measure. The forensic debut of Mr. Gray was listened to with much curiosity and interest. Being a fine looking man and having a good voice and manner he made rather a favorable impression upon both the Senate and galleries. He was however, embarrassed by his surroundings and by an ungracious remark made by Senator Edmunds. The latter had the floor and was asked to yield in order that Senator Gray might speak on the silver question. Mr. Edmunds said he would not refuse, because it was so important for new Senators to make their first speeches that nothing but the falling in of the Senate walls should prevent them. Mr. Gray did not look very grateful for this caustic introduction, but made no reply to it, and proceeded with his speech, which he read from manuscript.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

Following are the real estate transfers in this county, as recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, for the week ending Jan. 5, 1886:

MACON.

J. W. Ayres to J. McKendry. Land on sec. 15. $3,000.

TECUMSEH.

J. McKendry to J. W. Ayers. Land n village. $500.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hyphophosphites.

Very Palatable and Efficacious in Wasting Diseases. Dr. C. T. Bromser, Bochester says: "After having used Scott's Emulsion with decided benefit upon myself, I have taken great pleasure in recommending it since in the various conditions of wasting in which it is indicated."

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

An Unfortunate Mugwump.

Henry Ward Beecher, who did noble work last year as a Cleveland Mugwump, returned to the Republicans, and what was the result? Why, he had his pocket picked of a $400 watch.—Chicago Times.

Time Enough Yet.

Speaking of the predicted end of the world in 1892 the St. Paul Globe (dem.) consoles itself with the thought that sufficient time still remains for the democratic administration to turn the republicans out of office.—Detroit Tribune.

A Stalwart Declaration.

We say, and we say it boldly, that any man who will eat the thin, tough and juiceless old heavy draught steaks of the average village, if he has money enough to buy better ones, is not fit to be Governor of the State.—Boston Record.

Ho, the Happy Mugwump!

Admitting that, from present appearance, the Mugwump is in American politics to stay, a Democratic paper in New York asks: "Will he take new lodgings every year?" He certainly will if the fare doesn't suit him. The mugwump never eats crow.—Boston Herald.

The Equilibrium a Good Ways Off.

The Republicans still hold 44,000 fourth-class postmasters to the Democrats 7,500, and 1,800 Presidential postoffices to 550 filled with Democrats. The equilibrium is still a good ways off. Much further than the Democrats generally like to see it.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

The Only Consoling Thought.

Of the myriads of bills now being poured into the Congressional hopper, very few will ever come out in any recognizable shape. That is the only consoling thought left for an American who contemplates the ambitious efforts of the amateur statesmen at Washington.—Philadelphia Times.

The Twin Relic in Danger.

The vigorous onslaught of the Democratic administration upon polygamy is depriving it of the vigor it attained under Republican rule. Twenty-five offenders are in the penitentiary, fifty more under indictment and all the leaders of the Mormon church shaking in their boots.—Detroit Free Press.

A Good Word for Bachelors.

The latest piece of gossip about Uncle Sam Tilden is to the effect that he has spent $750,000 for political purposes during the past ten years. Although that is a great deal of money, it must be remembered that if Tilden has spent any such sum he took it out of his own pocket, and that he will not leave any widow or children in want. The old bachelors must spend money for something.—Chicago Herald.

Vaccination Bees.

The proverbial sweetness of the uses of adversity is illustrated in the present Canadian fashion of holding "vaccination bees," or social gatherings of the young of both sexes to be vaccinated. The village doctor furnishes the "points," the host or hostess pays the professional bill, each patient, like koko, "bares his rugged right arm" and bears the operation with jovial equanimity. Results within a day or two warrant calling these now popular vaccination bees swell affairs.—New York World.

The Lone Star State.

There is a strong tide of German emigration setting in towards Texas, direct from Europe. It is an emigration that is most desirable, that enters into the muscle and nerve of the State that diffuses the healthy blood of thrift and industry, and that in time will make it imperial in all that constitutes a grand commonwealth. In the great race for wealth, population, prosperity, success, among the Southern States, Texas is proving herself to be one of the strongest competitors.—Toledo Bee.

Emancipate the President.

President Cleveland's determination to close the White House against applicants for office is criticised by some of our contemporaries as anti-Democratic and offensive. We do not so regard it. On the contrary, we look upon the President's action as not only justifiable, but as a more important step in the direction of real, substantial Civil Service Reform than any the Mugwump advisers of the President have induced him to take. It signifies that Mr. Cleveland does not regard the Presidency as a mere office-distributing machine, but as a position of high trust to be used in the service and for the advantage of the whole country.

Long before Mr. Cleveland's inauguration the World insisted that the most valuable step in the reformation of the public service would be the emancipation of the President from the spoils-hunters. We regard it as inconsistent with democratic government that any one man should hold in his hands almost autocratic power over more than one hundred thousand office-holders. We insist that it tends to demoralize the people when they have to beg office from a President and demoralizes a President to hold in his gift more official patronage than is wielded by all the crowned heads of Europe. We favor the decentralization and scattering of the appointing power as authorized by the Constitution and as already practiced by Congress in the case of inferior postmasterships.—New York World.

MICHIGAN MONOGRAMS.

A Jackson dealer bought 10,000 muskrat skins last year.

Mayor Gray, of Pontiac, has married last week Thursday.

Barry county farmers are looking blue over the prospects of winter-killed wheat.

About half of the Randolph Rogers collection to Ann Arbor has reached New York.

It is said that the entire legal fraternity of Niles pays in the aggregate less than $50 in taxes.

A women's relief corps in connection with Dewey post G. A. R. has been mustered in Leslie.

J. O. Apted, of Marcellus, has two paddling dishes which have been in his family for 200 years.

H. R. Dickinson & Co., of Nashville, have commenced operations on a 65 barrel roller process flouring mill.

The large amount of 19,000 tons of pig iron have been made in No. 2 stack of the Pioneer furnace at Negaunee.

Joseph Sick, the Assyria, Barry Co., farmer who fell from a load of wood last week and run a stick into his head, has died of his injuries.

Edward Slocum, of New Richmond, highly prizes a greenback dollar paid him while a soldier. It is the first one issued and is marked series A No. 1.

Minnie Kettlehorn, aged two years was scalded to death at East Saginaw last week by falling into a pail of hot water her mother had placed on the floor.

Mrs. Guire, a wife of the engineer of the Clare water works, assists in running the engine, doing five hours of work every night, and drawing her stipend like a man.

Mrs. Caroline Westcott Romney, formerly a Michigan girl, daughter of the late Hon. J. N. Westcott, of Calhoun county, is the able editor of the El Paso, Texas, Herald.

Defective flues caused the destruction of Henry Zedick's house at Kalamazoo last week and R. Quackenbush's residence at Grand Rapids.—Loss $1,500 and $2,000, respectively.

Fred Graff, of Baltimore, while walking by the side of his sleigh about two weeks since, slipped and fell, striking his side across the sleigh box, causing injuries from which he died last week.

The editor of the Petoskey Democrat was lately appointed a mail route agent and left his wife to run the paper while he was on the road. It is reported that she has deserted both him and the Democrat.

Berrien county agricultural society has been formed into a stock association. The debts of the old institution, which has always been run at a loss, have been cleared off, and the prospects for the future are bright.

Elder W. C. White and wife, Elder Conradi and wife, prominent advents of Battle Creek, will soon sail for Switzerland, accompanied by Miss Jennie Hems, who will meet and marry R. H. Coggshall while abroad.

The Andrew Jackson association of Jackson celebrated their 21st anniversary last Friday in great shape.—There were speeches, resolutions, toasts, and an excellent dinner on the program. Nearly 100 members participated.

The squabble between Editor M. E. Brown, of the Battle Creek Moon, and J. L. Whitcomb, it is claimed has resulted in a boom for the Moon, the subscription list showing 160 new names since the "onpleasantness" occurred.

Niles will be older before she becomes the county seat of Berrien Co., notwithstanding the liberality of her propositions. The Berrien supervisors last week voted 14 to 8, against the proposition to remove the county seat from Berrien Springs.

Alfred Bennett, the chief witness against Elmer Wood, convicted of manslaughter at Kalamazoo, has been arrested for perjury, while one of the jurors is accused of having expressed an opinion against the prisoner pending the trial.

Nora Brewer, a 11-years-old Owosso girl, has amused herself during confinement to the house with scarlet fever, by making 123 words from the letters in "scarlet fever" and her father, E. L. Brewer, says he will give a pair of slippers to any girl under 13 who can beat it.

SI PERKINS.

Our citizens should not fail to visit the Opera House to-morrow evening to witness the appearance of Frank Jones and his company in the great domestic play, "Si Perkins; or the Girl I Left Behind Me,"—a play abounding in comical situations, and which deals with the efforts of a rustic drummer, Si Perkins, to sell threshing machines and to save and win a pretty girl. In the first endeavor he talks the rural population half to death. In the second he thwarts a robbery, saves his love from poisoning by a wicked uncle, discovers that she has been abducted and restores her to her father's arms. In the pursuit of his various purposes he gets blown up by dynamite. This is placed in his threshing machine by the second villain, the supposed gypsy father. The machine and dynamite are both shown in operation. The dialogue is clever and often very amusing. The New York Herald says: Mr. Frank Jones as Si was full of dry humor and true as a type, while Miss Alice Montague, as his love Zana, was natural, which is saying much. There is a comical country widow, well done by Mrs. Howard, and an amusing scapegrace of a boy, brightly personated by Master Miller. With all its complications of what is comic and what is comically serious, the piece is well worth seeing.

It is said that Rev. Cressey, editor of the Michigan Center has fallen heir to $100,000. There is a fine opportunity for him to use it in making a business success of a prohibition newspaper.

Landlord W. H. Sink, of the Park Hotel at Monroe, rejoices in the possession of a male heir, who arrived on the morning of the 5th. It would be a good time now to pay Landlord Sink a visit.

The State Republican of Lansing will be issued both as a daily and weekly hereafter. The first issue of the daily is at hand. It is a six col. quarto well edited and neatly printed. May it live long and prosper.

Mrs. E. G. Wilson has often wondered how much she baked in a year, so she has kept a record for 1885 which shows she has baked some. Pies, 422; cookies, 3,951; loaves bread, 513; cakes, 142; doughnuts, 1,319. This is for a family of 6 on the average.

Mr. D. D. Hubbard has organized a dancing class and will hold its sessions in Armory Hall. The first lesson was given Tuesday evening. As Mr. Hubbard is a very emi[illegible] teacher of that art, and the price is low, he will doubtless have a large and successful school.

We are glad to note that our friend Newt. Satterthwaite is improving in his weather business. We have always had a good deal of faith in Newt's good judgement but when he was giving us that run of soft weather during holiday week, we confess that our confidence in his sagacity was considerably shaken.

Communion of the Lord's Supper will be administered in the Reform church of Macon, at the time of regular service, on next Sunday Jan. 17th. Preparatory service on Saturday Jan. 16th, at 2:30 P. M., at which time the annual election of officers will take place. A full attendance of members at both services is desired.

On Jan. 4 occurred the installation of officers of the Tecumseh Council Royal Arcanum No. 634. They were as follows.

Regent—Abner Wilson.
Vice R.—Henry McClure.
Orator—C. M. Woodward.
Secretary—Geo. H. Tansley,
Collector—H. W. Stevens.
Treasurer—D. T. Hall.
Warden—E. J. Hollister.
Sentry—J. W. Cole.
Chap.—C. McNiel.
Guide—D. T. Hall.
Ex. Physician—C. M. Woodward.

Last Saturday night Jan. 9, 1886. as a shy reporter for the "HERALD" was passing the residence of Mr. Wm. Hayden, he heard various sounds which tokened that "merry makings" were going on inside; but being of an extremely diffident disposition he shrank from entering although he knew it would be shrinking from his duties to let anything like that pass unobserved. Therefore, as his last expedient he resolved to mask as some hidious old chap, found only in the annals of Charles II. time. First to think and next to act, and he was soon in the midst of an astonished crowd of boys and girls. The reporter's capital (cheek) was soon gaining reward for his efforts; for during a game of "spat 'em out" in which our reporter was given a chance to select a girl, one of the boys told him that they all assembled from invitations by Marvin Hayden. He also told him confidentially, "that they were having a boss time." The time to leave came much to the disgust of our friend; for he knew he would have to leave the prettiest party of girls and the manliest and most original set of boys, that he ever saw.

George Wilson went to Lansing last Monday.

James Watson returned from Galena Monday.

Remember the grand masquerade at the rink next Thursday evening.

We have received from Commissioner Newell the annual report of the State land office.

The Holcomb trial was concluded Tuesday morning at Hillsdale by the acquittal of the defendant.

Ed. Stadicor has resigned his position in the paper mill and will hereafter act as engineer in Brewer's foundry.

Miss Lou Reynolds, who formerly clerked for Sutton, Fairfield & Co. was visiting friends in Tecumseh last Tuesday.

The annual meeting of the Agricultural Society of Lenawee Co. will be held at the new court house, Jan, 29, at 10 o'clock, A. M. M. GRAVES, Sec.

Cloaks—one-third off. A good time to buy a handsome cloak at a very low price. We will not carry them over. W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

The small boys of Blissfield steal eggs from the grocery stores. The grocers should lay aside a few dead ripe eggs, for the special benefit of these boys.

Supervisor Bresie received a telegram from Cleveland last Tuesday requesting his presence there at once and he departed on the first train. He is fearful that his wife may be sick.

A old scientist printed the fact that by bathing the feet in tepid water a man could double his circulation, and now all the editors are having tanks fitted to their office stoves.

The total Abstinence League will meet every Thursday evening until otherwise ordered, over the post office. Friends of the enterprise are cordially invited to meet with us. The League is a fixed fact and the young men all like it.

"I wouldn't worry about the cholera, dear" said a wife to her husband; "It isn't at all likely that it will reach this country." "I don't know about that," he replied, nervously; "it may break out at any moment, and we might have a frightful time; I—I think I had better pay the back pew rent any way, and my subscription to the paper."

Yesterday afternoon, Jan. 13, at the residence of Rev. J. M. Getchell, who acted as the officiating clergyman, occurred the marriage of Mr. James Brainerd of Onsted, and Miss Mary Booher of Springville. The bridal party was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Hannibal Osborn of Franklin. The bride is one of Springville's most worthy young ladies. We have not the good fortune of a personal acquaintance with the groom but hear good reports about him. The newly married twain will accept the HERALD'S congratulations and good wishes.

The pew renting at the Baptist Church last Tuesday afternoon and evening was well attended. A large number of the pews was disposed of at a good figure, amounting in all to $864. A few more desirable slips remain and people who want them should speak for them early. The repairs on the church have been figured up and it appears that the total sum expended during the year just passed was over $2500. The young people expended $138 for lamps and lighting fixtures. The ladies paid $230 for new cushions and $178 for a new carpet and the balance was expended for repairs on the church building. Our Baptist friends are now handsomely fixed, and with a new pastor who is giving excellent satisfaction, the prospects for the church during the current year are very flattering.

FLASHES BY THE C. T. LINE.

The local editor of Flashes is able to shove the quill once more.

Henry Daily, of North Adams, is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Willie Wallace, of Clinton township was buried last Saturday. He was a member of the Clinton High School.

F. P. Dening, of Eaton Rapids, is soliciting orders for a patent sad iron in Clinton.

Miss Ettie Stacy, of Buffalo, is rusticating on the old farm at Newburg. It is five years since she left the old homestead.

Mrs. W. B. Keyser kept a memorandum of the meals served to guests for the year of '85, which was 223. This speaks well for the hospitality of our C. T. Line treasurer.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Richard Hicks is improving slowly. Mrs. Hicks came from North Adams about two weeks ago and was taken sick shortly after she reached her daughter's, Mrs. Horatio Keyser's, and has been very sick since that time.

W. B. Keyser is being reminded of old times occasionally. He is visiting the schools of Clinton township as inspector.

Willis Smith met with quite an accident by the breaking of an engine belt. The end of the belt struck him full in the face, breaking the skin in several places, filling his eyes full of pieces of rubber so that he could not see for some time afterward.

We have received from Dr. H. L. Baker, of Fort Scott, Kan., the New Year's issue of the Fort Scott Monitor. It gives a synopsis of last year's business and the prospects for the future. Fort Scott is now the best railroad center in Kansas, and is enjoying a very rapid growth.

Frank Keeney, of Cambridge, has 350 bushels of Bohemian oats on hand. At $10 a bushel they are worth $3,500. If Frank has them on hand next spring when the assessor calls around, the latter should make an oat of it and assess Frank on that basis for personal property.

Two new sewing machines are on sale at the HERALD office. One is a new style American, and the other an improved Singer. Both are first-class machines and have never been used except for trial. Any person wanting to buy a new sewing machine for cash will find either of these a bargain. Call and look at them.

Every year every local paper gives from $100 to $5,000 in free lines for the sole benefit of the vicinity in which it is located. No other agency can or will do this. The local editor in proportion to his means does more for his town than any other ten men, and in all fairness, man with man, he ought to be supported, not because you may happen to like him or admire his writing, but because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be brilliant nor crowded with great thoughts, but financially, it is more of a benefit to a community than the preacher or teacher. Understand us now, we do not mean morally or intellectually, but financially, and yet on the moral question you will find the majority of the local papers are on the right side of the question. To-day the editors of local papers do the most work for the least money of any men on earth. Subscribe for your local paper not as a charity, but as an investment.—Judge Davis.

THE G. A. R's OF ADDISON.

Last Friday we had occasion to go to Addison on business, and upon boarding the noon train we found a delegation of the Tecumseh G. A. R. Post going the same way. Inquiry revealed the fact that they also were going to Addison to assist in the installation of the newly elected officers of the Addison Post, which took place that evening. Upon arriving at Addison the boys were met by a delegation of the Addison Post, who took them in charge and escorted them to the Commercial, where a good dinner was provided. During the afternoon the boys were shown about town by Comrade Parker, of Addison, who did the honors in "due form."

We accepted an invitation to attend the installation ceremonies that evening. The big blizzard of last week had already struck the town and a fearful storm raged without, but their cozy hall over Smith's store was nicely warmed and as comfortable as a drawing room. The session was opened with a business meeting and the installation followed which was public. Past Commander Hosmer of this village acted as installing officer. At the close of the ceremony proper, speeches were called for and responses were given by Dr. Wm. Brown and editor Kempton of Addison, and by S. P. Hosmer, Rev. Getchell and S. C. Stacy, of Tecumseh. The company then donned their wraps and overcoats and wended their way through a blinding snow storm to the Commercial where a sumptuous supper was in waiting to warm up the inner man. It is needless to say that the Tecumseh boys all felt at home in this portion of the "work." Our delegation remained over night with John Carnes and returned on the morning train Saturday. The delegation consisted of Comrades Hosmer, Getchell, W. C. Jordan, Geo. VanTine, Alex Turner, and L. B. Thompson of Beer's Post. In their behalf as well as our own we wish to publicly extend to the Addison Post our hearty thanks for bountiful hospitality received during our visit there. It was a wise forethought that planned our business trip to Addison on the night of the G. A. R. installation.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

A degree staff is about to be organized in the Hudson Odd Fellows Lodge.

The Cantata of Queen Esther was recently presented at Saline by an amateur company.

Hudson is considerably stirred up over the prospect of getting the Jackson and State Line railroad.

Mr. J. M. Stearns, the retiring postmaster of Blissfield, will [illegible] farm in Deerfield township.

The Blissfield I. O. O. F. band lately held a box social which netted them the handsome sum of $26.00.

Constable Farroughs, of Clinton, has lately recovered a watch stolen from a Clinton man last summer by one of the Steffanoski's.

Blissfield wants a new opera house. An opera house is a nice thing for everybody but the man who owns it. It is a good thing for the owner too, if he is content with two or three per cent. interest on his investment.

"Now that the few birds the English sparrow has failed to drive away have departed for warmer climes," remarks the Jackson Patriot, "it would be an excellent opportunity to feed these little pests with wheat soaked in strichnine."

The water of Big Raisin drain again vainly seeks an outlet. The Rigaites have dammed the drain with shovels and spades and the Ogdenites have dammed it orally and there seems to be no longer an outlet except through the courts.—Adrian Record.

A lawyer in this village received a letter from a client a few days since. The spelling was horrid, and he spelled lawyer "liar." The letter in substance stated that he was compelled to employ an attorney, and thought the man he wrote to as good a "liar" as any of them.—Hudson Post.

Hudson wants a weather manager and the Post exhorts some of the good yoemen of the vicinity to furnish a pole of suitable size to accommodate the business. We will furnish the stick ourselves if our neighbor will guarantee better weather in consequence.—Addison Courier.

It looks now as if Devil's lake ought to have a more appropriate name.—There is to be another steamer the coming summer. It is to be built by H. A. Rarier, of Onsted. The steamer is to carry from one to three hundred passengers, and it is rumored Chas. Pitman, of Rollin, is to run it.—Parties from Adrian are to put on a steamboat, so we are told, making four steamers on the lake. It ought to be enough on such a lake to be called steamboat lake.

A copy of Smith's Diagram of Parliamentary Rules, published by the Review & Herald Publishing Association Battle Creek, Mich., is on our table. It answers at a glance over 500 questions in parliamentary practice, and contains a key giving concise hints and directions for conducting the business of deliberate assemblies. As every one who takes part in a deliberative assembly should understand parliamentary rules as well as the chairman, this work should be in the hands of every one. Price, 50 cents.

In making his assessments last spring Supervisor Finch assessed the undivided surplus of the Lenawee County Savings Bank to the concern as a corporation. Payment of the tax is now refused by the bank, their attorneys maintaining the illegality of assessing the surplus to the bank as a corporation, holding that said assessment should have been made against the individual stockholders. By agreement between the city attorney and the bank's attorneys the question will be submitted to Judge Howell at the opening of the next term of court. Both sides are said to feel very sure of their ground.—Adrian Record.

THE GRAND TRUNK R. R. EXTENSION.

A meeting of the directors of the proposed Jackson & Ohio railroad company occurred at Jackson a week ago Wednesday. Hudson was represented by Messrs. L. Frensdorf, J. L. Osborn and J. K. Boies, and the question of effecting an extension of the Grand Trunk road from Jackson to VanWert, Ohio, via. this place and Hudson was considered in detail. We are unable to get an authentic report of the proceedings, but the facts as near as they can be ascertained are that the road is to be built and put in operation prior to Jan. 1st, 1887. The necessary bonds will be issued at an early date, and other steps taken preliminary to pushing the enterprise. But as to crossing the town line west of the village we are unable to give our readers any definite information. It is safe to say however that the amount of cash invested by our citizens will have much to do in determining it.

The amount of local aid required from this point to the state line is $65,000 or $3,000 per mile. Jackson having guaranteed an amount sufficient to build the road north of here to that place. Hudson waxes enthusiastic over the matter, and feels confident she will derive great benefits from the new opening. Addison Courier.

Si Perkins is said to beat Uncle Alvin Joslin "all holler." Go and hear him and then decide for yourself.

Our Clinton collation is served up on the second page this week. We shall have plenty of room hereafter for an abundant supply of Clinton news and we believe our Clinton patrons will appreciate the change.

"Hearsays"—subject of sermon for the morning at 10:30 at the Universalist church. In the evening at 7 o'clock the second discourse of a series, "The God I Worship." Sunday School after the morning service 11:45. The public are cordially invited.

We have received from George Stinson & Co. of Portland, Maine, the well known Art Publishers, a magnificent full length, steel engraving of General Grant. It is after Anderson's celebrated photograph, which was made while the General was still in full vigor, and represents him in his sturdy, manly strength, as the people wish to remember him. It is, undoubtedly the best portrait ever made of the general.

Messrs. Stinson & Co. are in need of agents for several important, popular, new publications, and offer inducements that should be heeded by those in need of profitable work; those who write to them will receive, free, full particulars.

AN ASTONISHED TEUTON.

A thick-set, ruddy-faced, square-shouldered Teutonic husbandman from Podunk, arrived in town the other day, it being his first visit since the weather signals had been unfurled to the breeze. He was found by Deputy Sheriff Aten leaning against the lamp post at Strong & McNair's corner, gazing intently at the signals. The officer suspected him of being a suspect and was about to run him in, when Veitz aroused from his reverie and said:

"Mein frient, ish Pizmark tead?"

"I guess not, I havn't heard of it. No such news has reached my bailiwick."

"Ish dot repellion broke oud enny more?"

"No, sir, the war is over, you can rest easy on that score."

"Ish dot angil Kabriel gome mit his pig drumpet horn?"

"No, sir, the Salvation Army honored this town with a visit, but they have now folded their tents and gone."

"Dot flags, mein frient, dot flags, dot plue square und dose ret moon! Somedings awful haf happened, aint id?"

"Why, see here, stranger, you are behind the times. Those are the weather flags."

"Ish dot zo?"

"The principal weather office is located up in Dacota where they grind it out in large quantities and dispense it through the country at wholesale rates."

"Ish dot zo?"

"When we want rain the local weather clerk hangs out a blue star. When a cold wave is wanted, the clerk unfurls a blue square."

"Ish dot zo, mein frient? Podunk don'd got dot vedder offis, but mebbe Podunk must haf dot vlags. Ve'n dot Steffanoski poys stharts for dose shicken roosts, we vill pring oud dot cold vave, und freeze him. Mein Gott, but I vill be glerk of dot Podunk wedder offis pefore long, aint id?"

—Mr. Steger, our popular Photographer, speaks of opening an Art School in Tecumseh before long, as soon as he gets through with his Xmas work. We think it a great benefit to our town, and as he will teach new commencers free of charge, it will be well for all who will take an interest in it to see him in regard to it.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Among the many symptoms of Dyspepsia or indigestion the most prominent are: Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, with unsatisfied craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration, headache, and constipation. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high-living and rapid-eating American people. Alcohol and tobacco produce Dyspepsia; also, bad air, rapid eating, etc. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will cure the worst case, by regulating the bowels and toning up the digestive organs. Sold everywhere.

FEAR AND DISEASE.

The Former Invariably Invites Attacks of the Latter.

Some emotions accelerate the heart, quicken the action of the brain, give new strength and elasticity to the step, and greatly enliven the spirits—the effect being of brief duration. Others, like hope, for instance, have a similar effect much lower in degree, but much more prolonged. Still others have an opposite effect.

Among the last is fear. Many cases are on record in which it has resulted in sudden death. Under its influence, as is well known, the face often becomes pale, the heart beats violently, the breath is obstructed, the limbs tremble, the appetite is lost, and all other emotions are overcome. We speak of the man as paralyzed with fear. There is literal truth in this. The effect is due to the influence of the emotion on some one of the cerebral centers—the ganglia, or nerve masses, near the base of the brain, which govern the action of the various vital organs. This influence is, for the time, of a paralyzing nature. Hence the capillary blood-vessels near the surface are collapsed, and the blood is driven back on the heart, burdening both it and the lungs; while the secretion of the gastric juice is arrested by a paralysis of the great nerve—the pneumogastric—which supplies the stomach with its working force. Such a case is an extreme one, but it is the same in kind with fear in every degree. It lowers the tone of the system. It lessens the vitality. Even this condition is a diseased one, and if protracted, the system would, sooner or later, give way under it.

But the particular point we wish to make is that fear exposes even the most robust to the attacks of infectious diseases. The diseases are caused by minute organisms which enter the body through the stomach or lungs. They may be harmless if the stomach digests them, or if the body has its full power of resistance to infection. But just here is the danger from fear—it lessens the normal resistance of the system, and especially arrests the power of the stomach to secrete the gastric fluid. It puts the system for the time being, where it is left by debilitating diseases, by drinking habits, by over-eating, by excesses, by too continuous watching, or by anxious worry. If, therefore, the cholera invades America, or small-pox prevails, don't let us invite an attack by fear; but repel it by keeping about our daily vocations with a cheerful trust and a hand of help for others—having, of course, done our whole duty in the matter of hygiene.—Youth's Companion.

BLUE JEANS CARPETS.

Walls Covered With Cloth and Coffee-Sacking Now Quite the Thing.

"The very latest idea about fitting up a room is to hang the walls with cloth and cover the floor with other material than carpet and matting," said a lady living in a very fashionable dwelling on Dearborn avenue.

"You may not believe it," continued the speaker, but the prettiest kind of a room can be fixed up by simply using blue jeans, the cheap cotton cloth, you know, from which overalls are made, costing from fifteen to twenty cents a yard. It makes a splendid carpet. Come with me and I will show you the one I have just put down in our 'blue' room."

The reporter was led into a veritable blue room. The floor was carpeted with jeans of a dark-blue color, a shade very pleasing to the eye. Several handsome rugs of different shapes and sizes relieved the monotony in color which would otherwise have existed. The dado on the walls was also of the same material, viz.: jeans. It was tacked on in broad pleats in such a manner that the seams did not show, and was raised from the wall about half an inch by the use of narrow strips of wood underneath. A delicate shade of blue paper covered the wall above the dado. The reporter was told that in some cases the entire wall was hung with the same goods, and made very attractive by using different shades for the body and dado.

In another residence was seen a room furnished in the Japanese style. The entire wall was hung with much more expensive goods, containing a large per cent. of gilt thread. The frieze at the top was about eighteen inches deep, projecting three inches from the wall, and trimmed at the bottom with a heavy fringe. The effect was that of a short lambrequin all around the room. The curtains were of the same material and draped in the usual manner. A pagoda-like canopy that overhung the bed was made of Japanese cloth of a contrasting color. A stained-glass Japanese lantern surrounded the gas-jet in the center of the room. The cabinet above the fire-place was filled with odd oriental curios.

Another peculiar way of decorating the walls of dwellings is to cover them with burlap or coffee-sacking. This is painted with a bronze color. Cat-tails and bunches of dried grasses are tacked up in an irregular manner, so as to give the odd appearance which the style calls for.—Chicago News.

Generous Nellie Arthur.

We heard a pretty story about Nellie Arthur the other day. Nearly two years ago, while the ex-President was out driving with his daughter, the horses very nearly trampled upon a little crippled colored girl out by the Boundary. The child was not injured, but was badly frightened, and Miss Nellie's sympathies were much excited. The President gave the cripple's mother a five dollar bill, and considered the matter settled; but his daughter did not, and the next day sent out her solace in the form of a bouquet and a bundle of playthings. Seldom thereafter did the President's carriage go that way without bearing other gifts, and, although Miss Nellie is at school in New York, among new scenes and associations, she does not forget her protege, for a little while ago there came a package of playthings and confectionery by express for the cripple.—Washington Capital.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—The upper classmen of Princeton have formed a law and order society to prevent the hazing of freshmen.—N. Y. Tribune.

—An agitation to change the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church South is likely to result, it is thought, in a choice of Episcopal Methodist.—Chicago Herald.

—Father Knox, for fourteen years a Roman Catholic priest in New Brunswick, was recently received in the Episcopal fold at St. Louis as assistant rector of St. John's Church.—St. Louis Globe.

—The child is "father of the man," and the inverted scriptural text, parents obey your children, is accepted in a spirit of such religious resignation on the part of many fathers and mothers that their only privilege in matters of education is reduced to the one of duly paying the bills.—Boston Herald.

—The largest Synod in the Presbyterian Church is that of Pennsylvania, which reports this year 146,146 communicants. New York reports 139,048. Ohio comes next, with 71,039. New Jersey is fourth, with 43,870, and Illinois fifth, with 46,890.

—Reports from the colleges that have opened their fall terms indicate that the freshmen are above the average in physical strength. That is the opinion, at least, of the professor of athletics at Harvard, and he looks for an exception-year in sports.—N. Y. Times.

—The Russian Government has issued a decree making the Greek Church the established religion of the Baltic provinces. Protestantism will only be tolerated. Children born of mixed marriages are to be trained in the Greek Church. The decree excites great discontent among the German settlers.

—A Canadian medical authority has given the following as being safe periods of quarantine, which teachers should exact of pupils, who have suffered attacks of the diseases mentioned, before their return to school. Scarlet fever, eleven days; measles, sixteen; epidemic roseola, sixteen; chicken-pox, eighteen; small-pox, sixteen; mumps, twenty-one; whooping-cough, twenty-one; diphtheria, ten.

—A preacher at a camp-meeting fervidly said, when a proposition was made to shut the gates on Sunday: "Brethren, there are souls that will be damn'd if you don't hold over Sunday. They are almost persuaded by Saturday. Sunday will bring their convictions to a crisis. O! brethren, let us save them! Thousands, too, will come then that will come at no other time." The Christian Advocate makes the report, and its editor adds that by personal investigation he found out that the urgent speaker owned the refreshment stand.

—The Women's Temperance Christian Union of Boston has been instrumental in procuring laws in fourteen States for compulsory education in the effects of liquor on drinkers. The society now seems to feel the responsibility of indicating what the lessons ought to be. It has been decided that, in Massachusetts at least, children shall be instructed that alcohol is never desirable as an article of food; that any considerable indulgence in it is sure to be correspondingly injurious to the body, and that mental and moral ruin is bound to result from excess.—Boston Journal.

WIT AND WISDOM.

The Moon would be a good name for a quarterly magazine.

—The Waterbury Watch Company makes 300,000 watches a year. It would take a big thing to wind up that concern.—Lowell Courier.

—It is easy enough to tell what you know about everybody else, but hard to tell what everybody else knows about you.—Denver (Colo.) Journal of Commerce.

—The sleepy boy's thought:

"The Pilgrim Fathers! Where are they?"
The shouting schoolboy said.
While the sleepy boy in the corner replied,
"I think they must be dead."
—Chicago Sun.

—First Hen: "There comes the woman to drive us out of the garden." "Yes, and she's picking up a stone, too! Let's fly out, quick!" "No, no, stay here." "But she's aiming right for us." "Yes, and if we move we might get hit."—N. Y. Sun.

—A catastrophe—Going into a dry-goods store to flirt with the salesladies, and meeting your wife, who takes advantage of the situation by persuading you to look at those lovely silk dress patterns, which are so cheap, you know.—Boston Post.

—"Is to-day your birth-day, Mr. Gingerbread?" asked Johnny of the young man in the parlor. "No, Johnny. Why do you ask?" "Sis is going to make you a present. She said so." "Indeed. What did she say?" "She said you'd been coming here long enough, and that she'd give you the mitten to-night."—Chicago Tribune.

—It was a Boston girl who, having received a written invitation, out West, to ride a "burro," wrote him as follows: "I am invited to ride a 'burro.' This is a funny country. It is almost as strange to ride on a bureau, as it is to spell it that way, but these people are very unconventional, and do not care much for education."—Oil City Derrick.

—A New Yorker in looking for rooms for winter quarters struck a good-looking landlady on Shawmut avenue, and after terms were arranged for "board and lodging," remarked that he wanted something hot for supper, and was met with the reply that they always had it. On taking his seat last evening, with a slim-looking spread before him, he remarked to the girl that he expected something hot, when Bridget said: "Fot's the matter wid the tay?"—Boston Globe.

—"Clarence," said Miss Penelope Waldo, a Boston young woman, "didn't I hear you say that every time you go to the races you return home on Shank's horses?" "You did," said Clarence gloomily. "Well, don't you think, Clarence," continued Miss Penelope quietly, "since Mr. Shank is so kind that he would let you have his horses occasionally to take me for a drive?" And Clarence groaned in anguish as he reflected how modest and retiring Miss Waldo is and how utterly impossible it would be for him to disclose the identity of Mr. Shank.—N. Y. Life.

Harper's Bazar

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is the only paper in the world that combines the choicest literature and the finest art illustrations with the latest fashions and methods of household adornment. Its weekly illustrations and descriptions of the newest Paris and New York styles, with its useful pattern sheet supplements and cut patterns, by enabling mothers to make their own and save many times the cost of subscription. Papers on cooking, the management of servants, and housekeeping in its various details are invaluable practical. Much attention is given to the interesting topic of social etiquette, and its illustrations of art needlework are acknowledged to be unequalled. Its literary merit is of the highest excellence, and the delicate character of its humorous pictures has won for it the name of American Punch.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand which it has created stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bedsores, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every tube, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

HARVESTING TOBACCO.

How the Weed Is Cut, Dried and Assorted.

After the harvest is over, the time of the laborers is given up entirely to the tobacco, which has now grown to a fair size. Their first task is to "sucker" it—that is, cut away the shoots that spring up at the intersection of each leaf and the stalk, and which if left to grown would absorb half the strength of the plant. They also examine the leaves very carefully, to destroy the eggs and young of the tobacco-fly. Day after day they go over the same fields, first newly-laid eggs and newly-hatched young where only twelve hours before they brushed their counterparts off, to be trampled under foot. As this tobacco-fly, in Florida, has fade to the tough, heavy, covered with dark yellow spots, and when this appearance is still further developed the time for cutting has arrived, which generally is in the first months of summer, and always before frost, which is fatal to the as to every other weed. The plant is now about three feet in height, with eight or nine large leaves, the stalk having been broken off at the top in the second stage of its growth. On the appointed day a dozen or more men with coarse knives split the stalk of each plant straight down its middle to within half a foot of the ground. They then strike the plant from the hill and, lay it on one side. The leaves soon shrink under the rays of the sun and fall. One of the laborers who follow the cutters then takes it up and places it with nine of ten other plants on a stick, which is thrust through the angle formed by the two halves of the plant separated from each other except at one end. It is deposited with the rest in an open box ox-cart and transported to the barn. In the barn poles have been arranged in tiers from bottom to top to support the sticks; and when the building is full of tobacco the laborer in charge ignites the logs that fill parallel trenches in the dirt floor, and a high rate of temperature is soon produced, and is maintained for several days, during which a watch is kept to replenish the flames and prevent conflagration. As soon as the tobacco has changed from a deep green to a light brown, it is removed on a wet day to a general barn. The same process of curing is going on in many barns on the same plantation, and occasionally one is burned down; for the tobacco is very inflammable, a stray spark from below being sufficient to set the whole on fire.

The hands are as busy in winter in manipulating the tobacco, which has been stored away in one large barn, and preparing it for market, the first step toward which is to strip the leaves from the stalk and then carefully separate those of an inferior from those of a superior quality. Although there are many grades, the negroes are able to distinguish them at a glance and assort them accordingly. They are not engaged in this work of selection continuously from day to day, but at intervals, for they can handle the tobacco only when the weather is damp enough to moisten the leaf, otherwise it is so brittle that it would crack and fall to pieces under their touch. They like this work, for the barn is kept very comfortable by large stoves, they do not have to move from their seats, and they can all sit very sociably together, talking, laughing and singing. It contrasts very agreeably with other work which they are called upon to do—namely, the grubbing of new grounds, from which they shrink with unconcealed repugnance, for outside of a mine there is no kind of labor more arduous or exacting. The land cleared is that from which the original forest has been cut, leaving stumps thickly scattered over the surface, from which a heavy scrub-growth springs up. Active, quick and industrious as the negroes may be in the tobacco, corn or wheat fields, they show here great indolence, and move forward very slowly with their hoes, axes and picks, piling up, as they advance, masses of roots, saplings, stumps and brush, which, when dry, are set on fire and consumed. The soil exposed is a rich, but thin loam of decayed leaves, in which tobacco grows with luxuriance.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Bricks Made of Waste Sand.

Much is said in favor of the new kind of bricks made from the waste sands of glass factories, which often accumulate in such large quantities as to occasion much inconvenience. For utilization in this way, the sand is subjected to an immense hydraulic pressure, and then baked in furnaces at a high temperature, so as to produce blocks of various forms and dimensions, of a uniform color, which are composed of almost pure silex. The crushing load is from two to three tons per square inch. The bricks, when plunged in chlorhydric and sulphuric acid, show no trace of alteration. The produce is said to have remarkable solidity and tenacity; it is not affected by even the heaviest frost, or by the action of sun or rain; it resists very high temperatures, provided no flux is present; it is very light, its specific gravity being only 1.5; and, being of a fine white color, forms pleasing architectural combination with other materials.—N. Y. Sun.

—A popular physician was much pleased with a certain aerated water, and by his assiduous recommendations procured for it a celebrity it justly deserved. The doctor acted solely in the interests of humanity generally and expected no return. To his surprise there came one morning an effusive letter from the company stating that his recommendations had done them so much good that they "ventured to send him a hundred——" Here the page came to an end. "This will never do," said the doctor. "It is very kind, but I could not think of accepting anything." Here he turned the page and found the sentence ran—"of our circulars for distribution."—Medical and Surgical Reporter.

THE CLANNISH CHINESE.

A House-Keeper Discovers Why She Could Get No Chinaman to Stay in Her Employ.

A lady, recently returned from a long residence in California, said:

"I was constantly meeting with fresh examples of the strong clannish spirit prevalent among the Chinese at the trans-continental seaboard. On one occasion I conferred with a Chinaman in regard to taking the family wash by the month.

"'Twelve dolla,' he said.

"'Too much,' I replied, in his own dialect. 'Other Chinamen eight dolla.'

"'No, quickly. You pay Sing Lee ten dolla one day.' And I recalled that some time before, while living in a remote locality, I had indeed employed such an Oriental, retaining him only one month at that rate.

"Later, in keeping house, I had a Chinese cook, several in fact, one finally leaving me somewhat abruptly, on account of which I reissued the full month's wages. His first successor spent only a few hours in my house before he gravely announced:

"'Me go, me no stay.'

"Two finished each a day, and then departed with the same brief, emphatic declaration. Number four appeared quite satisfied for three days, but at the end of that time he, too, followed his predecessors. In some concern, I called in my husband's office boy, a bright young Chinese lad.

"'Ching Foo,' I asked, 'what is the matter? Chinaman no stay here.'

"'Ah,' he said, 'me know, may be,' and he went into my kitchen, whither I followed him, wholly perplexed. He looked carefully all about, peered into pots and kettles, upturned tubs and buckets, lifted lids, and turned over chairs, as if looking for something. When he pushed the clock from its place on the shelf he uttered a quick cry of discovery."

"'Lookee,' he said and pointed to a row of Chinese hieroglyphics on the back of the clock.

"Having them translated, I discovered that Sing Lee, my disaffected cook, had left his condemnation behind him.

"'She velly bad woman; she no payee,' he had written."—N. Y. Sun.

HE WAS THE FIFTH.

An Ancient Guy That Failed to Excite a Detroit Grocer.

A Michigan Avenue grocer whose family occupy rooms over the store was fumigating some bedding the other day in a vacant room, and after a time the smoke began to pour out of a broken pane which he had overlooked. A pedestrian saw the smoke and did not doubt that the place was on fire. It was a good chance for him to emulate the nonchalance of Mark Twain, and he suppressed his desire to yell and turn in an alarm and entered the store, took a chair by the stove and calmly remarked:

"Quite a change in the weather?"

"Yes."

"Don't look so much like an open winter as it did?"

"No."

"Trade pretty good?"

"Well, tolerably fair."

"This would be a bad morning to burn out?"

"It would that."

"I suppose that you are insured?"

"Not fully, but shall be to-morrow."

"I'm sorry that you delayed so long, for I came in to tell you that your whole upstairs has been on fire these last ten minutes!"

"Yes; thank you. Willie!"

"Yes, sir," responded the clerk.

"Make another mark on the cheese box! This is the fifth man who has came in with the same old guy this morning, and I expect at least half a dozen more!"

"But I tell you I saw smoke pouring from the window!" protested the stranger.

—"Exactly. Let her pour. I'm fumigating. Next!"

When the stranger entered the store he was six feet tall. When he came out he had lost five inches and was still shrinking, and such a look as he carried on his face would have frightened a hitching post.—Detroit Free Press.

AN ENJOYABLE TRIP.

A Sea-Sick Traveler's Blessed Season of Relief.

"Have I ever been to Yurrip?" exclaimed the middle-aged and bald-headed passenger; "should say I had. Half a dozen times. Like it? Rather. 'Tain't so much Yurrip I care for as the ocean voyages. How I do love those ocean trips, though!"

"Don't you get sea-sick?"

"Sea-sick? I should say I did. Why, I just lie in my berth five days out of the eight and hope the infernal ship will sink in ten miles of water. There seems to be a whole slaughter house inside of me. I feel like a sick egg. But I enjoy it, all the same, you bet.

"Enjoy a voyage under such circumstances. How do you make that out?"

"Well, you see, my wife she's always along with me. She gets sick, too—sicker'n I do. In fact, she gets so awful sick that she can't talk till after we've anchored on the other side, and if I were to try for a week I couldn't tell you what blessed days of relief they are for me."—Chicago Herald.

Old Tony Weller.

Old Mr. Weller was a real person, and we knew him. He was "Old Chumley" in the flesh, and drove the stage daily from Rochester to London and back again. Once when my father was in town, the sister next to me needing the overlooking of Sir James Clark, she and I were sent up to London under the care of Old Chumley. We were put inside at our own gates, and the good-natured red-faced old fellow came regularly to the door whenever we stopped to change horses or to water them to ask the little misses if they wanted anything, or how they found themselves.—Mrs. Lynn Linton, in Fortnightly Review.

NAVAL HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR.

A Full, Complete and Authentic History of the Marvelous Growth, Mighty Achievements, and Daring Deeds of our Navy during the Memorable Years of the Civil War. Written by Admiral David D. Porter, United States Navy.

This long looked for volume tells the Naval side of the story of the Civil war. It does for the Navy what Gen. Grant's "Personal Memoirs" does for the Army. Together these two unrivalled works give a most thrilling and authentic account of how the Great Battle was Fought, the Victory Won.

SKETCH OF ADMIRAL DAVID DIXON PORTER.

His grandfather was appointed by George Washington a Master in the American Navy during the Revolutionary War. His father, Captain David Porter, in the famous frigate Essex, captured the first man-of-war taken from the British in the war of 1812, and was Commander-in-chief of [illegible]

Admiral David Dixon Porter came of a race of naval heroes. He did his first service for Mexico but he afterward entered the United States service, and passed through all grades from Mid-shipman to Admiral. He assisted in the operations against Vera Cruz and gave new lustre to a name already synonymous with valor. His chief exploits, however, have been performed in this Grand Naval Civil War.

They began with the relief of Fort Pickens in Pensacola Harbor, and by the main defense of the Port of Wilmington, North Carolina. He commanded the mortar flotilla which reduced the forts guarding the approach to New Orleans, and after the capture of that city cooperated with the Army of General Grant in the capture of Vicksburg and the opening of the Mississippi. Wherever there was water enough to float a gunboat, the flag of the Union was carried by his command. He held a rank second only to the glorious Farragut, and on the death of that illustrious man succeeded him as admiral of the United States Navy, which position he now holds.

A MARVELOUS TALE.

Marvelous as it may seem, the story of hazards and achievments in the Army has been told by hundreds of writers, while the tenfold more perilous duties and grand victories of the Navy have hitherto been but briefly sketched. But for the Navy, the Union would have been destroyed by the aid of foreign sympathizers pouring in money, provisions, and munitions of war to the Confederacy. The Navy captured New Orleans, the the great city of the South, controlling the entrance to the Mississippi River, and but for the Navy, Grant could not have taken Vicksburg nor operated successfully as he did, against Richmond.

The growth of our Navy was one of the marvels of the age, and it was a power of no small magnitude in crushing the Rebellion. It was second only to the Army itself, and was absolutely indispensable to the efficiency of the latter, and has a glorious record in the salvation of the Nation.

LOOK AT THE FIGURES.

It cost the Government, in round numbers, $480,000,000, or $120,000,000 for each year of the war, or $10,000,000 per month, or nearly a third of a million of dollars for every day of the war.

It employed over six hundred vessels of war and over 50,000 men, which force greatly exceed that of any other nation in the world.

It guarded over 7,000 miles of coast, including bays, rivers, etc., effectually preventing the importation of arms and munitions of war, and so compelling the earlier exhaustion of the Confederate forces.

It captured the immense number of 1,164 blockade runners, many of which were fine steamers, a ratio of nearly 200 captures per annum, or almost one each day during the entire war. The money value of its captures was at least $50,000,000, or $15,000,000 worth for each year of the war, and one and a quarter millions in value for each month of the war, from first to last.

It cooperated with the Army wherever there was water enough to float a gunboat, while on the high seas, our Navy covered itself with glory. The river work of the Navy on the Potomac, the York, the James, and the Mississippi, with its branches; the coast-line work, from the Chesapeake to the Mississippi, and its work on the high seas, totally eclipse in martial valor and brilliant successes all other naval achievements of the world. While history records the names of Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Island No. 10, Vicksburg, Port Hudson, Fort Jackson, Fort St. Philip, Mobile Bay, Hatteras Inlet, Port Royal, Fort Fisher, and a score more of such famous names, the American Navy will be universally honored; while such deeds as the sinking of the "Alabama" in square naval battle will ever be named among the most brilliant victories of any age.

It opened the harbors by the perilous work of removing obstructions, torpedoes, etc., and by utterly destroying the hostile batteries which commanded them. It held in check the treasonable elements of many a city and rural section while a dreaded gunboat quietly lay before it; in short, it displayed heroism of the noblest type and made our reputation on the seas equal that of any nation.

Such was the value of the Navy in the great struggle that General Grant acknowledged the immense importance of its co-operation in the following words:

"Without the help of the Navy I could not have succeeded at Vicksburg with three times the number of men; in fact, without the Navy I could not have succeeded at all."

Joseph Sherman, a wealthy bachelor of 82 and Mrs. Gill, a widow of 78, were married at Belmont last week. Of course the boys could not let such an occasion pass without a charivari.

A MARRIAGE POSTPONED.

And now a Lenawee county girl has been making a fool of herself the following taken from the Detroit Tribune abundantly shows. Matrimonial correspondence of this character is a dangerous weapon to handle. It generally turns out to be a boomerang:

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 6.—A very interesting episode has come to the observation of your correspondent, fully illustrating the evils arising from strangers corresponding. A beautiful and intelligent young lady stepped from a train at Canisteo yesterday, inquired the way to the residence of George Benjamin who lives in the town of Hartsville, Steuben county, N. Y., and hurriedly hired a livery man to take her to the place. She returned in the afternoon a sadder but wiser young lady, and told her experience as follows:

Several months ago, she said, she answered the advertisement of a single young handsome man, who desired an interchange of views with a view to matrimony. The lady, who is a young and handsome daughter of wealthy parents at Rollin, Lenawee county, Mich., and whose name is Theda A. Strumbll, answered Benjamin's communication and correspondence was opened and kept up till her visit last yesterday. Although they had never met, yet they became engaged and were to have been married Wednesday last at her home. He had her picture, but she had none of him, but he had sent her a description of himself, saying he had black eyes, hair and mustache and was good looking.

He failed to put in an appearance on the day set for the marriage, and instead she received a telegram from his sister, saying, "George was unable to come as he was very low with typhoid fever and that he was continually asking for her, and if she would consent to come to Hartsville it might be the means of saving his precious life. When she arrived at the residence of her affianced instead of finding a black haired, and mustached youth, she found an old, white haired, and well stricken, a cockeyed, pigeon toed chap, who was not and had not been sick, and who bore the name of George Benjamin, but who endeavored to convince her that he was not the sneak with whom she had been corresponding and who, by the aid of his sister, had got her to Hartsville on a fool's errand. She utterly refused to have anything to do with him, and demanded her letters and photograph which he refused to return. The young lady brooding over her disappointment, trouble and expense, took the earliest train for her home.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that the American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief; and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen bosom. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time. Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book club or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and china may be bought, but books must be hired for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

ESTATE OF SANFORD HAUSE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 11th day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Sanford Hause, an insane person.

On reading and filing the petition of Frederick B. Wood and Charles Burridge alleging that they are executors of the last will and testament of Edwin B. Wood deceased, late guardian of said ward, that said Sanford Hause has lately departed this life, that Frederick B. Wood is administrator on the estate of said Sanford Hause deceased, and praying for the allowance of said last guardians final account rendered by them as such executor, that the property in their hands belonging to the estate of said ward may be transferred to said administrator and that the estate of said Edwin B. Wood may be discharged from all further liability concerning said guardianship, and for such other order as to this court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 8th day of February next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said Sanford Hause deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden, at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

The CENTURY
FOR 1885-86.

The remarkable interest in the War Papers and in the many timely articles and strong serial features published recently in THE CENTURY has given that magazine a regular circulation of

MORE THAN 200,000 COPIES MONTHLY.

Among the features for the coming volume, which began with the November number, are

THE WAR PAPERS
BY GENERAL GRANT AND OTHERS.

These will be continued (most of them illustrated) until the chief events of civil war have been described by leading participants on both sides. General Grant's papers include descriptions of the battles of Chattanooga and the Wilderness. General McClellan will write of Antietam, General D. H. Hill of Shiloh, Generals Pope, Longstreet and others of the Second Bull Run, etc. Novel engagements will be described. The Recollections of Private and special war papers will be features of the year.

SERIAL STORIES BY
W. D. HOWELLS, MARY HALLOCK FOOTE, AND GEO. W. CABLE.

SHORT STORIES
By Frank R. Stockton, Mrs. Helen Jackson (H. H.), Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote, Joel Chandler Harris, Richard M. Johnson and others.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS

Will be kept up to the standard which has made THE CENTURY pre-eminently the illustrated magazine.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RACKET

Roads are in a fine condition for snow.

The ice harvest has begun and half a fine quality being about 10 inches thick.

Colwell & Dawson completed a [illegible] dek of Pennington's corners last Week.

Quite a number went to Tecumseh Friday afternoon to attend the funeral of Mrs. Chas. Belmont, she being a schoolmate of the young people here.

John Boyd is unloading several thousand brick shipped here to him from Detroit. He expects to erect a fine residence the coming season.

The choir will meet at the home of Mrs. Susan Clark next Saturday evening for practice. A full attendance is desired.

Alfred Lawton is attending court at Adrian this week as a juryman this term.

Miss Rhoda Arner called on Mrs. Put Woodward and stayed all night with Miss Libbie Emmonds, of Tecumseh, Friday night.

Miss Cora Jones, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday Sunday and Monday with Miss Lou Arner.

Sammie Arner has gone to Britton to practice telegraphy with Agt. Clark, at Britton.

Those that took in Si Perkins at Tecumseh Friday night were well pleased with the entertainment.

Geo. W. Arner left Monday noon for Wilders a station on the M. & O. to accept the position as Agt. there. He has our best wishes for success.

We accepted an invitation and last Thursday we availed ourselves of the pleasure and hitched to the large wagon and in company with Misses, Belle Barlow, Ada Linn, Ada Loree, Allie Arner, Rhoda and Lou Arner, drove out to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams and spent the day very pleasantly.

ONSTED ODDS.

Charles Wooden ships stock every Saturday.

Mr. M. Reed was confined to his house Sunday from the effects of an aching tooth.

E. Priest and wife invited a number of friends to their house last Friday night to attend a dance. Those present report a pleasant time.

Mrs. Henry Reed was taken sick, suddenly, last Thursday morning. At first her life was despaired of, but under the care of Dr. G. W. Ross she is rapidly recovering.

It is rumored that E. C. Spaulding, who recently went from Iona to Greenco, would like to be located in Onsted again.

Curtis & Kane opened their new store, Monday. They have a fine store well finished, and filled with a good stock of drugs, groceries, and gentlemen's furnishing goods. This makes five stores for Onsted. Pretty good for a town but two years old.

On Tuesday the 12th inst., occurred the twenty-first birthday of George B. Onsted. George was somewhat surprised in the early part of the evening by the arrival of a large number of friends. A pleasant time was had by all present. As a reminder of the occasion, a handsome photograph album, a china cup and saucer, and a box of cigars, were left.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF

There is but little news in these parts for your correspondent to send forth but such as I have will give it thee. On Wednesday 13th, Mrs. Nicholas Stafford departed this life at the age of 83. The funeral was held at the Catholic Church, on Friday at nine o'clock A. M. She has been a great sufferer for the past twelve years with rheumatism. She leaves one son and daughter who are prominent citizens of the town. Thus are passing away the old pioneers of the township.

John B. Ayres has been confined to his bed by sickness the past week, but is now on the mend.

Wm. J. Ayres has left town to attend to legal matters appertaining to the county; he is selected as a juror.

The evening meetings at the church have not been as well attended as they should have been; they are to be continued this week.

On Friday evening there is to be a masquerade at the Springville rink.

The monthly meeting of the ladies missionary society was held at Mrs. Wm. Shultis, on Wednesday last, and was well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Brainard are enjoying themselves at their cosey residence—hope they may live long to enjoy the same.

MACON MUSIC

Prof. J. Travis, of North Adams, visited his parents lately.

Milton Smith son of Dr. William Smith of Sioux city, Iowa, is visiting friends in this community.

Sylvanus Travis has been appointed commissioner at this place, and will enter upon the duties of his office when his commission arrives.

Rev. Thos. Pierce is conducting a series of meetings at the M. E. church here.

We infer that the late cold wave passed Mich. without making a call, owing to the fact that the agents of the patent weather strips are out in force. There has been quite an exodus from our vicinity of late and they propose to revive the prospects of the blizzard element. Mich. ought to vote to the business. To be deprived of a blizzard when Florida, Texas and other [illegible] are basking in the breath of one of these cheering visitors is too much of an imposition. It is hardly possible that the Administration is at fault in showering these attentions on favorite Southern localities since Dakota ever comes in for a share of the favors in the way of blizzards which is about all that Dakota may expect in the way of favors from this administration evidently.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The adjournment of school from Friday till Monday gave most of the students a chance to visit their homes. Quarterly meeting generally has but a small representation from the Seminary.

Skating has been the sport of the past week. Young people from the neighborhood often indulge. All seem to enjoy themselves. One skater who has been severely bitten by Jack Frost proposes to be vaccinated to provide against any dangerous developments.

We were disappointed in not having Dr. Dougan Clark, of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., to lecture to us the latter part of last week. Extreme cold weather and a snow blockade detained the gentleman. His visit is not given up, but is simply put off for a while.

Arthur Green and wife of N. Y. are expected home from their wedding tour in about two weeks. Their stay has already been protracted longer than they at first intended. We presume Arthur is having a good time and is in no hurry to settle down to the monotonous work of feeding stock this cold weather.

The board of managers held a recent meeting at the Seminary, at which they elected the committee for the ensuing year. We understand that Mr. Harkness and wife have consented to remain another year in their present position, and that the other officers have not yet been chosen.

The milder winter and larger boiler now in use have greatly decreased the consumption of coal. Thus far the amount consumed is little more than one half that burned last year. This, taken together with the lower price paid for coal, will make a considerable reduction in the expenses of the school.

The neighborhood literary society, which, on the account of bad weather was adjourned two weeks ago, will meet at the residence of Isaac Mosher next Saturday evening. The author for discussion that evening is Washington Irving. A debate will close the exercises.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Farmers are selling everything they can rake and scrape to pay their rent. Our township treasurer says there is about $1,600 yet unpaid. The next public institution should be a farmer's home.

Almost a fire at our school house last Thursday. One of the boys carelessly hung up his coat so that it fell into the ash pail which sat in the closet. The coat and boy's dinner was burned up. Discovery was made just as the flames were hitching on to other garments, but in time to prevent further damage.

The young folks socialized at Mr. Climer's last Wednesday night. Also, at "Sam" Stewart's Friday night.

Successful installation meeting at Macon Grange last Friday; Mr. Graves of Palmyra did the talking.

G. & O. W. Fulkerson's orchestra serenaded E. B. Olds, Monday night.

"Bay" Wiggins went to Ypsilanti on business Monday.

C. E. Bacon and wife have returned from their visit among friends in Ohio. One of their horses driven to meet them at the train in Milan, was taken sick and died the next day. They have also lost a full Holstien calf, valued at $100.

Rosa Paslick, (R. K.) is giving music lessons.

Open grange literary Friday evening the 29th.

A. McHaney has lost a horse.

Our mail carrier would like in turn the many of the mail he has run into him Monday, on his way to Lake Ridge. He thinks he needs sympathy in regard to the rights of the U. S. road.

Mrs. P. Moore and first husband for Mrs. L. Haight of Detroit, are now at Macon.

TIPTON TOPICS.

The Tecumseh weather does not suit at all up this way. Tipton never will take anything second hand, so we are to have a weather signal of our own that will get up weather to our taste.

Another funeral in our midst. Mr. Herberson of Utah, was brought to the home of his father to be buried. Rev. A. Hemenway officiated at the sermon and the corpse was taken to Tecumseh for burial. Mrs. Herberson who came back with the body of her husband intends visiting friends in Indiana before she returns to her home in the west. He leaves several children. Although Mrs. Herberson is a stranger here she has the sympathy of the entire community.

G. W. Luce and Bert VanNess paid a flying visit to Adrian on Wednesday last. Any one having ridden with the former gentleman will realize that it would be a flying one.

Miss Hattie Hendricks has been spending several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Eugene Camburn.

Miss Tinnie VanValkenburg is attending school in Addison this winter.

It is announced that the subject of "Amusements" will be spoken upon at the M. E. church next sabbath.

A SAD DEATH.

Harry Wishard, son of the Rev. S. E. Wishard, a former pastor of the Battle Creek Congregational church, was killed by the Apaches December 19. Young Wishard was a member of the Eighth United States cavalry.—Detroit Evening Journal.

Rev. Mr. Wishard was for three or four years pastor of the Presbyterian church of this village. He was settled here about fifteen years ago.—These additional particulars are taken from the Danville, Kentucky, Advocate.

Following the first news concerning the death of Harry Wishard, these additional particulars have been gleaned from telegrams: He was a member of C. Troop of 8th U. S. Cavalry. On the 19th of December, 1885, about two o'clock, P. M. as a part of the troop, about thirty, were passing through a deep defile, they were fired on by concealed hostiles of the Apache Indians. The Company was thrown into confusion, and their horses became unmanageable. Four privates, of which Harry Wishard was one, were instantly killed, and two officers with them. Two other officers were wounded. The Troop carried off their wounded and cared for them. They then dismounted and returned cautiously. The Indians had fled after the first fire. The dead were not mutilated, as is the custom of the Indians. The event occurred near White House, west of Silver City, Grant county, the extreme southwestern county of New Mexico.

The auction sale of the old county building and furniture came off yesterday afternoon, according to announcement. Mr. J. R. Bennett acted as auctioneer, and the sale was conducted as already stated, under the auspices of the supervisors' committee on public buildings, of which Mr. J. H. Warren is chairman. The building was sold to Mr. Joseph Mattausch for $100, and it is to be removed by the first of April. The contents of the building were sold to various parties for $90. Among the old papers found in rummaging about the place were a number of the canceled bounty bonds issued by the county, in 1863, to raise money to encourage enlistment into the army. The bonds were printed at the Expositor office, and were signed by Israel S. Hodges, chairman of board of supervisors, and Leander Kimball, county clerk. They drew eight per cent. interest and were payable Feb. 1st, 1886.—Adrian Times.

A Hudson man recently stopped in a certain village in the second congressional district, and was entertained with an account of a minister who formerly lived in Hudson. It seems that the reverend gentleman was making pastoral calls in the country, and while eating dinner remarked that the climate in that vicinity seemed to be very healthy. The family was of course flattered, and said there was very little sickness. "Yes," said the preacher, "people seem to be long lived, horses live to a good old age, cows seem to live always, and even chickens do not seem to die." He remained the next day, had chicken for dinner, and whenever he stops at that place a chicken or two always dies, and appears on the table when dinner is announced. The minister of course feasts, and thinks the hint equal to the parable of the fatted calf.—Hudson Post.

DEATH FROM COAL GAS.

The following sad account is taken from the Adrian Times of last Monday:

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Campsie, of Church street, were the victims of coal gas, Saturday night. It has long been the custom of Mr. Campsie to stop into the house of Thomas Watson and family every Sunday morning for a friendly chat. Yesterday morning he failed to do so, and his absence caused considerable remark. Knowing that Mrs. Campsie has been ill, from catarrhal consumption for a long time, it was presumed that Mr. Campsie's absence was the result of a bad turn in her case. With a view to render some assistance, if that were the case, Joseph Baxter visited the Campsie house at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and found the door locked. Through the window he could see a lighted lamp. His suspicions being aroused, he made his way to Mr. Campsie's bed room window through which he discovered that the lady was dead or nearly so, and he, accordingly, gave the alarm. The door was then broken open, when the house was found filled with gas, and Mr. and Mrs. Campsie in the last stages of asphyxiation. From the appearance of the house it was thought that Mr. Campsie arose during the night to prepare and give his wife some medicine, and having removed the teakettle from the coal stove, forgot to replace it, and so gave the gas an opportunity to escape with fatal freedom. Dr. Todd, and Mr. Campsie's son, Robert, were at once summoned, and later other medical aid reached the scene. Everything possible was done to revive the sufferers but without avail. At about two o'clock this morning Mrs. Campsie died. Mr. Campsie lingered until 12:30 this afternoon when he, too, passed away. One peculiar feature in the case was noticed by the discoverers of the terrible affair. The house plants in the building were badly poisoned and withered, while a canary bird hanging in his cage near the stove was as lively and healthy as could be.

Mr. and Mrs. Campsie were each 59 years old. She was born in Scotland, and he first saw the light in Buenos Ayres, A. R. He was of Scotch parentage, and he subsequently returned to Scotland, where he was married. He came to America with his young bride about 38 years ago.

The unfortunate couple have two sons and a daughter; Robert and Tom of this city, and Mrs. Robert Holmes, of Fayette. Mr. Campsie was a member of the workingmen's association, and the family will receive the death benefit for each from that association. He was also insured for $1,000 in the Hillsdale mutual insurance association and we understand was also insured in a Brooklyn insurance company.

MICH STATE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

The winter meeting of the Michigan state horticultural society will convene at the city of Adrian, opening with an evening session Tuesday, February 9, 1886, and closing with a morning session on February 11.

The convention is called at Adrian in acceptance of an invitation from the Lenawee county horticultural society, and all delegates who are members of the state horticultural society or its branches, will be entertained by our Adrian friends.

The headquarters of the executive board will be at the Central house, where all who prefer will be accommodated at greatly reduced rates.

Mr. H. E. Vanderman, of Kansas, the recently appointed pomologist of the department of agriculture at Washington, will be present at the meeting, to assist in the discussions.

Delegations from Indiana and Ohio horticultural societies will be in attendance, and it is earnestly desired, that aside from the local attendance from the near counties, there should be good delegations from as many of our auxiliary societies as possible.

For railway rates and other information, address Secretary Garfield, at Grand Rapids, at once.

Following is the scheme of topics:

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9.

7 P. M. Address of welcome and response. Management of local horticultural societies. Methods of purchasing and selling plants and trees. Cooperative value. The best way. Announcement of committees.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10.

9:30 A. M. Fertilizers—for the orchard, the garden, the small fruit plantation. Green manuring. Commercial fertilizers. Special manures for special crops. Enriching lawns. Methods of applying fertilizers.

11:30 A. M. The relation of bees to horticulture, benefits and injuries.

AFTERNOON.

1:30 P. M. Lawns and lawn bedding. Shrubs and their uses. Making walks and drives. Trees in and out of place. Selection and management of house plants. Sizes of pots to use, soil, drainage. Overcoming difficulties in living rooms. Managing the insects. House plants in and out of place.

4:15 P. M. Orchard drainage. Is it practicable? How to overcome difficulties.

THE WONDER

Is growing universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for Hood's Sarsaparilla. But, my friend, if you will only call at our counter a week and hear those who are using it, the wonder would appear as clear as the noonday sun. The real curative power of Hood's Sarsaparilla demonstrates itself in the many cures it is daily effecting. We would ask, we might get tired of hearing a fractional part of the testimony we receive every day, if you would only come more carefully and read upon the whole system, the functions of the blood, and the nerves, which it so powerfully controls.

Yours Truly,
A. L. BINCKLEY,
Nos. 221 Broadway, Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 21, 1886.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has opened an attack upon the administration. Cleveland was surely born under a lucky star. If he can secure the enmity of the coal oil gang of Ohio, he will easily carry the state at the next election.

Mrs. Fadover has a bad cold and cannot speak above a whisper, but she maintains—so Fadover informs us—that it is too early yet to plant green peas, and that plumbers will have plenty of business during the next ten days.

Sam. Jones and Sam Small, the Georgia revivalists, are now engaged in a gospel campaign at Cincinnati.—They will find that special field white unto the harvest. The city of beer and ballot box stuffing certainly needs regeneration.

A new telephone company has been organized at Chicago, with ample capital. It will use the Gray system and will establish exchanges at once in all the principal cities of the northwest. A rival telephone company would be a great benefit to the public.

John Kelly, the great Tammany chieftain, is gradually sinking, and his death may occur at any time. As the leader of the most powerful political organization in this country, he has filled a commanding position in politics during the past ten or twelve years.

In speaking of the interchange of ministers and revivalists between the North and the South, the Atlanta Journal gives expression to this significant sentence: "We cheerfully give Sam Jones and Sam Small to labor at the North in exchange for the services of Moody and Sankey."

The Connecticut clock factory has pranced clear across the Wolverine state and located at Rock Island, Ill. New Haven clocks and wooden nutmegs both grow in the same latitude, and it is very doubtful whether either of them would flourish in Michigan soil. Let the "suckers" have the clock factory.

We do not lay claim to any superior wisdom on the currency question, but much of the discussion now wasted on that question seems to us entirely irrelevant. Why not give the people the silver dollar in justice to the debtor classes? Why not make the silver dollar worth one hundred cents, and thus shun the evils of a depreciated currency?

John W. Bookwalter, the millionaire manufacturer of Springfield, O., has lately returned home from a lengthy trip in Europe. He has become a strong free trader during his visit abroad. He has become convinced that what the manufacturers of this country need is a foreign market, which they cannot obtain until the barriers of the present tariff are thrown down.

Here is a chance for Congressman Eldredge to earn the everlasting gratitude of his constituents, and perhaps give his individual bank account a good boost besides. Let him secure an appropriation in the river and harbor bill of $50,000 or so to improve the navigation of Devil's lake and deepen and straighten the channel between that body of water and Round lake. Toledo has a straight channel project on hand. Give Lenawee county a straight channel, too.—Why should Ohio have everything?

The Springville correspondent of the Adrian Press says:

Henry Mensing has sold the cider mill and Fred Groger will hereafter be the proprietor, but before the sale there was a complaint made to the board of health to compel Mr. Mensing to remove the pumice back of the mill and Henry has been complying with their requisition for the past week. We expect the next move taken in this direction will be to stop the manufacture of cider in this place, as it certainly stirs up the same disagreeable odor of which they have complained. This is the only institution remaining in the village which affords any employment and the inhabitants should make the proprietor all the trouble and expense possible, so he can't afford to do business here, and then we can enjoy peace and pauperism.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMERS CLUB

The club met Jan. 13th, at the residence of H. Hoag. There was a large attendance and the literary program was good. In addition to the regular programme, Miss Lida Fisher, Fred and Ray Hanford, and Mabel Wood, favored the club with a dialogue, which was well acted.

After this the question, "Does it pay to keep thoroughbred stock," was taken up.

President Hurry. I am not a thoroughbred man, and having had mixed experience with thoroughbred stock and what I have had has not been satisfactory. I always liked the looks of a nice herd of thoroughbreds, and [illegible] but my mother advised me to keep the money and I did. After I was married I got the blooded stock fever again, but my wife advised me not to invest, and I took her advise, and I am glad to day that I did. I think a man has to tell too many white lies to sell blooded stock, and this I cannot afford to do. I think that for any man to make a success in raising thoroughbred stock he should be brought up to it, or make a specialty of it. I have had but few thoroughbreds. Bought a heifer that looked fine, had a good pedigree and was recommended very highly, but she was not good for milk. I have noticed that most of the blooded stock men keep an old native cow or two. They say it is to show the difference in the stock, but if the truth was known it is to make the butter for the family and raise the thoroughbred calves. In touching on sheep I know that I am on forbidden grounds, but I have failed to see a thoroughbred sheep that would do as well as a good grade with the same care, and the former will not take common fare and live. I do not think that a farmer can get the same sheep to shear half as much as a breeder will; he cannot get as much dirt and grease in the wool. The fleece of the thoroughbred sheep is two thirds dirt. I like to raise something besides dirt, and had rather shear a sheep with a fleece of 6 or 7 lbs. of nice clean wool, that would bring 32cts. than one of 9 or 10 lbs. of dirt, grease, etc., that would not bring 20c. I have had a little experience in thoroughbred registered hogs, but could not raise corn enough to fatten them. I think that blooded stock is something like Bohemian oats: all they are good for is to sell.

W. S. Osborn: I am proud of good stock, and like to show my friends a good flock of thoroughbred sheep, that are just what they are represented to be. If it was not for the thoroughbreds where would you get your good grades? What do the buyers seek but the best, and where do you find the best but in a thoroughbred? All men do not succeed in any business, nor will all men succeed in thoroughbred stock raising. Most men will not give it the time or money it requires. A man to make thoroughbred cattle raising a success should have a large farm, and make large sales, and then he can afford to give it the time required. With horses the thoroughbreds are the ones that bring the money.

H. Wilson. I cannot agree with Mr. Hurry that common stock pays as well as blooded stock. I do not think that the hogs that used to be raised, that would slide through the cracks of the fence, or the sheep that would jump seven rails, ever brought in as much profit as the thoroughbred hogs and sheep we are raising now, and I find that my thoroughbred hogs do better than grades. I do not think that the state of Michigan would have been worth half as much as she is today if it had not been for her thoroughbred stock. When I commenced in the sheep business I had $200, which I gave with my note of $800 for one-third interest in a flock of thoroughbred sheep. In two years I cleared enough to pay the note and had the sheep left. I believe that a man can be honest and raise blooded stock, and need not lie to sell them. Oil makes the wool better; an oily fleece is better than a dry harsh one even if it does clean away more. Ohio has more thoroughbred sheep than Michigan, and gets better prices for her wool. Australia has the best flocks of high grade sheep, and her wool brings the highest prices. It is admitted by all that it pays to use thoroughbred sires which we could not do without. In a written article Mr. Fay Depuy claimed that the grades took the premiums over the thoroughbreds at the Chicago Fat Stock Show, and that they would do it every time when stock men, not pedigree, are judges.

Mr. M. Wilson: I have seen some of the wild hogs in the woods forty years ago that looked as good as any of the registered hogs they raise now. I have had good success with common stock, and think that a good cornfield will make good stock.

President Hurry. I do not want it understood that I recommend raising scrub stock, but believe that good grades will pay the best. While some may make it pay to raise thoroughbred stock, I cannot.

After intermission the committee on program reported the following for next meeting, Jan. 27th, at Wm. J. Waldron's.

Music—Poucher Band.
Select Reading—Mr. B. Hurry.
Essay—Adah Waldron.
Chip Basket—Mrs. H. Hoag.

Recitation—Ella Munger.
Question: "How can corn be raised with the most profit?" Opened by W. B. Keyser.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15, 1886.

For the first time during the present session of Congress the House of Representatives has, this week, settled down to work. Since Congress met nearly six weeks ago, it has spent the time discussing new rules, waiting for the announcement of committees, and voting to adjourn every day or two for a recess of, greater or less length. While this cackled, nearly four thousand bills and resolutions were laid upon the speaker's table and are now awaiting the action of the various Committees. Just think of four thousand bills in the House again already and more to come, on [illegible]

This flood of bills reminds me that the rules have not been changed half as much as is necessary yet, and that no abuse needs investigation so much as Congress itself. About three fourths of these bills are little measures and petty private claims which should never go to Congress at all. No attention could possibly be paid to half of them under any circumstances, but it is an iniquitous waste of the peoples' time for Congress even to read the titles of the measures.

Senator Hoar has proposed that the time for the meeting of Congress shall be changed, so as to give more weeks for needed legislation, especially during the second session, which meets on the first Monday in December and adjourns by law on the ensuing fourth of March. Congress never sits more than ten months in all, though paid for two full years of service. Still, much more work could be accomplished in this length of time if members would attend to the duties for which they are paid by remaining at their desks during business hours. And this growing abuse of absenteeism is the one to which I referred above, and for which some remedy will have to be demanded sooner or later. The journals of the Senate and House show culpable neglect in this respect, and prove that the most important appropriation bills are sometimes passed without the recorded presence of a quorum in either body.

Then, "pairing," as it is called, is a device for neutralizing votes, and sheltering our statesmen from the penalty of losing their pay for non-attendance at the daily sessions. This plan of dodging the record has become distressingly prevalent. When a vote is in progress in either branch of Congress, a Senator or Representative will often say, "I am paired with Mr. ——." That is to say if Mr. —— votes yes, he votes no, and vice versa.

Oratory has been expended during the week, on the subjects of national monuments and the Army in the Senate, and on Silver in both Houses. Senator Manderson of Nebraska spoke in behalf of Army reform. Senator Blair of N. H., proposed that monuments be erected to Abraham Lincoln and General Grant. Senators Coke of Tex., Brown of Ga., Vance of N. C., Pugh of Ala., and representative Reagan of Tex., all added their contribution to the fund of information on the silver question. All of them differ from the President with regard to money, and all advocated continued coinage. The agitation of the silver question is likely to continue in both Houses of Congress for some weeks yet, if not, at intervals, through the entire session. A late canvass among Senators and Members however, indicates that no measure calculated to interrupt the coinage of silver dollars is likely to pass either the Senate or House.

Moral ideas are notably popular in the Senate now: a great deal of moral legislation having been proposed this session. Senator Plumb of Kansas, is going to ask the Senate to provide for a new article of war, which shall forbid any officer of the Army, and private soldiers as well, to gamble for any stake, however small, whether on duty or on furlough.

Senator Blair who is addicted to formulating measures for the promotion of morality, is now preparing a bill against whiskey and tobacco. He proposes that special instructors be employed in the schools of the District of Columbia, to demonstrate to the children the physical injury which arises from the use of liquor or tobacco in any of their forms. He proposes to have this novel plan tried here first, and if it works satisfactorily, he hopes to see it adopted by the other States.

The Senate has confirmed a long list of the President's important recess nominations without opposition. Special cases will doubtless arouse controversy, but most of the names will go through without objection. In adopting this dignified course the Republican Senators fortify themselves in a way to reject consistently nominations in cases where they feel called upon to do so.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites.

Very Palatable and Efficacious in Wasting Diseases. Dr. C. T. Bromser, Rochester says: "After having used Scott's Emulsion with decided benefit upon myself, I have taken great pleasure in recommending it since in the various conditions of wasting in which it is indicated."

MICHIGAN MONOGRAMS.

Henry Holcomb's trial and acquittal cost Jackson county $2,500.

E. D. Allen, of Detroit, proposes to establish stove works at Port Huron if a stock company can be formed.

A branch of the catholic mutual benevolent association with forty members, was organized in Battle Creek last week.

The jury which acquitted Dan. Holcomb of conspiracy in the Crotch murder, held a reunion at Jackson on Thursday evening.

Herman Chaffee employed at Rapp's mill, near Schoolcraft, fell against the circular saw last week and his mouth was cut on either side to hipbone.

A verdict of $500 for slander was secured last week at Grand Rapids by Kate Elmsdorf against Daniel G. Garnsey, who accused her of taking a watch and chain from his room.

George Robinson, the adjutant of the L. B. Quackenbush post, G. A. R., of Owosso, fell on the sidewalk and dislocated his right ankle and broke the leg just above the ankle joint.

A large number of very fine fish are now being caught in Houghton lake, weighing from ten to forty pounds. The catch consists of pickerel and muskalonge. They are taken through the ice.

John Raymond, of East Saginaw, was killed by a falling tree at John C. Brown's camp, on the Au Gres river Friday. Raymond was 28 years old, and leaves a widow and two children.

Nathaniel Wilson, of Bloomingdale, who left for California in 1853, and from whom no word was received since 1863, recently returned to the scene of his former residence in Van Buren county.

Revival meetings are in progress at Coldwater, and deep interest is manifested by sinners. A number of conversions are reported. Corunna likewise has an interesting big meeting, and 50 sinners have been saved.

The new University tower clock is being set up in the library tower at Ann Arbor. The clock cost $2,000 and strikes the hours, the quarters, and the Cambridge peal of four bells, morning and evening. It will be running in two weeks.

Lisle Crane, teacher of the Bridgewater school, had just comfortably resigned his position, because of his inability to manage the youngsters, when he was arrested, charged with assault and battery upon one of the pupils, and he will have to stand trial January 28.

The executive committee of the Eaton Rapids campmeeting association are arranging for a big time next summer. Sam Jones will be present if he can arrange his business and $500 can be raised to pay him, and other attractive features will be presented to make the meeting a spiritual, social and financial success.

At the annual meeting of the Farmers' mutual insurance company of Branch county, held at Coldwater, John H. Jones, of Quincy, was re-elected president and J. Clark Pierce, of Coldwater, was re-elected secretary, the latter for the twelfth time. The company has a membership of 2,290, something of an increase over the previous year, and its liabilities last year were $5,750.83, while its resources were $6,114.60.

Miss Mamie Halpine, of Marine City, who died of alleged heart disease at Mt. Clemens, was in fact a victim of the skating rink. When the body was received at Marine City a large number of the young lady's friends were at the station, and Capt. Halpin in a solemn manner, pointed out to them the cause of his daughter's death and urged them to refrain from further indulgence in the health-destroying amusement.

At a meeting of the state board of health, held last week, it was resolved that as there has been misapprehension of the action taken by the board relative to the transportation of dead bodies by railroads, that it is the opinion of the board that dead bodies may be transported by railroad without much danger of nuisance when encased in a rubber sack, and otherwise as published by the railway association of Michigan, or in any substantial hermetically sealed casket or case inclosed as specified in the rules published by said association.

TAXES.—I will be at Bills & Co's. bank, Friday, 22d of this month to receive taxes.
P. J. WELLING,
Treasurer.

There are 12 members in the Gipsy band.

John Wyrell went last week to Burlington, Calhoun Co., for a couple of weeks' visit.

George Wilson went to Detroit last Monday to attend the grand lodge of Chapter Masons.

Taxpayers should not forget that the town treasurer will be at Bills' bank to-morrow, Friday, to receive taxes.

A. L. Millis and Harvey Wood, who went to Marshall two weeks ago to work in a large flouring mill, returned last Friday.

M. W. Sweet, of Adrian, was in town Tuesday. He is now soliciting for the Fidelity Mutual Life Association of Philadelphia.

Joe Sage has been putting a pair of his patent weather strips on our office doors. They are "just the thing" for cold or stormy weather.

A number of our citizens have invested in tickets in the Louisiana State Lottery, and they are anxiously looking about for suitable real estate in which to put their drawing.

Will Sutfin has accepted a position in a Toledo house. His place will be filled by Earle Sheldon, and Bert Waring will take the vacancy in the postoffice. Bert's many friends will welcome him back.

Mrs. W. B. Keyser, of Tecumseh township, finds by the notches in the shingle that she has served 223 meals to guests during the past year. And yet the Keyser residence is not a hotel.—Adrian Record.

Met Conklin went to Chicago last week where he made arrangements to continue his labors for the Wood Harvester Co. this season. He will open the campaign early this year and make it red hot all along the line.

Two teams were taken off the street last Tuesday by Marshall Moir and put in the feed barn, after standing out in the cold for some time. What is the matter with a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals in Tecumseh?

R. Morrison has opened a grocery store in his building, corner of Railroad and Logan streets, and respectfully asks the people for a share of their patronage. We call attention to his new advertising card which appears elsewhere.

We acknowledge a call yesterday from S. C. Stacy, of the Tecumseh HERALD. It is a mystery to us how Tecumseh newspaper men always wear good clothes. They always have an air of prosperity about them which is refreshing to the common quill-driver.—Hudson Post.

The editor of the Post doesn't understand the secret of it. Our credit is good and we bought a new shit last fall on tick.

Earle Sheldon, of the post office, has accepted a position as head book keeper for W. & S. W. Anderson & Co., and will begin his new work next Monday morning. Earle has been in the office for nearly two years and is well liked by all. His many friends will miss him from behind the "bars" but all wish him success in his new field of labor.

We paid the new rooms of the Total Abstinence League a visit the other evening and found the new institution finely started. The League want donations of books and papers to provide entertainment for the members. Read their rules which are printed elsewhere. Their public business meetings are held every Thursday evening to which all are invited.

Call and examine his stock and prices, and you will have no thought of going elsewhere to buy.

Not in a long time has the opera house contained an audience so well pleased with a play as that on Friday evening when "Si Perkins" was presented by Mr. Frank Jones with a strong support. Mr. Jones, as "Si," gave a true delineation of the rural threshing machine agent, and kept the audience in a roar of laughter throughout the play by his droll sayings. Miss Alice Montague, as Zana the lover of Si was also a pleasing feature of the play, and in fact the acting of the entire company was exceptionally good.

Laverne Wooler is getting up a fine lot of scenery for Lane's skating rink at Hudson. While at Hudson the other day we dropped in to see his work. The drop curtain was completed, which represents in a large oval in the center of the stone railroad bridge at Hudson. It is as natural as life, and twice as handsome. Two steps are shown at the bottom of the curtain, with suitable drapery upon the sides. Mr. Wheeler will paint four drop scenes and put several landscape views upon the walls of the rink before the job is completed. He expects to have the work finished by the last of this week.

Fancy skating at the rink next Monday night.

Frank Crossman was elected first sergeant at the meeting at Armory hall last night. The night of drill has been changed from Wednesday to Tuesday night.

David McNab and Dr. L. G. North went to Toledo last Thursday to investigate some new heating and ventilating apparatus for their new school house. Mr. McNab and Mr. Mills also went to Dundee last week and bought 30,000 brick for the same.

The celebrated Davenport Bros., trick and fancy skaters will give an exhibition at the skating rink next Monday evening. Among the attractions of the evening will be an impersonation of the Indian skater Garland, Petoskey by Master Harry Davenport. Admission 15c, skates 10c. Good music will be in attendance.

During a brief visit at Hudson one day last week we called at the Post and Gazette offices. Found Bro. Steuerwald of the Post, who assured us that business was as good as he could expect in these dull times. The Post is a well managed paper and enjoys a steady and reliable patronage. Bro. Schermerhorn was very busy getting ready to take a trip down to West Point, to see "Our Jim." He left on the afternoon train that day and expected to be gone until Tuesday of this week. He is now nicely settled in the post office and his new official chair seems to be congenial to him. Fin Deuel still holds a case in the Gazette office.

At the last regular meeting of the Raisin Valley Encampment the following officers were chosen for the ensuing term. The "camp" has long been in a dormant state, but is now revived and bids fair to take a new lease of life.

THE HUNGARIAN GYPSY BAND.

Among the many favorable press notices which have come to hand in regard to the music of the Hungarians we append a few selected at random.

The Hungarian Gypsy Band has created quite a furore since its first appearance. The performance of these musicians is spirited and interesting to the highest degree, their quaint melodies full of wild passions never failing to sway the public.—New York Telegram.

No words of praise too lavish can be bestowed upon the performance of these justly celebrated musicians. From the beginning to the end of the entertainment they held the large audience captive under the spell of their peculiarly weird and facinating music.—New London Conn. Daily Telegram.

The Gypsy Band gave the most wonderful exhibition of music, pure and simple, that has ever been, or can ever be given before our people.—Haverhill, Mass. Daily Bulletin.

Within the last few weeks J. R. Keeney has purchased twelve fine horses, which he is shipping to Marshall. Joe always keeps an eye out for a good horse, for which he is willing to pay a good figure.

Some mischievous boys have been stoning the insulators on the C. T. line near the school house on section 34, Franklin, and succeeded in breaking one and pulling the wire down over the road. It was discovered in time and was put up again thus preventing what might have caused a serious accident if left until after dark. Boys, please don't do it again. Manager Bowen, in behalf of the C. T. Co. extends thanks to W. E. Smith for the timely notice of the accident.

Ezra Simmons, of Franklin, took a large dose of iodine by mistake last Sunday, and but for the C. T. line would have had a very serious time of it. He telegraphed down to Dr. North who prescribed an antidote which was immediately given and thus saved his life.

FARMER'S SOCIAL CLUB.

Friday evening, Jan. 15th, the Farmer's Social Club met at C. H. Schreder's. The evening was very stormy but the tax payers proved their interest in the question before the club, as there was a good attendance. The program was good in every respect.

Mr. A. D. Hall opened the discussion by saying it is self evident that the taxes are burdensome, and that needs no farther notice. The causes are not so evident, but he supposed every legislator voted as he believed just. One cause is the multiplication of public institutions, such as the state school for idiotic or week minded children, the erection of another asylum for the insane at Pontiac, also the one in the north west portion of the State, the reform school for boys, also the one for girls, and our state schools. These all call for large appropriations. He has become convinced that the state institutions run the state, as each place, where these institutions are situated, nominates and elects those who will work for the institutions and places where they are situated. These things the average tax-payer cannot correct, but our local appropriations they can control somewhat. He would leave it for others to suggest a remedy for the grievances.

Mr. Horton read a lengthy paper upon the question taking the ground that one great cause of the increase of taxes, was the great increase of crime, and the great expense of bringing the culprits to justice and a great cause of the increase of crime and the necessity of our many public institutions, is licensing the whiskey traffic. Another cause is the reckless extravagance of officials in power. He then cited the instances of our supervisors reimbursing the contractors of the new court house, also the purchasing of a lot in Adrian cemetery to bury indigent soldiers. Another cause is the great and unnecessary embellishment of public buildings. Another cause is the lengthy trials given criminals, which results in putting money into the lawyer's pockets to the depletion of the taxpayer's.

Mr. Griswold said a direct tax was always burdensome and would undoubtedly always be considered so. Our state institutions are expensive but he has not a word to say against its educational and benevolent ones, still he thinks there may be extravagant appropriations for them; still he thinks all tax-payers would prefer to pay taxes for the benevolent and reformatory institutions, than let the pauper, insane or idiotic and criminal classes run at large. He thinks with Mr. Horton that a great cause of heavy taxes is chargeable to the saloons, both directly and indirectly. He thinks the saloons are governing the state and people. He would remedy the evil by annihilating the saloons.

Mr. Fisher thinks the great cause of the increase of taxes, is the increasing need of our public institutions and after their erection they have to be supported. He also thinks the need of so many institutions can be traced to the saloons.

Mr. Philip Kehoe thinks much of the burden may be traced to extravagance. He would not condemn our public institutions, but he thinks too much extravagance is shown in the ornamentation, too great salaries are paid to officials, too many officers are elected and appointed, for they must all be supported by taxation. He also thinks saloons and gambling holes are responsible.

Mr. Schreder asks the query why the tax payers do not know what our county legislature is doing. The doings are not published, only so much of them as the papers in the county choose to publish, and the tax payers do not know whether to censure or approve and the result is generally censure, for the tax payers are assured that their taxes are burdensome. He condemned the purchasing of the lot in which to bury indigent soldiers as unnecessary.

Mr. Griswold and Mr. Schreder think the remedy for the evils and burdens is voting. Let the people begin at the caucuses and see that the best men are put forward, then vote for them and if they prove unworthy let them fall and put new ones in their places, but still look for good, honest, economical men, and keep up the work until only honest men can by any possible means obtain office.

The next meeting will be held Friday evening Jan. 29th, at John Schreder's.

RULES OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE LEAGUE.

The members of the total abstinence League, believing that amusement equally with any other principle of our nature, calls for and should have their proper indulgence or gratification, and that we cannot be permanently debarred from them without souring the disposition and temper, and thereby in some measure spoiling the character but recognizing the fact that amusements like the indulgence of all other appetites requires to be kept within proper limits, and when turned upon innocent, and as far as possible beneficial objects, they become a leading agency to human happiness. Certain bounds and limits however, they must have in the case of every individual if they desire to be either respected, useful, or alike of contented members of society.

In recognition of the above facts the League adopts the following rules for the government of their social meetings.

RULE 1.

The hall may be kept open for reading and social amusements from 6½ to 10 o'clock each evening of the week, except Sunday evening and the evening reserved for the regular session of the League, unless otherwise ordered by the League. All male persons over 18 years may be admitted to our social meetings, as visitors, if accompanied by a member of the League. The brother appointed to open the hall shall have charge of the same, and shall be required to close punctually at or before 10 o'clock. This rule shall not debar any person from attending the regular weekly sessions of the League.

RULE 2.

The members shall have the use of and free access to all books or other reading matter belonging to the League, each member being held responsible for the proper care of all such books and other reading matter, while in his use, provided that no books, papers or other reading matter shall be taken from the hall.

RULE 3.

All games or amusements shall be conducted respectfully and orderly, and no bets or wagers shall be made, or the result of any game or games. Each member avoiding in language or conduct whatever is disrespectful, or that can in any way bring reproach upon himself or injure the good name and influence of the League.

RULE 4.

All violations of the above rules shall be reported with the proofs thereof to the League by the brother in charge or any brother having knowledge of the same, and the member so offending shall be reprimanded, suspended or expelled, as the League by a majority vote may determine.

Any books, papers, periodicals or other reading matter that friends of the League may feel disposed to donate, will be fully appreciated and thankfully received. Historical and scientific books preferred.

THE CIRCUIT COURT

The January term of the circuit court convened in the new court house last Tuesday forenoon. There are seven cases on the criminal calendar, with the well-worn case against Harvey Marshall at the head of the list. The others are: Jacob Moore, charged with the larceny of a horse; Arthur Hubbard and Charles F. Fisher, false pretenses; Emmet Herrington, an alleged disorderly person; William Reed, charged with stealing from a store in the day time; Walter Wickham, with the details of whose case all are familiar, and Matthew Farmer and Ernest Farmer, charged with malicious injury to building. There are twenty six issues of fact for trial by jury, twenty-four for trial by court; four chancery cases of the first class, and seven of the fourth class.

A CARD.

To all neighbors, friends and acquaintances who so kindly assisted at the obsequies of our wife and daughter we desire to extend our most heartfelt thanks, and beg leave to assure them that their cheerful aid and kindly sympathy has done much to solace our hearts in our sad affliction.

ARAB HOUSEKEEPING.

Business Methods That Have Been Preserved for Two Thousand Years.

The forms of business methods are among the last habits of a people to undergo any change with time or circumstance. They are of native growth, and show much of the character of those who use them. It is said that the business habits of the Arabs dating in the secret of Syria and just the same to-day as they were then, than two thousand years ago as described by Herodotus. An Arab who wishes to sell a horse with proper decorum to do his trade [illegible]

One of the prettiest materials for a polonaise is the Cheviot [illegible] The waist part in front is plain and the rest is very polished. Over this are two plaits that extend below the waist line and terminate in a long flowing overskirt opened in front. The sides are draped high and the fullness gracefully extended at the back in a neat tourcenus where are rich ribbon bows; on either side the long flowing ends run down in a careless manner over the folds of the skirt drapery. The "Lidona" skirt can be worn with the "Maple" overdress with excellent effect. The latter garment has a round front, carried low over the hips and buttoned close; this model has been called the "boxing in" style it so admirably gives to a large figure a small look. The back of the basque has three long box plaits turned under and faced with some sort of bright contrasting goods.—N. Y. Herald.

—Student—Are yez going to advertise for a girrul? Lady—Yes, I want one to wash. A student (indignantly)—Do wash, eh! To wash! Well, I guess, then I don't want the place. Yez kin wash some one else. I wash myself. Life.—Chicago Rambler.

Entirely Too Practical.

Mr. Mulhoodly—"It is just glorious to watch the sunset! Lilac, purple and gold is what the poet says, isn't it? The ethereal!"

Mrs. Mulhoodly—"Oh, nonsense! You are altogether too rhapsodical."

"Ah, you are simply less poetical, my dear. That cloud yonder, with its silver lining—"

"Yes, that's all right, only I'm sorry I can't pay the same thing about my purse. It hasn't been lined with silver for more than—"

"Mrs. Mulhoodly, you are too horribly practical."—Philadelphia Call.

A SLEEP-WALKER.

Wonderful Somnambulism Vouched for by

A remarkable illustration of the marvelous phenomena of hypnotism is given in full in the following hitherto unreported case of repeated stigmatization by auto-suggestion during induced sleep, as given by Dr. Mabile, the Medical Director of the Asylum Lafond, near La Rochelle, France.

"On the 23d of last month at my visit, about a quarter past eight o'clock in the morning, in the presence of Drs. Brandon, Gaudin, Bernard, Lafond, Lacoste, and M. Chaigneau, students of medicine, I proceeded to induce hypnotism into the somnambulic state, and, without saying a word, I made with which to lay hypnotic passes, and said to him—the patient—at eight o'clock you will go to bed, the guardian of your ward. You are in bed. I am in bed of sleep. You will go to bed and now, at eight o'clock, you will go to sleep and you will sleep until five o'clock tomorrow morning. During your sleep you will hear nothing, see nothing and feel nothing. Do you understand? V. answered in the affirmative. That evening at 7:57 o'clock, while walking in the court yard and conversing with other patients, he stopped suddenly, his eyes became fixed, and several slight spasmodic contractions passed over his face. He passed into the hypnotic—or, rather, that intermediary condition described by M. Demontaillier—and, according to the guardian of the ward, he repeated the exact words dictated by me in the morning. He was put to bed, and precisely at eight o'clock he fell into a deep slumber.

"From this moment it was impossible for me to awake him, because he could neither feel, see nor hear anything. Pressure upon the hypnogenic zones had no effect, but in a short time the patient commenced spontaneously to go through the series of experiments to which he had previously submitted at my hands. He pressed his eyes with his fingers as I had done to produce lethargy; opened the lids as in inducing catalepsy; rubbed the top of his head, as though trying to induce hypnotism.

"He then commenced the following colloquy, imitating my voice in the questions and answering in his own voice: 'Do you hear me?' 'Yes, sir.' 'Give me your arm.' 'Yes, sir.' 'Now, V., a quarter of an hour after you awake there will be a V on your arm at the place where I now mark it' (he marked the imaginary V on his forearm); and this V will bleed. Do you hear? I want you to understand that that V must bleed.' 'Yes, sir.' V. counted, and woke when younger to seven.'

"He counted the numerals up to seven, he started, rubbed his eyes as though awakening, but more slowly proceeded with the eight, nine, ten; but he remained asleep, as was proved by heavy snoring, which immediately followed his wonderful exhibition. About a quarter of an hour after this, self-confected dialogue V. went into the peculiar crisis which we have noticed in him, after a suggested stigmatization. When it was over we examined the arm and found the V which he had traced in his imagination, and it was covered with blood. This V was on the same spot where I have previously, on the 3d, produced a stigmatic in the presence of Drs. Barth and Delarue. This same series of phenomena were repeated thrice during the night, the patient holding the same dialogues and the result being the same each time.

"At five o'clock precisely V. awoke without knowing that he had been asleep, but remarked, that he had been employed in the garden of the asylum, gathering flowers. Here, then, we have a case of hemorrhagic stigmatization produced without intermediary, and by auto-suggestion during induced hypnotism, the somnambulism being the place of the manifestations induced by me on former occasions. Drs. Ramadier and Chaverlet watched through the night with me and witnessed this remarkable exhibition."

It would be easy to relate several other instances almost as remarkable, these given being only a few of the effects of hypnotism, each and every one of which is authenticated by the names of the ablest and best known physicians of France, whose experiments have been conducted in such a manner as to leave no room to doubt of the reality of the phenomena or the authenticity of the details. Enough has been shown to illustrate the general character of the results attained, and to show, as stated in the outset, that no human being is under certain conditions and influences upon the moral responsibility of the body not possessed by a [illegible] mad stable.—Chicago Herald.

Neatness Indispensable.

A woman may be handsome or remarkably attractive, but [illegible] she is not personally neat, he can not hope to win admiration. Fine clothes will not conceal the slattern. A young woman with her hair always in disorder, and her clothes hanging about her as if suspended from a peg, is always readily distinguished by her person, from the circumstance that she is held to the side of her fast, as I [illegible] Man's husband he will most probably turn out as little fool or a drunkard or [illegible]. The bringing up of her girls to be able to work, and all the other sensible young women [illegible] task of all mothers, and in all Christian ranks there is more than the prime obligation of learning how to spend household work for its own sake and the sort of [illegible] a will bring in the future. These work is a drudge, but it must be done by somebody, and that better be well than ill done.—Exchange.

—A committee of eminent physicians has been appointed by the International Medical Congress, which lately met in Copenhagen, to inquire into the causes of cancer, and to investigate particularly the supposed association between the disease and the use of certain foods, the influence of worry and a depressed state of the health in producing the malady, and the extent to which it is hereditary. A report is to be made at the Washington meeting of the congress in 1887

A GOPHER DUEL.

"Light Weight" Fights a Heavy Weight.

"Yer never see er pair gophers fight, I s'pose," said an old Florida native, as he let Dewey I med tentively and spat a stream of juice through the open door of the cable plumb onto the ear of a mild razor-back saw that went grunting by.

After I had answered in the negative he said:

"Well, you've never had, hev I kin tell by the way yer talks, and yer ain't the one to git yer yaw full of any other man's wimmin folks.

"Why, say, I'm as much a lover of a good fight as any man, and I've seen a heap of blood and dyline, and I've been mixed up in a heap of them myself, and I've seen a heap of things, but I never seen nothin' like that air gopher duel I was a-tellin' yer about.

"For max I think it jinny that air little sun-fish, and I wouldn't believe it myself if I hadn't seen er couple of 'em going it hammer and tongs t'other day.

"Yer see, I'd been hunting 'round after 'gators all day and hadn't had no luck atall—didn't get any skin. Toward sundown I started for home, cussing my luck and wishing I'd never been er gator hunter. Jest as I come to that air barren over yonder I seed a couple or gophers or fiddling p'ints each other and chg way they

"'Old friends,' I said ter myself. 'Hain't met fur er long time and air right glad to see each other. Reckon I'll sit down and see.'

"So I settled on en old log and watched th' proceedings. Th' gopher highest ter me was er heap sm'ter, ez nimble ez a coon, but the other fellier was big and kind er clumsy.

"When them critters med got within five feet of one another they stopped dead short. Then they waddled round in er circle, their heads jes' ez out, er kinder wet thing each other. All of a suddint th' little gopher made er dart at th' big one. Fur er mint I couldn't see nuthin' the sand flyed so. Ez soon ez it settled er bit I seed wat that leetleness was up ter. He was er tryin' to turn th' fat one on to his back. 'Twasn't no got that time, howsomever, th' fat un had too firm er hold in th' sand, and the little feller couldn't budge him en inch.

"'Too bad, leetle fellier,' I said to myself. 'You'd better git the contract up and put in er bid fer er smaller one.'

"But the leetle gophr was game, and I could see by his face that he wouldn't give up jest then. Th' big feller looked ez contented ez er mud turtle on er log, and arter he see what th' leetle cuss was up th' he lay perfectly still end blinked his eyes. Wipe th' leetle gophr was kinder rested he tackled the old feller agin, and I'll be dod rotted if he didn't keep the racket up fur nigh onto an hour. I never seen obstinacy in my life. Fin'lly th' fat one thought he'd take er whack at it his-selfs but, bless yer soul, he couldn't no more ketch that leetle gophr than he could fly, and when he began ter hump 'round 'twas jest what th' leetle feller wanted.

"Things went on this way fur about five minits, th' leetle cuss watching fur a chance all th' time ter git th' big one over. At last the sun th' big an sorter stumble into er hole, an' quicker'n scat his head was under th' edge of the shell and over he went. I jest yelled right out, it was so tickled pose that leetle fellier plumb. The fat critter seemed fer stand the most of the leetle critter stuffed round th' big fellier's mouth, and then scuttled off ter supper.

"Arter he was outer sight I turned th' big one over on his legs again, for I thought twas too bad ter leave him thar to die. I reckon maybe he shore fun yet in their two-by-fours, tho."—N. Y. Sun.

MAN'S THOUGHTLESSNESS.

A Wife's Opinion of Her Husband's Seeming Lack of Courtesy.

"Now I'll tell you why I won't go into the restaurant and have a cup of coffee with you while we were waiting for the train. I didn't like the way you asked me. Keep quiet. I have to do it. Not in an hour before, you said to Mr. Puffer: 'Come, let's get a cigar,' and away you went, leaving his arm and not giving him a chance to decline. When we got John Oldsly on our way to luncheon you said, 'Come on, John, come on,' and off you went with John. And then to-night, when we found the train nearly an hour late, you kept your watch, turned your back and, in a questioning way, 'Would you like a cup of coffee?' And I did want it; I was tired and a little nervous, but I would have fought before I accepted such a mean cup. And you walked away with John and had your coffee and cake. Why, we were taken in. Why, I'm ashamed to be seen with you. You are the most selfish man in the world, but you do not realize it. You don't think. Why don't you do some little thing—try to do some little things—to make your wife feel that you care for her? Why don't you be courteous to her? Why don't you be the gentle, thoughtful man you promised to be when you asked me to be your wife? Why don't you be the man I married? Why don't you be the man I married? Would you like me to act as you act? Why, I'm a woman, and I'm ashamed to be seen with you.

PLATFORM ECHOES.

This entirely new and splendidly illustrated volume is the crowning life work of [illegible] Grough. Every one is familiar with the story of his early life, and of his rescue from a drunkard's grave, and how this once wretched and despised [illegible] became one of the most famous men of our time and the best known speaker in the world. For seven years he stood amid the horrors of delirium tremens, an abject slave to the bottle. And his condition and wretched appearance were such as to bring people to exclaim, "There's one man who really does seem in hell!" Now that [illegible] has accomplished [illegible] the lost and fallen, the harmed and unfortunate, have been also thrilled and moved by his touching words. He has shared brilliant audiences of royalty and nobility, has spoken in state prisons, jails, poor houses, inebriates' reform schools, and houses of correction to the deaf, dumb and blind; has addressed assemblies composed wholly of outcasts, and to audiences numbering thousands of children. [illegible] have sat and listened in admiration and wonder. In his library may be seen a set of large volumes—a far more memorial of his life and labors than any monument of marble or bronze—containing the original signatures of one hundred and fifty thousand men and women who were induced to sign the pledge through his personal efforts. These names—many of them tear-blotted and written with trembling hand—represent stories of happiness and woe, of ruin and reclamation, broken hopes and wrecked lives, of battles fought and victories won. To give some of these thrilling life histories, to depict scenes of joy and sadness, to lift the curtain on life's stage and show its tragedy and comedy, and to draw living truths from the lessons this taught, and bring them home to every heart, is the prime object of this volume.

Many distinguished men and women have long urged Mr. Grough to write this book. They know that during the five years of unceasing work among the classes in Europe and America he has seen much of the bright and shady side of life, and that the wealth of material in his possession would make one of the most valuable and startling books of the day. Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, the eminent editor and divine, has written the story of Mr. Grough's life and career for the book.

It is hard to judge in part. In it he gives to the world the permanent form of his best thoughts of many years, his most soul-stirring appeals, his most telling stories, his deepest pathos and keenest humor. As a story teller he has never been equaled. The tenderness of his pathos and the spice of his humor are irresistible. But whether he narrates a story of fashion or of sorrow, it is sure to fascinate, great and swiving truths. Stranger stories are there told than romance ever dreamed of, every one of them drawn from real life by a master artist. In every chapter he leaves a moral to add emotion to, and after incident story after story and sudden earnest appeals for living Truth, that stand out in bold relief against the page, he plays upon the keys of human hearts, sometimes with an earthquake wand and at other times filling his board with glad music, as another blinding tears with tears. At the reading he is as much at ease and strong in one as well as sensitive a touch would be capable of commission, he moves to indignation, he moved to uncontrollable laughter in spite of every effort to control their feelings.

The work is wholly and entirely new. Nothing [illegible] has been published which contains nothing that appears in Mr. Grough's Autobiography. [illegible] on his Night and Shadow, 1880. This is a totally different work, and covered by copyrights, and by the entire press of the crowning life work of this distinguished author.

The illustrations are the best we have ever seen. It contains two hundred and twenty-seven fine engravings, by the best artists and engravers of the land. Many of the illustrations are worth many times the price of the book, where object work, goodness and wonderful of these engravings are full page size and are magnificent specimens of art. Two hundred and nine of the illustrations. There are two fine steel plate portraits. One is from a life size full length painting, showing Mr. Grough as he appeared shortly after his rescue. The other is from a photograph just taken. All in all, it is one of the most and most valuable illustrated volumes ever issued by the American press.

We advise our readers to buy Platform Echoes at the first opportunity. They can, in our opinion, much better afford to dispense with the cost of other books than not possess this. Once begun, it will not willingly be laid aside till the last page is finished.

A local agent will soon canvass Tecumseh for this work. Agents wanted in the surrounding towns. Apply to C. Stacy or Tecumseh, who is general agent for this county for territory and terms.

Ammonia in Baking Powders.

Among the recent discoveries in science and chemistry, none is more important than the uses to which common ammonia can be properly put as a leavening agent, and which indicate that this familiar salt is hereafter to perform an active part in the preparation of our daily food.

The carbonate of ammonia is an extremely volatile substance. Place a small portion of it upon a knife and hold over a flame, and it will almost immediately be entirely developed into gas and pass off into the air. The gas thus formed is a simple composition of nitrogen and hydrogen. No residue is left from the ammonia. This gives it its superiority as a leavening power over soda and cream of tartar used alone, and has induced its use as a supplement to these articles. A small quantity of ammonia in the dough is effective in producing bread that will be lighter, sweeter, and more wholesome than that risen by any other leavening agent. When it is acted upon by the heat of baking the leavening gas that raises the dough is liberated. In the act it assists it up, as it were, the ammonia is entirely diffused, leaving no trace or residuum whatever. The light, fluffy, flaky appearance so desirable in biscuits, etc., and so sought after by professional cooks, is said to be imparted to them only by the use of this agent.

The bakers and baking powder manufacturers producing the finest goods have been quick to avail themselves of this useful discovery, and the handsome and best bread and cake are now largely risen by the aid of ammonia combined of course with other leavening material.

Ammonia is one of the best known products of the laboratory. It is as seems to be justly claimed for it, the application of its proper lesson to the purposes of cooking results in giving us lighter and more wholesome bread, biscuit, and cake, it will prove a boon to dyspeptic humanity, and will speedily force itself into general use in the new field to which science has assigned it.

Choice Southern Dishes.

Southern people used to be famous for hospitality and excellent cookery. Miss Adelaide Preston has just begun a series of articles in The House-keeper which are to employ all the choice recipes treasured for several generations of an old Virginia family. Any lady who would like to see the number containing the first of this series will receive one free by sending a postal card to Buckeye Pub. Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Sexton reported for his term of service beginning Aug. 1st, 1885, and ending Jan. 1st, 1886.

Receipts, 15 adult interments,	$45 00
3 infant	2.00
Rent of vault	2.00
Total	$49 00

Treas. report dated Dec. 9, '85, $4960 accepted and adopted.

President reported that he had secured $2000 insurance upon the council building for a premium of $22.50. Accepted and adopted.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following applications for the office of Sexton were received:

By H. Dixon—To do all the work in and about the Tecumseh Cemetery in manner as required by council and cemetery committee, for $400 per year.

By E. Williamson—To care for the cemetery for one year the same as required the past year, for $400, and to do the work to the satisfaction of the cemetery committee—to give bond if required.

By Jno. Hastings—To do the work as now done for $320 per annum—or to do all the work of clearing roads, shearing and pruning trees, mowing and keeping grounds in order, for $300 per annum, and this to include selling and report of sale of lots, and report of interments, but not fees for interments and private work.

By Jno. McConnell—To do all the work in manner agreed to by present sexton and to satisfaction of cemetery committee, for $325 per annum. Or, to do all the work of cleaning the roads, shearing and pruning the trees and keeping the grounds generally in order for $300 per year, and this to include sale and report of sale of lots, and report of interments, but not to include fees for interments and private work and to give bond if required.

By Wm. Bresie—To perform the same duties as Sexton last year, except as follows: I will furnish all the good hay required for the corporation tools during the years the remainder of the hay cut on cemetery during the year belongs to me, without charge to me, except the cutting and making for the corporation, for $400. I will give bonds to properly execute the duties of the office if appointed.

On motion and ballot the council accepted the proposition of Mr. Bresie, and he was duly declared appointed sexton.

On motion the council fixed the amount of the Sexton's bond at $2,000.

The following bills were presented and referred to finance committee:

C. M. Woodward, M. D., $1.09; Temple, McGee & Co., $48.74; L. S. & M. S. R. R. Co., freight $6.30; Jno. Hilliard, Deputy Marshal, $4.00; Wm. C. Jordan, street com. $13.60; W. C. Vernon Lantern Works, bill rendered, $22.35; Jas. Lowrey, bill rendered, 75c; A. W. Slayton, hay, $9.45; H. Brewer & Co., bill rendered, $38.30; M. L. Wilcox, bill of oil, $23.16; Conn. Fire Ins. Co., $22.50; C. A. Wright & Co., bill rendered, 5 pairs S. W. Bordine, bill rendered, $4.85; W. & S. W. Anderson & Co., bill rendered, $[illegible].

The Street Committee reported that on Aug. 3d, last, they had made a contract with W. E. Gray for the year ending 3d date, for the sum of $300, payable monthly; duties to be the same as during the past year.

Chief of Fire Dept. Bordine submitted a request for two good ladders, referred to fire committee.

On motion the Council adjourned.

EDWARD D. WILSON, Recorder.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

Evidently under-stands the tastes of the more religious portion of the community. The February number begins "Paulina, Or, The Days of the Apostles. A Story of Rome in the First Century," by the Rev. Alexander C. Hayerstick, which promises to be deeply interesting. "Burgoyne and its Capital, Mandalay," tells us of England's newly-acquired provinces. Miss Fanny A. Mathews continues the "Dilettante Days" delightful sketches of travel, told with pen and pencil. A very attractive series of papers on "Instinctive Architects," by Prof. Henry W. Elliott, begins, and is well illustrated. There is more about our "Sacred Musicians," "The Parables of Christ," "New English Church at Copenhagen," "Bavarian Homes," "The Church of Ste. Genevieve, Paris," Dr. Talmage's "Home Pulpit," "The Young Women's Christian Association," with stories, poems, matter for the young to read or hear, "Recreations for Sunday afternoons," "Religious Notes and News," "Personal Notes and Comments," and a selection of interesting pictures, sketches and notices, make this magazine the largest, cheapest and most thoroughly useful magazine published in the country—one that ought to find a welcome in every Christian home.

Vick's Floral Guide for 1886, the pioneer seed annual of America, comes to us this year a real gem, not a dry list of hard botanical names, but over thirty pages of reading matter, among which are articles on Roses, House Plants, Cheap Greenhouse, Onion Culture, Mushrooms, Manures, Young Gardeners, and very interesting reading, followed by about 150 pages containing illustrations, descriptions and prices of seemingly everything the heart could desire in the line of Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, Potatoes, &c. It is a mystery how this firm can afford to publish, and really give away, this beautiful work of nearly 200 pages of finest paper, with hundreds of illustrations and two fine Colored Plates, all enclosed in an elegant cover. Any one desiring goods in this line cannot do better than send 10 cents for the Floral Guide, to James Vick, Seedman, Rochester, N. Y. Deduct the 10 cents from the first order sent for seeds.

DIED.

BELMONT.—In this village on Jan. [illegible], Anna, wife of Charles Belmont and daughter of John C. and Mary Schreder, aged 23 yrs. and 11 mos.

The deceased has lived in this community for a number of years and during that time she endeared herself to all her acquaintances by her genial disposition and ladylike demeanor. She was very quiet and unassuming in her ways and hence her circle of friends was somewhat limited, but those who knew her best loved her most. The blow will fall with especial severity upon her husband to whom she was married only six months since, who during his short stay here has gained many friends who fully sympathize with him in his sad affliction. She was a kind and devoted daughter, an affectionate wife and an upright Christian woman. In this young life has been shortened in this mysterious dispensation of Providence, the afflicted friends will look to the Savior for that consolation which He alone can give.

WISHART.—In Lenawee county, Jan. [illegible], H. Wishart, aged 71 years. Funeral Thursday, at 2 P. M., from No. 148 State street.

The above notice is clipped from the Albany Argus of the 13th inst. The deceased was once a resident of Tecumseh and will be remembered by many of our old citizens.

MARRIED.

BAUER—VAN VALKENBURG.—At Manchester, Mich., Jan. 1, 1886, by Rev. R. F. Ogden, Robert P. Bauer, of Bridgewater to Phebia P. Van Valkenburg, of Manchester.

BRIDGEWAY RACKET.

[illegible] sleighing for the [illegible] season.

Business lively since the sleighing came. How it may continue. Monday evening about 8 o'clock [illegible]

Dawton's clothes [illegible] supply of underwear. Probably another cold wave soon is the cause.

S. H. Linn is buying, handling and shipping it to Dundee.

Miss Fannie Schwab returned Saturday from a two weeks' visit with sisters near Monroe.

May Ingenfritz, of Monroe, is with her sister, Mrs. Thos. Osborn, for the present. We are informed that Mrs. Osborn will soon move to Monroe.

Rumor says grange will be in the near future. This time on east Chicago street. One by one they are [illegible] to rejoice.

Asa Smith put up about 15 tons of very fine ice to use in his market the coming season.

Miss Belle Barlow visited friends at the college, Adrian, Friday. Misses Kate and Ree Wolf, of Tiffin, O., and Miss Enid Ware, of Mechanicsburg, O., who are attending college, accompanied her home, and spent Saturday and Sunday, returning Monday. Miss Barlow has many friends at the college who meet her with greeting.

C. L. Waring came home Tuesday to attend the wedding of his brother. He brought a painting of the "Arch Rock," Mackinac Islands. It is 8 by 5 feet with a heavy gilt frame, and is very fine.

Tuesday afternoon Rev. W. J. Clack joined the hearts and hands of Mr. Wm. Robertson and Miss Ida Saxton in marriage, at the home of the bride. We extend our congratulations and hope for them a pleasant journey.

Mrs. Samuel Barlow fell down cellar Monday evening, receiving some bruises but nothing serious.

No literary this week as there will be meetings. The interest is increasing with encouragement.

Tuesday we hitched to the large sleigh and in company with Misses Belle Barlow, Ada Loree, May and Anna Smith, Nellie Rappleye, Allie Rhoba and Lou Arner, drove out to the home of Mrs. Chas. Merrow and spent the day very pleasantly. When you want a good time give them a call.

On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Guernsey P. Waring and Miss Ella Cadmus were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. W. J. Clack. The occasion was a quiet one, none but the parents and brothers being present. Miss Cadmus is quite well known here, and yet one must be well acquainted with her to know her worth. She is one of the finest and most accomplished young ladies in this section. The old home of her childhood loses a treasure while the new one gets a gem. Mr. Waring is also well known here as being an honorable, upright gentleman and citizen; ready to assist in any worthy enterprise, and help a friend in time of need. The happy couple will begin life in their new home on North Church street at once. We extend our congratulations and best wishes for their happiness and success on their journey through life.

HOLLOWAY HAPPENINGS.

This community was very much shocked on Monday morning when it was learned that Eddie Arner had become deranged. No cause can be assigned for it as his worldly affairs were in good shape. Tuesday morning J. M. Green took him to Pontiac. The family have the sympathies of all as it is a very severe blow especially to the mother, as Eddie was her main stay since the death of her husband.

Quite a number of our citizens are taking advantage of the good roads to get their logs to the mill and their ice home.

Kelley & Kopkor shipped hogs and cattle on Tuesday.

Gov. Quackenbush, of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Bramard, of this place.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Weather pleasant. Sleighing poor. Wheeling ditto.

Business livening up and farmers are not quite so blue.

Saw mill is running full time, and saw logs are coming in pretty well.

G. B. Smith & Co. are buying stave bolts. They have already secured over 300 cords of a fine quality. Fifty cords and thirty feet was the largest day's haul. Geo. Bellows is the measurer, and gives good satisfaction. This company pay cash with fair and honest measure.

The literary society meet every Thursday evening in Britton's hall.—

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

We are having excellent sleighing and the farmers and others who have the time are enjoying it. The evening meetings at the church continue this week, they begin to show forth fruit which is the [illegible] prayer of our Pastor that it may.

Ira Rogers, an old resident of Cambridge and Rome, has been very sick for the past two weeks, but the physician thinks he may be able to be around he is over 80 years old.

Edgar Hubbard the past week had a severe attack of bilious colic, is now able to be about.

Our neighbor, Wm. J. Ayres, returned home on Saturday evening from Adrian, returned this morning to resume his attendance at court.

The masquerade and dance at the hall and hotel was a failure, Friday evening, on account of the blizzard. There will be a club dance at Mrs. Groger's on Friday evening of this week.

We have two ex-members of the Legislature in Cambridge. Hon. Marshall Rood and T. H. Mosher, who if living, will most assuredly attend the meeting to be held at Manning next summer, and it will be a grand social gathering.

Fred Groger is making good improvements on his mill, will be ready to saw jackets for making fence for farmers in a few days, all of which he will do at reasonable rates.

Our Town Treasurer is busy picking up odds and ends of taxes as the time is drawing nigh to close up the business.

Notice has been given out for Divine services to be held at Jessup Hall, at 10 o'clock A. M., and in the evening, Sunday. Rev. J. M. Getchell, of Tecumseh, officiates. A good attendance is hoped for.

Fred Groger and Wm. Clayton intend to take in the excursion to Toledo, Friday.

Ezra Lewis is visiting old acquaintances at Brooklyn this week.

Mrs. T. H. Mosher canvassed the vicinity of Brooklyn last week, and we understand disposed of many "Perfect Jewels."

ONSTED ODDS.

Every one seems to be taking advantage of the fine sleighing.

We hear that uncle Ira Rogers is on the sick list.

C. Aten and S. Gallup are drawing the stone for the cellar wall of Curtis and Kane's store.

Mrs. Josephine Kinney returned Saturday from Franklin, where she had been for several weeks.

E. G. Montgomery, of Adrian, is canvassing in this vicinity, representing Chas. W. Stewart & Co., Nurserymen of Newark, New York.

Mr. C. H. Dewey was in town Saturday in search of a chap who had purloined a pair of boots from the store of Dewey & Son at Cambridge. Upon inquiry he found that the man he wanted had taken the morning train for Milan.

John Keshener, a young German, aged about 25 years, whose home was in Bissfield but who for several months had been working for Mr. Dal. Pebbles, four miles southwest of here, was found hanging in Mr. Pebble's barn last Thursday afternoon. He was found by Frank Holcomb, a nephew of Mr. Pebbles, in the hay mow with one end of a rope around his neck and the other around a rafter. The space between the rafter and the hay was so small that it was necessary for him to draw his feet up in order to kill himself. Mills Taylor, Justice of the Peace, held an inquest. The jury brought in a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to his death by his own hands.

The weather signals at this station are interpreted as follows:

Cold wave—flag with black center.
Storm—flag with black ring.
Fair weather—flag with black stripes.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS

Farmers are drawing oats to Britton, bolts to Ridgeway and logs to Enslick's mill.

The Rink at Lake Ridge house will open Friday night.

The result of the meeting of the joint board of school inspectors Saturday, was a draw, Macon voting aye and Ridgeway nay. There is talk of an appeal to the town board.

Miss Olds, daughter of L. Olds, came home Saturday from where she has been working near Detroit, and reports that the man for whom she worked was shot by a burglar Thursday night, while locking the door preparatory for retiring. She gave the alarm by ringing the dinner bell, the burglar fled with officers in pursuit but had not been captured when she left. The man was seriously, but it is thought not fatally wounded. Mr. Olds thinks it not prudent for his daughter to return to her work.

DEVIL'S LAKE DOINGS.

William Turner and wife of Barry county, are visiting friends and relatives. George, his brother, is at Adrian this week as a witness in the Drake & Marshall case.

A. E. Garlinghouse has sold his 36 acre farm to George and Fredrick Denyre for $1,600; also his team of horses. A. E. reserved one-half of the wheat that is on the ground, to be delivered in the half bushel.

TIPTON TOPICS.

There will be a concert given by the Adrian jubilee singers, colored, at the M. E. church next Tuesday evening, February 2. All who want to hear a good entertainment go at the church at 7 o'clock.

C. W. Luce made another hurried trip to Adrian last Tuesday. We mistrust there is some unusual attraction in town.

Mrs. Dr. Vaughn, of Springville, was the guest of Mrs. A. B. Storms on Wednesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hannibal Osborn spent last week Tuesday with Mrs. Bramard, of Springville.

A very sad accident occurred at Wolf Creek a few days ago. The younger child of Mr. George Tuller was fatally burned. The funeral services were held on last Sabbath morning.

The Reading circle of this place will meet at the house of Mrs. Demming next Monday evening. The subject for consideration will be "Hamlet." We understand the young people are having a very enjoyable and instructive time.

STATE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

ADRIAN, Mich., Jan. 27, 86.

Mr. Editor.—Allow me to say thro' your paper, that arrangements are now completed for the meeting of the State Horticultural Society, which is to be held in Dean's Opera House this city, commencing at 7 P. M., on Tuesday, Feb. 9th, and closing with a morning session on Thursday the 11th. The several sessions will be enlivened with music by prominent musicians of the city and college. During the meeting, the members of the State and Branch societies, and visiting friends, will be the guests of the Lenawee county Horticultural Society, and it is hoped that there may be a good attendance of the friends of horticulture from the other towns and villages of the county. It is also desired that those who can do so, will bring with them samples of fruit and vegetables for exhibition. To those who will come by R. R. I would say that Sec. Garfield has placed in my hands a number of certificates for reduced R. R. fares, which will be sent to all who desire to attend the meeting and will write to me for them.

D. G. EDMISTON,
Sec. Lenawee Co. Society.

DITCHING THE NATION.

The Adrian Record indulges in these comments on the proposal of the Lake Ridge HERALD correspondent to make tile a legal tender.

A Lake Ridge man has a scheme for getting the surplus accumulation out of the U. S. treasury. He thinks there should be a sanitary drainage law, provided for the annual construction, proper distribution and a liquidating fund, say from our protective tariff, demonetizing gold and silver, and making tile a legal tender for all demands. He adds: "Think of these things." We have devoted some time to the investigation of the subject, and as a result of the examination we find as follows: It would immensely benefit the tile makers. They would all wear silk hats for the first year. It would make a government office for say one drainage commissioner in each township. It would get a heavy ditch tax of the owners of wild or untillable land, now worth $4 per acre, and it would then be sold for $50 per acre. Parties who own a patch of swamp would find it more of a bonanza than a cranberry plant, or a carp pond. It would convert paupers into millionaires with money to invest in railroads. True it might look a little unfair to boost a man's farm out in the mud and make it as valuable as that which his neighbor drained and brought under cultivation, at his own expense after two thirds of a life time, but it would be accomplishing the big feet sought, a reduction of the surplus and the monetization of tile and make millions of the tile factories. It would necessitate a revision of the ditch laws which nobody knows anything about—least of all the law makers and lawyers, and institute other ditch laws which neither law makers or the lawyers would know anything about, and business would be lively for the attorneys. In short it would be the finest method of draining the treasury, and making business hum that we know of. The ditches proposed by the Lake Ridger are to be three feet deep. Let the United States be ditched three feet deep, forty soon as now.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

Following are the real estate transfers in this county, as recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, for the week ending Jan. 19, 1886:

RIDGEWAY.

H. G. Rood and F. M. Kopkor to F. C. Pocklington, Land on sec 12, $475.

WOODSTOCK.

L. Parker to H. I. Q. Oelman, Land on sec 3, $200.

Hon. Burton Parker and wife have returned from the Indian agency to their home in Monroe.

CLINTON PAGE.

CLINTON, MICH., JAN. 28, 1898.

J. C. Burroughs visited Adrian Tuesday on business.

Anna M. Master went to Norvell to visit with relatives, Saturday.

Mina Mair went to Detroit to visit relatives and friends last Saturday.

B. F. Hodge and wife returned last Friday from a visit to relatives at Pratt.

Miss Alice Whipple, of Tecumseh, spent the week end with her mother here.

Mrs. McMaster, went to Norvell to attend the wedding festivities of her nephew, Mr. Dye.

Mr. Hamilton, of Detroit, one of the proprietors of the wooden mill, was in town the first of the week.

The sleighing has been much improved by the late snows and business has assumed a more lively appearance.

The donation given at the M. E. church last Thursday, to E. P. Pierce, was well attended. The receipts were [illegible]

Charles Fellows, of Sharon, was in town Tuesday, headed for the Clinton roller mill to test the "Staff" manufactured there at.

Al. Munsell, May Bodine and May Hunt, of Manchester, were down to trip the light fantastic, at town hall, last Friday evening.

Ben. Reynolds was in town the latter part of last week, looking for parties who had sheep to dispose of. He made several purchases hereabouts.

The proprietor of the Tecumseh opera house was in town last Friday, scattering circulars that announced the coming of the Hungarian Gypsy Band.

David Woodward and George Runyan report having passed a pleasant time while in attendance upon the meeting of the Grand Chapter, at Detroit last week.

John Miller, of Manchester, who formerly figured as one of Clinton's business men, was shaking hands with old friends upon our streets last Friday and it really seemed like old times to have a chat with him.

"Will" Searles, George Gainsley and Harry Stevens came up Sunday. Report says some of the boys "got left" on that early engagement at Lome. Hello! who stole a march on them? Will some one explain?

Julia Stellard Miss Willett, teachers in the Tecumseh schools came up last Thursday night, were guests of Jul. a Pomeroy, and visited the high school here, on Friday.

There is to be another dance in the Seamans building this evening. We understand the hall is provided with a spring floor and is said to be very easy to dance upon, by those who attended the previous party.

A. W. Spafford is located on some land at Conway Springs, Kansas, and writes that the weather is other frigid out there, but they keep comfortable over the flickering embers of Johnny-cake timber, last years growth, which forms their chief fuel.

Edna Lazell, of Caro, formerly a resident of Bridgewater, is spending a few days with her old friends in this vicinity. She was a member of the high school here at the time of their departure for the north, and her old schoolmates grasp her hand in fond remembrance.

Wm. Bartlett, has been busy for the past few days closing out his remaining stock, etc., and preparing to leave for Nevaygo, to make his permanent home where Charley is already established, and informed us that Chas. and family are well and meeting with very flattering hopes for success and prosperity in their new field of labor, which will be good news to the many warm friends, they left in this vicinity.

The small building in the rear of E. W. Freese & Sons, formerly housing the essentials for the manufacture of ice cream—ice house and cooking room—in which John Hause had for quite a number of years manufactured that article, to meet a widespread and justly earned reputation, both in this village and elsewhere, has succumbed to the efforts of prosperity, and progressed is about the to be remodeled, to make room for an addition to the already spacious business house of the above mentioned firm.

We understand, and with no small measure of regret—that Dr. Cameron is about to change his base of operations to Hillsdale. The doctor has acquired an extensive practice since he came here, and there are very many who will miss him as counselor in the sick room, and a goodly number in Clinton and its surroundings that will remember with the most fond, reflective thoughts, the happy hours spent in social intercourse and enjoyment with the doctor and family, but we are quite sure that all unite in wishing them every success in their new home.

Nellie Swift, of Lenawee Junction, is the guest of her cousin Ella Swift.

We learn that Mrs. Morey, of Manchester, sister-in-law of Frank and William Mair Sen. and Mrs. H. Smith, is very low.

Prof. Latlin has been on the sick list. We understand Mrs. Latlin officiated in the capacity of superintendent for a time during his illness.

George Belling was called to Tecumseh Tuesday, in consequence of some illness and anxiety to animate the poultry stock, with the prospect of the necessary for a varied livelihood.

The Clinton Co. E. Hause & Bro. have been filling the crystal freezers produced exactly for the season, by the late forwardness of the season. A full force of men were employed the [illegible]

The club dance at town hall last Friday evening was a success beyond all expectation, notwithstanding a blizzard of regular north-western manufacture prevailed and it was anything but pleasant to face the wind. The orchestra, from Jackson, was of superior merit, and judging from remarks that occurred within our hearing, we should say the participators in the two last dances were about equally [illegible] etc., considered. There were about forty-five couple present, and if enjoyment was not the topic of the evening the impediment was unobserved by the INDEXPER spectator.

The Baptist society have in preparation an entertainment to be brought out about the 18th of next month, which is undoubtedly to follow in the train of the many rich treats that have been proffered to our people by the unceasing efforts of our workers in the good cause, to present such: seeking therefor the best home talent and energy to produce morally, and to the best of their ability, that which may please all, at the least possible expense. As we understand it, it is to be an old folks' concert, followed by a regular New England supper. The matter has been placed in the hands of a competent committee and will be fashioned to the times that are to be represented. As the proceeds are to be applied to the relief of the debt now existing upon the parsonage, we have not the slightest doubt that the hall will again be filled to overflowing, as it has always been a foremost feature to be observed in this charitable community that home shall be supported in every endeavor of this kind. We shall hope to procure a more extended account of what is to be, for the next paper, and perhaps may be able to give the program. The fee has been fixed at 25 cents and is to cover the entire evening's diversion.

The Japanese wedding at town hall Tuesday evening, drew out a crowded house and showed plainly once more that the hall was entirely too small to accommodate the masses that are apt to congregate on occasions where the people are deemed to be present. The occasion was a success in every particular. Rev. J. A. Barnes made a very interesting prelude, explaining some of the features to be introduced, and the wedding proper commenced by the entrance of the parents of the bridegroom, followed in succession by the parents of the bride, and the bridesmaids, and the ceremony being of a pantomimic nature was very creditably executed by the participants. After the wedding, a banquet was held and ice cream and cake, were served, the company remaining, enjoying the pleasure of congratulating the happy couple as the entire assisted party acted in the capacity of waiters, and passed the viands to their many friends. Taken as a whole, the entertainment was one to be remembered as a very pleasing affair.

What Do the Druggists Say

They know what the people want to hear and they hear what their patrons say as to whether the medicines they buy works well or not. Martin W. Johnson, Rush City, Minn., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters gives entire satisfaction to our customers." Klinkhammer & Co., Jordan, Minn., say: "We sell more Brown's Iron Bitters than all other bitters combined." L. E. Hackey & Son, Winona, Minn., say: "All our customers speak highly of Brown's Iron Bitters." A. A. Wilson, Jackson, Minn., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is giving good satisfaction to purchasers." These are only a few. We have hundreds more just as good.

How Six Girls Made Money

Marion Edmunds Root, who wrote the popular articles under above title, which appeared in the Housekeeper of 1897, begins a new series in January number under title of "How a Happy Home was Made and Kept." The Housekeeper has come rapidly to the front, and is now approaching 100,000 circulation. It is deservedly popular, the columns being filled with sound common sense and practical wisdom. EVERY-DAY PHILOSOPHY.

How often may loves to dwell
Upon some grand, heroic deed,
That we are sure we could do well,
If only there arose the need!
Spain's castle lifts the flag on high,
Then we in thought would die to save,
And strength and courage ne'er denye
Their valor to mirage so brave.

But come—to-day the world is wrong
A cloud is spread before the sun;
A baby is wrong in every song
Bank lost from joy's fair to begin;
Some trouble has called out the best
And sacrificed all a weary heart;
Some lofty purpose dwells in quest—
Its purposes turned at the start.

Thus we forget—how we forget—
That morrow's hope has [illegible]

We do not recognize the time
As one to claim and make our best,
So lose the chance to be sublime
By toiling under petty test.

For oh! it takes a steadfast soul
To meet the need of every hour
To make not cheerfulness a dole,
But rather constant, helpful power.
He who attains this goodly art
Is graced beyond reward of kings,
Though humble be his name and part,
His life a noble record brings.

WAS IT LIGHTNING?

A Scientist Attempts to Revenge the Death of His Wife.

The summer heat was excessive, and the poor sufferer lay panting for breath. Her husband bent over her, tenderly seeking to relieve her pain. Unwearedly he fanned her flushed cheek, and from time to time fed her parched lips with small pieces of ice. The room, in spite of the disorder incident to critical disease, gave evidence of refined taste and comparative wealth. In the moments of ease, when the sufferer ceased her moaning, with gentle, soothing tones the husband plead with his wife to throw off the feverish flush and delirium, as if recovery was dependent on her own poor will, whose throne was evidently very sorely shaken, if not completely overthrown by the terrible fever. It reminded her of their past struggles that at last had won for them a competency and a home. They were just ready to live, he said, and he plead that she must not die.

While he was soothing and pleading with his wife, the physician entered the room. After a careful examination of the patient, he spoke with a hopeful tone that he had not used in the preceding days: "A few hours of careful nursing and the crisis will be past." and with these words he left the husband to the hours of the night watch. With the morning light came again the welcome step of the physician, and as he saw the quiet sleep into which his patient had fallen, the look of care passed from his face and with A whisper, while grasping the outstretched hand of the watcher, he gave greeting of joy in the assurance of recovery, and said: "Tender watching and quiet sleep are all that are needed now."

"She shall have them, it human love can accomplish it," was the reply of the watcher, who face was lighted with unspoken gladness.

It was the Sabbath morning, and the city in its quiet seemed to promise a day of healing to the sick one. The early morning hours passed slowly, with lingering coolness hastening the sufferer back from the gates of death to the glad home-life of ministering love. The breathing grew more and more regular, and from time to time a gentle sigh of satisfied resting escaped her lips. The watcher leaned back in his chair and with a dreamy look of love resting on the sleeping face, evidently found comfort from past fear and sorrow, in dreams of future peace and increased joy.

But suddenly his dreams were rudely broken and the sleeper thrown into the delirium of the reawakened fever. From the cathedral opposite came the clashing of the bells, not the regular melody of pleasing chords, but the clash and clangor, harsh and discordant, as if the ringers were possessed with the heathenish idea of frightening away by their rude noise any lingering demons. They sent no appeal to come to the house of the Lord, such as in gentle regular swing might as a lullaby soothe to a deeper sleep, but wild, clashing sounds that startled from sleep into fever fright. With the continued pealing of the bells the delirium increased. A hurried message brought the physician back to the bedside of the patient. A single glance at her condition filled him with alarm. After a moment of thought and attention to the delirium, he said, "the noise of the bells must be stopped."

Hurrying away he sent in word to those in charge of the cathedral and endeavored to secure the needed quiet. To his surprise his appeal was rudely and positively refused. In vain he remonstrated and plead, stating that a life depended on the cessation of the noise. At last he gave up the effort and returned to the sick room. He found the sufferer rapidly growing worse. After a vain attempt to calm his patient, in response to the agonized appeal of the husband, he went hurriedly to the city authorities. Here, also, his effort failed and he returned with a sinking heart.

Through the hours of the sultry day he manfully struggled to save his patient, and soothe the agony of the loving watcher. With every outburst of the clashing bells the fever-stricken one would spring up, and, clinging to her husband, beg to be saved, with wild delirium of fear intensified by the fever-clouded brain. There could be but one end to such a struggle, and at eventide it came, as with a cry of agony her spirit passed through the noisome stricken air into the peace and quiet of the land where there is no fever to smite the body and no barbarity of man to refuse the appeal for the suffering and dying. In that death chamber sobs of agony broke from the quivering frame of the bereaved man. Alarmed for the life of the agonized man, the physician plied remedies and with soothing words sought to keep that strong mind from breaking. Touched, also, in his professional pride, he cursed the bells and those who had refused his appeals. "But for those bells," he said, "you might now be rejoicing in the rapid recovery of your wife."

The sobs died away, and the now tearless eye of the bereaved man grew vacant and wild. He slowly repeated the curse that had fallen from the lips of the physician, and added: "God is cruel to me, and more, also, it has denied me my vengeance." He rose from his bed, on which he had thrown himself in the outburst of his grief, and, as he staggered, the flushed and tangled hair from the brow of the dead, fell aside. "My poor murdered wife!" he said to the physician, he said, "No more tears, sooner, an avenger must have close kinship." The physician was [illegible]

He did not see him with the tears of that poor, tired, tried man had passed away [illegible]. Kind words of grateful thanks seemed to come freely and naturally from the lips that had taken on a smile of patient resignation.

All through the sad hours of the funeral the physician ministered as to a brother, and when, after the return from the grave, he stood for a moment at the door, it was the same patient [illegible] that graced the lips, as the bereaved man repeated more fully his heartfelt thanks. But when the man closed the door and stood alone in his deserted rooms, the smile died away, and, crossing the room to the window, he look out at the cathedral tower, and his face settled into a stern, rigid look, as he slowly repeated the curse whose utterance had dried the fountain of his tears and set his brain on fire in the thought of revenge.

Days passed, and the other tenants of the large hotel saw only a pale-faced, bereaved man, who came and went at irregular hours. He had been a successful inventor. His inventions had been doubly dear to him because they had been helpful to his fellow men, as well as remunerative to himself. One day, after weeks of painful brooding, he opened his desk and took out the drawings, over which he and his loved wife had often communed, as he had explained to her the reason and purpose of his inventions. He laid them on the glowing coals and waited, till even the ashes had disappeared in the heat of the flame. He then turned deliberately to his desk, and with a trained, able brain, supernaturally quickened by the cunning of madness, began to solve the problem of securing his revenge.

While he sat thinking, the bells rang out their noisy clamor, as if to defy him to do his worst, and with the peculiarity of a maddened brain his fate fastened on them, as though they had been personalities. The current of his hate was turned from those who had refused to silence the bells at his request, and crystalized into a resolve to destroy the bells. The problem now began to assume a definite shape. The objects of his revenge were entrenched in the stone fortress of the cathedral, defended by the common law of the city and guarded by the officers of public safety. All seemed to be combined against him to prevent the execution of his purpose. But obstacles increased his determination, and so he pondered until, with the morning light came to his mind the outlined plan, that in its execution should not only destroy the bells but make their destruction seem to be a penalty inflicted by supernatural power. His effort should be not only to secure his own revenge, but to secure in the future, for other sufferers, the quiet and pity that had been denied to him.

He first made a careful study of the cathedral and its surroundings, and as a result of his observations he gave up his suite of rooms and took two rooms in the upper-story of a large tenement house on the same side of the street and next to the cathedral. In these rooms he found himself on a level with the openings in the tower above which the bells were hung. Through these openings he could see the heavy beams that served as braces to the tower, and as supports to the frame-work of the bells. After settling his rooms he began the solution of the problem. He first constructed a powerful cross-bow and attached a strong though fine silken cord to the arrow. For several nights he practiced with this weapon, until he could without fail, fasten the arrow firmly in the wooden beam of the tower and yet pull it back with the silken cord into the window.

His next experiment was to take a heavier arrow with a pulley-wheel sunken in the shaft, so that by means of an endless cord running through the pulley he could convey a package from his window to the beam in the tower. After considerable practice he found himself able to send the arrow without fail into the beam and work the cord. He had thus secured a certain means of communication with the tower. He then prepared six arrows with the pulley and cord attachment. His unbalanced mind found intense satisfaction in these experiments and their success. It enabled him to wait and watch for dark nights, in which to perfect his aim by continued practice, and stimulate him to complete his task.

Satisfied that he had secured a reliable means of conveying small packages within the tower at his pleasure, he turned his attention to the manufacture of six powerful torpedoes. His inventive powers and skill in chemistry made this a comparatively easy task. Buying the needed chemicals in different parts of the city and at different times and in varied quantities, in two weeks he had accumulated a sufficient amount; and in another week had prepared six powerful torpedoes. He then prepared two electric batteries and sufficient insolated line copper wire to make connection with two of the torpedoes, after he had placed them in position in the tower. He was now already for the attack, but, the fine days and nights of spring and early summer brought refreshing showers in the day time, while the nights were clear and starlite. Still the man waited with the patient cunning of a distempered brain, never swerving from his purpose. The bells clashed in noisy tumult day after day, but he would stand quietly in the window with his gaze fixed on the tower.

At length in midsummer, at the close of a sultry day, the heavens grew dark with heavy masses of storm clouds, and lightning gleams could be seen shooting across their growing darkness. The distant but heavy roll of its fury seemed almost ominous. Carefully the man made his preparations that he might be ready to seize the opportunity that the coming storm promised to give. His face grew paler, as he arranged the arrows and their cords, and carefully laid the torpedoes on the sills and then powered the batteries. The storm came nearer, and suddenly burst in the energy and fury of a tropical tempest. The flashes of lightning were almost incessantly followed by the crash of thunder, unmuzzled as it seemed the storm had reached its zenith.

Waiting for the moment when the flash of lightning should, to his eyes, strike the cord and pulled on it, he showed that the arrow was firmly fastened in the beam of the tower. Six times he sent a silent arrow on its mission, and in this way formed, in a few moments, six lines of communication with the fortress of his enemies. Taking up one of the torpedoes from the table, he fastened it to the cord of one of the arrows, and with a steady pull, carefully measuring the length of the cord that he drew through his hands, he continued pulling, until the estimated length of the cord and the resistance told him that the torpedo had reached the tower. Fastening the cord to the window frame, a grim smile played over his features. He sent three more of the torpedoes in the same manner over into the tower.

Having fastened to the remaining two the cords of copper wire and with increased care sent them, also, over to the arrows, he then prepared and tested the batteries, and finding them in good condition he placed them on the window sill. Fastening the ends of the wires to the keyboard he had made, he stood at the window with his hands resting by the keys, ready to give the fatal touch. He could hear the roar of the oncoming wind and rain, and, as he leaned forward to listen, there came a blinding flash and deafening peal, instinctively his hands simultaneously pressed on the keys. In the glare of the continued lightning he saw, as it seemed to him, the tower leap up into the overhanging darkness. A shout of triumph burst from his lips and the next instant the building reeled beneath him, and he sank unconscious into its ruins. Out into the city came a roaring crash, as though an earthquake shock had rent its foundations.

A moment's pause of silence followed, and then came on the stormy night the cries of thousands, as they rushed out of their homes into the streets. There came the fire-alarm call repeated again and again, mingling with the roll of the thunder and the dashing wind and rain. As they gathered to the place they found the cathedral—tower and building—in a ruined heap, and the tenements on either side shattered and fallen. The firemen were at first paralyzed at the sight, but discipline and skill and bravery soon led them into efficient work. The kindling fires were extinguished and well-directed efforts put forth to rescue those who were buried in the ruins. The next day had come to eventide before the last one had been rescued—the dead laid aside for burial, and the wounded gathered into the hospitals. Unwearily the doctors labored, and after a few hours the different cries of the suffering had subsided into the low moaning of slumbering pain.

In one of the wards a group of physicians were gathered around a bed in consultation. The patient was apparently uninjured, save from the shock. While they were working over the unconscious man another doctor joined the group, and, as he saw the face of the patient, immediately uttered an exclamation, and, stepping to the bedside, took the hand from the assistant, saying: "This gentleman was a patient of mine." As he joined in the efforts to revive him, he told to the others the story of the sickness and death of the wife of his friend. After continued efforts there were signs of returning consciousness. A more full and critical examination was made, but no external sign of any injury could be found. Somewhat puzzled the physicians made various suggestions, and one said:

"Do you suppose that it was only the lightning?"

A movement of the patient caused him to stop speaking. The man had turned his head at the word "lightning," and, opening his eyes, was looking into the face of his former friend, the physician, who bent forward to speak to him, but before he could speak, a smile of recognition came over the face of the patient, and partly raising his head, he said, eagerly: "It was," and suddenly his eyes closed, his lip quivered, and he sank back on the pillow—dead. After a moment of silent surprise the physician answered his own question, saying to the others:

"Undoubtedly, gentlemen, it was the lightning." Was it?—Boston Traveler.

Dangers of Mountaineering.

Mountaineering in the Swiss Alps has cost one hundred and thirty-four lives during the last quarter of a century. Of the victims eighty were tourists, forty guides or porters, eleven workmen journeying over the heights, two St. Bernard monks and one was a crystal-seeker. Most of the fatal accidents arose from slipping on rocks or grass, avalanches were the next chief cause, while the deaths from falls over precipices or through thin ice, and from exhaustion, were about equal. Many disasters again were due to imprudence, or in sixteen cases the climbers were not roped, no guides were taken in twenty-eight instances, and on twenty-two fatal occasions the mountaineers knew nothing of the state of the snow. Mont Blanc was ascended six hundred and seventy-three times between 1859 and 1870, and twenty-five of these ascents proved fatal—about one death to every twenty-six ascents.—N. Y. Post.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery.

Capt. Colquhan, sailing between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Colquhan household and on board the schooner. Free Trial Bottles of this Standard Remedy at C. A. Wright & Co's drug store.

A Remarkable Statement from a Home.

Two years ago last March I was taken with a sort of languid, dull, heavy feeling attended with a slight chilly sensations and hot flashes. I paid little attention to it, thinking it was the result of over work and the want of proper sleep. About five weeks from the time I first felt the weariness, while on my way to visit a sick lady, I was taken with a severe chill, which lasted nearly an hour and was followed by fever. If some immense weight had fallen on me and crushed every bone in my body, I could not have suffered more. After this, I lost my appetite, my skin became sallow, my strength failed me, I was annoyed with distressing headache, a terrible dull aching pain in the small of my back and through my hips and limbs, my stomach became irritable, and every function of my body seemed to be impaired. Still, the most of my time I was able to attend to my professional duties. My bowels were terribly constipated, my urine became scanty and high colored, my sleep was disturbed and I was one living mass of aches and pains. I doctored myself for awhile, but failed to find relief.—Then I consulted several distinguished physians in different parts of the county. Still I could find nothing that did me any good. I lost forty-six pounds of flesh and had made up my mind that I would have to put up with my suffering and get along the best I could, when a neighboring physician, a friend of mine—advised me to take Dr. J. B. Henion's Sure cure for Malaria, that he had used it, with marked success, and he believed it would cure me. I procured a bottle and began taking a teaspoonful every four hours. It relieved my pain, and I continued to use it until I had taken ten bottles and found myself once more restored to health. I did not think I was suffering from Malaria, from the fact that I never had but one regular chill. Still I had chilly sensations and occasionally a mild form of fever. I most heartily endorse Dr. Henion's Sure Cure for Malaria, and would advise all those suffering from any marked form of disease, pain or prostration, to give it a faithful trial. They will not be disappointed.

A CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh, out of 2000 persons treated during the past six months, fully ninety percent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is now the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the theory now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination. This accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is auspicious as cures effected by him four years ago are free still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

JOS. H. SMITH, MANAGER.

A deer's horn, inclosed in the wood of an oak tree, has been found near Grand Rapids, Exchange. The late Stephen P. Spear in 1831 while exploring the land which afterward became his farm near North Florence found an antler of a deer protruding several inches from the trunk of an oak tree, about 6 feet above its roots, and appearing as though it had mountaneously grown out of the tree. When Mr. S. settled on the land in 1831 it was still there, but has since, with the growth of the tree, entirely disappeared from view. Morgan Observer.

Smith, of the Adrian Record growls jealous and angry because Mr. Sheldrum of the Holly Advertiser is recounted the handsomest newspaper man in the State, and threatens to take the road in the interest of truth. It's all well enough for Rev. Smith to make these threats, hoping thereby perhaps to scare Sheldrum into withdrawing from the field, leaving him alone in his glory. Judge Wood, who is Smith so fate in establishing his claim, he was side by side with Sheldrum on the press excursion last summer, there wasn't a body of men in the State more capable of judging of beauty, and no one seemed to admire beauty too rich for use for earth or heaven. The fact of the matter is, Smith really had to take a back seat for Stacy of the Herald, Field of the News, Applegate of the Times, and—we were going to say something about ourself, but modesty forbids. Suffice it to say, Smith is a mighty handsome man, and beauty still inspires his wit, but it won't do for him to set up his claims in this section of the country, where live so many beautiful bachelor newspaper men. Peterson's Magazine for February opens with a beautiful steel engraving, after the celebrated picture of "Cinderella," by the great English artist, Sir John Millais. Then there is a magnificent colored steel fashion plate, a double-size colored pattern in embroidery, from the Art School, two other full-page engravings, and about fifty illustrations, wood cuts. Such a wealth of illustration is unexampled. The novelet "The Cedar Swamp Mystery," here is more powerful as it proceeds. The story of To-Day is one of the most charming love stories we ever read. Besides these there are numerous other stories, novelets, etc., etc., and no magazine gives such original stories as "Peterson." The trustees of the technological school ordered established by the last legislature hope to have it in running order, at Houghton, by next fall at latest, but they complain of the niggardly $10,000 appropriation for the first year, and threaten to ask more next winter.

Martha House, aged 19 years, committed suicide at Battle Creek last week by taking poison. Martha was a healthy appearing girl, and on the night of her death was working in the presence of her employer, Mrs. Bardwell, when she suddenly fell to the floor, frothed at the mouth and died within an hour.

The postmaster of Shelby is in Colorado and the deputy who left in his place has been compelled by sickness to give up, so the bondsmen have put a young man in his place. In the meanwhile the postmaster, expectant, is waiting and wondering at the terrible slowness of the third assistant postmaster general.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Nellie Richards is again working for H. E. Anderson.

Moses Hyde went to Brooklyn on business.

Will Chitwood, of Jackson, visited here last Tuesday.

The Hungarian dance at the Gambier & Patterson's St. Paul's Church winter carnival will take place on the 22d day of February.

Frank Lambert of the Universe was in town last Friday evening.

Hussey has received a fresh lot of coffins since the sleighing came.

Kies Bros. are treating the interior of their store to a new coat of paint.

Geo. S. Van Tyne went to Coldwater on business the first of the week.

A. W. Slayton is offering real estate very cheap. See his ad. in another column.

Revival meetings are still being held in the Methodist and Baptist churches, and considerable interest is manifested.

There is no great loss without some small gain. The recent icy weather has been a bonanza for the blacksmiths.

Fred Herning left Tecumseh on Monday for a trip to Fowlerville, where he will visit his brother, Lewis, for a few days.

Bert Blood gave a very pleasant party to sixteen of his Tecumseh friends last Monday evening. They report a good time.

W. D. Adams is moving into the Montague block this week. Mr. A. will have a much larger store, and we hope will be benefited thereby.

Miss Ella Walker, of Brooklyn, has been spending the past week in town, visiting friends and relatives. She will return home to-morrow.

Cloaks—one third off. A good time to buy a handsome cloak at a very low price. We will not carry them over. W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

Quite a number of Tecumseh boys took in the horse show at Adrian last week. They all express themselves well pleased with the entertainment.

Rev. J. M. Getchell will preach next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock at Springville. In the evening at the same place if the friends deem it best.

L. M. Mooney has gone to Bay City to work for the McKinnon Manufacturing Co. He will fill the position of draughtsman and foreman of the machine shop.

Joe Sage, up to Saturday last, had sold 254 weather strips in this town and roundabout. Joe's competition with the weather clerk brought on a thaw last Monday.

Anna and Lyster Dewey, of Cambridge, were in town over Sunday, having come down to attend the party given by Miss Edith Parkhurst last Friday evening.

Robt. Stretch has been at home a couple of days this week. He has lately been at St. Paul, Minn., where he saw the building which is being erected for the big ice carnival.

A full set of the American Cyclopedia, sixteen volumes and an index can be bought at a very cheap figure if taken before February 1st next. Enquire at the HERALD office for particulars.

Mr. Sylvanus Travis is the new postmaster at Macon, and he will begin canceling stamps as soon as his commission arrives. Those who know him regard the appointment an excellent one.

Meridian Chapter, R. A. M., of Manchester, held a meeting last Saturday evening for work in the Royal Arch degree. About 30 visiting brethren were present from Grass Lake, Tecumseh and elsewhere. A banquet was held at the Goodyear House.

Miss Edith Parkhurst entertained a number of her acquaintances and friends at the residence of Mr. A. Hanford last Friday evening. Although the night was a stormy one yet about 15 assembled, who express themselves as having a splendid and enjoyable time.

The rink was well filled last Monday night to see the Davenport Bros., the champion fancy and trick roller skaters of America, and the exhibition given was the best seen in Tecumseh of that kind this winter. The boys are young in years, but old in skating experience, and their acrobatic skating was especially good, as well as their fancy movements.

The Hungarian Gypsy Band drew a pretty fair house at the opera house, Monday night, and those present probably listened to the finest instrumental music they had ever heard. Every member of the troupe was an artist, and the music they drew out of their instruments was grand. The company is composed of 12 Hungarians who have been in this country but four months and none of them can speak a word of English. If the band will give Tecumseh another entertainment at some future time we predict for them a crowded house.

The weather prophet who predicted an open winter can now rise and explain.

Mrs. Rix, of Dowagiac, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. B. Jones, of this place.

The next county examination of teachers will be held on Saturday, March 13th at Tecumseh.

The Philadelphia Times Almanac for 1886 is at hand. It is one of the best volumes of statistics published.

We have marked down the balance of our cloaks to prices that will surely close them out.

W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

The recent cold snap froze up Lake Worth down in Florida, and the mercury went down to 25° above zero, the lowest point reached in that State since 1885.

Temple, McCrae & Co. have recently sold large bills of lumber for building new houses to John Boyd of Macon, Mrs. Snyder and Caroline Gerkin of Raisin, and to a Mr. Hunt of Norvell.

The Morenci Observer appeared last week in a brand new suit. The Observer was always a bright newsy sheet and it looks better than ever in its new dress. The Allen Brothers deserve their prosperity.

W. D. Yerkes held a sale last Saturday last week. At three o'clock P. M. every hitching post on Chicago street had a team tied to it, and several teams were standing in the middle of the street at the same time.

The Buckeye politician is in clover. The state legislature is enjoying a monkey and parrot time with two Senates, both struggling for the mastery. Both sides are belching forth thunder and war and blood and the Ohio politician is happy.

Oscar Heck, who has been attending school at Kalamazoo College was taken sick last week and Saturday he started for home. He was met at Adrian by his friends and conveyed to his home in a sleigh. Oscar is suffering from inflammatory rheumatism. His many friends will wish him a speedy recovery.

Two new sewing machines are on sale at the HERALD office. One is a new style American, and the other an improved Singer. Both are first-class machines and have never been used except for trial. Any person wanting to buy a new sewing machine for cash will find either of these a bar gain. Call and look at them.

C. M. Minor, of this village, has a tobacco box, which rivals the characters of scripture in age. It was bought in England 126 years ago by one of his maternal ancestors and has descended to the oldest heir on the death of the owner. Mr. Minor has now carried it eleven years, and hopes to be able to lug around this pocket companion a good many years more.

The Detroit papers are uniting in one long drawn, doleful howl over the disagreeable odor and smoke arising from the debris of the Ferry fire. If the managing editors would furnish their young men with pails instead of pencils and request them to extinguish rather than distinguish the smouldering heap, we'd "D" down instead of writing it up, in other words, they would relieve their readers and be doing the city an apparent service.

We call the attention of our readers to the prospectus of the Detroit Free Press which appears elsewhere in this issue. The Free Press needs no word of commendation from us. Every man, woman and child in Michigan knows what the paper is for they all read it. It stands at the head of Michigan journalism, and what is more, its reputation has been gained by enterprise and excellence. We have taken the daily Free Press for more than twenty five years, and we couldn't keep house without it now.

The masquerade at the rink last Thursday night proved a very successful affair. About 35 maskers, with every variety of costume, took part in the carnival, representing kings, queens, Irish wash women, fortune tellers, Shakespearian characters and some not nameable, and last but not least a cute female costume made up of the "old reliable TECUMSEH HERALD," $1.50 a year. Two prizes were offered—$3 for the handsomest and $2 for the most comical costume. The first was carried off by Asa E. Stevens, in the character of Hamlet, and the second prize was pocketed by Thos. Shurtz, representing an Irish wash woman.

The M. & O. road will give excursion rates to Toledo to-morrow, Jan. 28th, to enable people to attend the play of Mestayer's Tourists at the People's Theatre. The trains will go east at the regular hour, but returning the night train will be held until after the close of the performance. Below is a schedule of the time and fare for the round trip:

Onsted	9.05 A. M.	3.00 P. M.	70 cts.

Ralph A. Wheaton, who lives near Blissfield, lost the greater part of his barn last Monday night by fire. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Wheaton has been ailing for some time and was confined to the house. Mr. Wheaton has the sympathy of his many friends in his misfortune.

Hold Fast Long has been engaging the rink for the last two years. He took a week on teach school up in Freedom township, northeast of Manchester. The many friends of Mr. L. will miss his helping hand at the rink, but at the same time wish him all success in his vocation.

Lorenzo Morse, one of the old settlers of Fairfield, attempted to shuffle off this mortal coil last Sunday by cutting his throat with a razor. The instrument, however, was too dull to do a good job, and Dr. Grandy sewed up the wound with a needle and thread. Lorenzo will probably shave with a hatchet for hard times.

On Sunday evening of last week a Clinton lady indulged in a long comfortable yawn. Her jaws became set wide apart like a steel trap and refused to spring. A doctor's services were required to get the jaws together again. The Local tries to prejudice its readers against Tecumseh papers by asserting that the lady was reading one at the time she became so drowsy.—Adrian Record.

The ladies of the M. E. church are making a quilt to be sold to the highest bidder, towards purchasing a new pipe-organ, something that has been needed for some time. Their mode is as follows: Each block contains a hub and its spokes. Any person can have his name enrolled upon the hub for 25c or on one of the spokes for 10c. Now is the time to have your name written high in the world.

Benjamin Franklin Cornell, of Dundee, embarked on the sea of matrimony at Palmyra, in this county, in August, 1881. On the 18th of October, 1884, the said B. F. C. embarked a second time at Dundee. As neither Providence nor a divorce court had dissolved the first marriage his second mother-in-law entered a complaint against him for excessive indulgence in matrimony, and B. F. C. now languishes at Ionia. Moral—Young man, do not indulge in more than one mother-in-law at the same time.

Lane's new rink hall at Hudson will be formally opened on the 3d and 4th of February. In speaking of the new scenery painted by L. F. Wheeler the Gazette says:

The scenic artist, Verne Wheeler, of Tecumseh, is a brush artist of exceptional skill and taste, and the fact that he was for a long time connected in this capacity with a Chicago theatre, is assurance enough for the excellence of whatever he puts his brush to. The drop curtain at the rink hall is very elaborate, and the Hudson railroad bridge scene gives it a peculiar local interest, which every Hudsonite will appreciate. The parlor scene is rich and tasty; the forest time to nature and very finely executed; the kitchen, with an old fashioned fire place, battered walls and dirty finger marks on the door, is as real as one could wish for, and the street scene is superb. It will be a wonder if the audience doesn't mistake it for a real thoroughfare and try to go home that way. Mr. Wheeler has done a fine job, and deserves great credit.

The financial embarrassment of ex-postmaster Stearns is still the talk of the village. Some very wild speculations are indulged in, as to how the money was disposed of. Whatever may be said, we feel very confident in saying that not one dollar is now in the possession of Mr. Stearns. From Mr. Joel Carpenter we learn that Mr. Stearns estimates his total indebtedness at about $4,000. Yet, by those in a position to know, it is stated his total indebtedness—including shortage in government and village accounts—foots up over ten thousand dollars. It will be seen, then, that Mr. Stearns kept no record of his dealings, continued to borrow money to pay interest and pressing debts, trusting the future to take care of itself. He has never doubted but that he would be able to pull through and pay every dollar he owed. How he expected to accomplish this object, he alone only can tell. He certainly would have had to manage far differ out.—Blissfield Advance.

READING THE SIGNALS.

To those few lines by giving heed,
The weather signals you can read.
With square of blue on flag of red,
A storm the sky will soon o'erspread.
With square of blue on field of white
A blizzard comes before 'tis night.

For temperature, a red sun ever
Predicts the mercury's going higher.
When a red moon appears on top,
The mercury then is going to drop.
And with a crimson star display,
There'll be no change fur out the day.

A blue sun blazoned on the scroll,
Means snow or rain from pole to pole.
When a blue moon floats in the air,
The weather will be clear or fair;
And when the fates a blue star show
Look out for total rain or snow.

The Davenport Brothers gave another exhibition of their fancy and acrobatic skating last evening at the Opera House. It is no exaggeration to say that Tecumseh people have never before witnessed as fine skating. They are a full team with driver thrown in.

We learn that the barn of Henry Scofield, who formerly lived at Tecumseh but now 2 miles west of Clayton, was burned to the ground about a week ago with everything it contained but his horses. All his hay and grain which he had laid up for his own use was destroyed. The cause was attributed to incendiarism.

The final meeting for the season of the Tecumseh progressive euchre club was held on Tuesday evening last at Wm. Hayden's. The bell tolled its death knell at 8 o'clock, fast time.—The party assumed the character of a parlor masquerade. There were many fantastic characters, especially the "Fairy" and Wm. Hayden's flour sack in boots. It was christened as "The witches' last meeting."

We clip this item from the Farmer's Review, and commend it to our farmer patrons.

The Bohemian oats swindle is being worked again this winter among the farmers in various sections of the country. The slick-tongued agents sell seed to farmers at $10.00 per bu. contracting with them to take or find market for all of next year's crop at the same price, less 25 per cent for commission. When the crop is ready for delivery next year, the agent will be a hard man to find, or if found will prove to be financially irresponsible. Let them severely alone.

Our Ridgeway items contain the marriage announcement of Hon. G. P. Waring to Miss Ella Cadmus. We have not the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with the bride, but we can heartily congratulate her upon her good fortune. The groom, it is needless to say, is one of the best known and most highly esteemed citizens of northern Lenawee county, who has been frequently honored by the suffrages of his neighbors. The HERALD is proud to acknowledge him as one of its best friends. It is more than a mere form of words when we extend to the newly married twain our sincere wishes for their happiness and welfare.

LETTER FROM LAKE SUPERIOR

DEAR HERALD:—I did not venture to write so long when I heard my other letter, but time has sped away. I have been very busy. I am now in the seventh week of revival service. Over fifty have manifested a desire to become Christians. Thirty have already united with the church. Nearly every day have made a start for the congregational church. We are now [illegible] services, the two churches working together. The snow has been mild for this region, but we have about three feet of snow and more is coming almost every day.

But I promised to give some description of this place. Hancock is situated at the north side of Portage Lake, a little inlet or bay running in from Lake Superior. For the reader imagine himself with me on board one of the Lake Superior Transit Co's steamers. We sail up Keweenaw Bay, enter a narrow, crooked channel, scarcely large enough to float a steamer. The natural channel has been dredged, the shores are flat and marshy. But pretty soon it widens into a little lake. This is called Portage Lake, one arm of it extends north and east and connects by a narrow channel with Torch Lake; the one on which we are sailing extends north and west, ending in a canal which connects it with Lake Superior. But what is the matter with the water? How red and dirty it looks. This is due to what are called stamp mills along its shores. There are several at Lake Linden and also at Hancock and Houghton. There is a stamp mill in connection with every successful copper mine. The rock is dug from the lode, run down to the lake on carts, crushed by great hammers, and carried away by a stream of water pumped from the lake. The copper settles into receptacles. The red rock mingles with the water of the lake. Some of these mills crush as high as 600 tons of rock per day. These mills keep the water muddy all the time. There are but few fish found in the lake now. But we are speeding along and the lake is again only a narrow channel, and high hills seem to rise on either hand. But in reality the lake here is only a narrow gorge through the elevated land of the mineral belt. The hills rise abruptly to the height of nearly 600 feet from the lake, and then the country runs back almost level. There do you see those tall chimneys? That is a smelting works. There is a village at the foot of the hills. It is called Ripley and is really a suburb of Hancock. It has 16 furnaces for refining copper, 4 blast furnaces and one clay furnace, where hundreds of tons of copper are smelted every day. There are also two flourishing foundries there. Now we are coming in sight of Houghton. This is the county seat of Houghton Co. Here are some of the finest residences in this upper pinhinsula, scattered along the edge of the lake. But what a rugged, rough place to build a village. It looks like a few houses scattered about wherever a place could be found against the bluffs. Yes, it does not look very inviting. It does not look much like a village. But it would look better if you were upon the main street. Well, here we are at the Houghton wharf. Yonder is a bridge spanning the lake and beyond it is Hancock, away up there against the hills. Is it possible that that place, scattered as it looks, is Hancock? Yes, that is it, a village of 3,000 inhabitants. But here we are now at the docks in Hancock. Yonder is the station of the Mineral Range R. R. It is a narrow gauge, running to Calumet and on around to Lake Linden. They are soon to have a bridge across, to run trains to the station in Houghton. That large building yonder is the Quincy Stamp Mill. What a din and clatter its hammers make! The Quincy is one of the oldest mines in this region and one of the best. The lake here runs nearly east and west. Now let us climb the hill. How steep it is! But here we are on Hancock street, one of the important streets of the village. Here on the corner to our right as we look west is a modest little brick building that is the First National Bank of Hancock. On out yonder standing almost alone to the left is the Congregational church. Rev. Mr. White is pastor, has been here four years and is very successful. They have recently enlarged and repaired their church for their growing society, at a cost of $3,000. It is a plain wooden structure on the outside, but nicely finished and furnished inside, and will seat about 400 people. But leaving Hancock St. for the present let us go on up this street which leads up from the Quincy Mill. Here we stand at the east end of Main St., the next street above Hancock St. and the last one in fact that runs along the hill parallel with the lake. It is a very nice street when we once get to it. This corner building to our left is the postoffice, express and telegraph offices all combined. Aside from local mails we get only one mail per day, viz. at 8 A. M. That always brings a large crowd. It is impossible to get in and get mail in the evening without a good squeezing and a deal of bad breath. Many do not go to the office until morning. The mail goes out only once per day viz. 8 A. M.

That neat looking building behind us at the head of Main or Quincy St. is the engine house. They tell me that they have good steam and water pipes along the principal streets. But they have not had a fire since I came. And yet the insurance costs as high as 1 per cent per annum on some of our stores. Back of the engine house is a large stone arch bridge over a gulch that runs down to the waterfront. Now we come to the Mansion House. Entered that one night. Large wide hallways, well carpeted, [illegible] Bar, [illegible] stores, [illegible] and boots, dry goods, [illegible] millinery, etc. Has all kinds of goods. Are a great deal larger than they look. Many people send below for groceries and provisions. Many also send off for their dry goods, clothing, &c. There, that fine building you see with closed blinds on all the windows, is a drinking saloon. Although a mining village and out on the border of society we have over twenty saloons here, to establish our claim to civilization. These pay over $8,000 into the city treasury. And they run day and night, Sundays, legal holidays and all. The [illegible] people. Then to our right is the office of the "Mining Herald," the only paper in town, and that gets a very meagre support. Every paper up here has "mining" in its name somewhere. "Mining Herald," "Mining Gazette," "Mining Journal," &c. They have no rich farmers to draw on for their support as have the papers in Southern Michigan. Now all along on the upper side of this street and wedged together closely, little houses are stuck wherever they can find standing room. And people are crowded into small quarters, many families in same buildings. This is why our seemingly small village can boast of so many people. They seem to have solved the problem how to put the greatest number in the least possible space. But we pass on another square and we come to a large building enclosed and covered but with walls unfinished. It is the Irish Catholic church. It is rather large for such a village, but Irish and Germans were working together when they started it. They had some trouble and the Germans withdrew and built a church of their own. But the foundation was already completed and so the Irish Catholics are going on with it. On the other side of the street from this church stands St. Patrick's Hall, the largest hall in the place. In the basement is an Irish Catholic parochial school where they educate most of their children until the age of twelve years, after which they go to the public schools. Now look down this street past St. Patrick's hall. That modest wooden building is the Methodist Episcopal church. It is very neat and comfortable inside. It fronts on Hancock street, one square west of the Congregational church. It will seat about 300 people. Within three years the society have expended nearly $8,000 in repairs and improvements. East of the church, and also fronting on Hancock street, is the parsonage where the writer and family reside. Just across from the parsonage is Masonic Hall. But we pass along Main street another square and again look towards the lake. That plain wooden building fronting on Hancock street is the German Lutheran church. They keep a German school in connection with it. Passing on a little further in Main street, we come to Germania Hall. Then we come to a building used as the German Catholic parochial school. Then that nice brick building, trimmed with stone, is the public school building of Hancock. It is large and roomy, but over crowded in spite of the "parochial" schools. The fact is children are plenty up here. It is not unusual to find mothers who have borne 10, 12, 14 and 16 children. These simple miners have not yet fallen in with the American idea that children are a burden. Then back building west of the schoolhouse is the new German Catholic church. Do you see those houses stuck up against that hill? That is a street running direct to the cemetery, Pewabic and Franklin mines. Main street runs on west to the cemetery, with more or less of houses all along. Let us walk out to that open space. Look away across the lake. Do you see that smoke and steam from that building? That is the Atlantic stamp mill. You can see the smoke from the mine two-way back five miles. And to the left of that you may see the smoke from the Huron mine. These two mines are both on the Houghton side of the lake.

In my next I will give some description of copper mines and mining.

CO-OPERATION.

Some Reasons Why It Will Not Work Satisfactorily Among Small Farmers.

Much is said about the thrift and contentment of the peasant farmers of France, and about the advantages of a similar subdivision of land in other thickly populated countries. But how are the small owners to make ends meet? There will still remain large estates on which the aid of power and machinery will produce grain or grass which to one who must depend on his own unaided labor can not compete, and the produce of a few acres after feeding a family will hardly bring enough to clothe them or to buy any of the simplest implements of husbandry. That close economy which such a state of things has produced among the French peasantry will be hardly possible to the children and heirs of free living Americans, and even if learned will hardly keep the wolf from the door.

It may be said that farmers disposed to other occupations resort to co-operation as a means of relief, so these reduced farmers might also co-operate, and thus make complete and profitable farms by uniting the divisions. But here another difficulty looms up. The half of a farmer's gain results from his management. Another large constituent of his profit comes of the skill and economy with which he uses his tools, and his care to keep them in order. Even now farmers often combine to purchase some implement or machine, which is too expensive for any one of them to buy, he having need of its use but a very few days in each year. Such cooperative purchase rarely proves satisfactory. The several owners want the implement on the very same days often; especially if it is a harvester; or it breaks for one, who is found fault with by all the rest; or there is no particular place for keeping it, and the user lets it stand out in a corner, or if it has a sheltering place, is too busy or negligent to take it there. These difficulties could be gotten over by arranging for each of the co-operators to keep certain of the necessary large implements, machines, teams, &c., and to use them himself on all the lands in the union. But in this case, weather will cause complication, and vexatious delay or disappointment to some, who will hardly have learned enough of forbearance or restraint to endure it with equanimity. If these essentials to fraternal unity can be cultivated sufficiently in advance of the crop culture, cooperation among small farmers may become possible, and highly beneficent, not only to the material interests of all concerned, but as a nurse of some of the rarest and most excellent of virtues, and an assurance of substantial and general happiness.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Some of the Things Every Woman is Anxious to Know.

The brooch or round pin is fast becoming popular.

Silver toilet articles are exhibited in great variety for the holiday trade.

Very beautiful are some of the vinaigrettes made by plating silver on glass.

Seal-skin sacques come in short lengths. Some have long pointed fronts.

Solitaire diamond earrings are almost the only sort worn by New York ladies.

Sterling silver belt buckles, plain and ornamented, are coupled with Christmas novelties.

Short seal visites, trimmed with a border of Alaska sable or other fur, are very fashionable wraps.

Black Spanish lace dresses, made over black satin or colored silk, are favorites because becoming to both blondes and brunettes.

Cantany, the Italian authority on corpulence and its treatment, forbids his patients to eat fat; fat meat, fat fish, cheese, sweet fruits or anything containing sugar or starchy substance.

The buttons and buckles used on fashionable dresses to-day give the silversmith opportunities for the display of beautiful workmanship. Sometimes these buttons and buckles are of bronze or old silver cut in classic shapes in high square relief; again they are of chased gold in rich dead shades, and yet again they are of carved bone inlaid with silver trimmings.

Orange glace makes a delightful dessert and may be prepared as follows: Remove the peel and pith from large, fine oranges, observing care not to cut them through. This prepared, pass a double thread through the center of each with a long needle. To one pound of powdered sugar add the whites of two eggs and whisk this for about twenty minutes. Hold the oranges by the thread and dip them into the beaten sugar and eggs so as to cover every part; then pass a thin stick through the thread and fix it across a very slow oven for the sugar to dry. Oranges divided into quarters may be treated in the same manner when the smaller pieces are preferred.—N. Y. World.

PROFITS IN SHEEP.

Some Instances Where Small Investments Brought Large Returns.

Sometimes large profits are realized by purchasing a lot of sheep and fattening them. John Johnston, of New York, once purchased several hundred Merino sheep at an average price of $1.81. They were fed through the winter with half a pound of oil cake and three-fifths of a pound of corn each per day, in addition to wheat or oat straw, at an expense of $1.63 per head for corn and oil cake, and sold in the spring at $6 each. This left him $2.56 per head for the straw, care and profit of the operation. A farmer in Springfield, Vt., with a flock of 123, a cross of Saxon Merino, made a gross gain of $4.50 per head and a net profit of $1.30 in feeding twenty tons of English hay and 200 bushels of corn. Hon. Isaac Newton, formerly United States Commissioner of Agriculture, once purchased 200 sheep for $600, fed them four or five months, and sold them in Philadelphia market for an aggregate of $2,500.—N. E. Farmer.

TIDAL WAVES.

The Tremendous Wave Which Swept the Coasts of Chili and Peru in 1868.

A former seaman, who was on board of the U. S. flagship Powhatan, in August, 1868, at the time of the great tidal wave that swept the coast of South America, says:

"Supposed that the papers describing the explosion of 75,000 pounds of dynamite at Flood Rock say that the wave following the explosion was no more than the wash of a tugboat. The conditions were not exactly those on which to base, but I can not help thinking that the force of an earthquake must be under surging great enough to generate a wave with its origination where it swept the coast of Chili and Peru in 1868.

"I was on the Powhatan at the time, and was escaped destruction by the merest accident. We had been lying at anchor off the island of San Lorenzo, Callao, and which there were sheltered by the island San Lorenzo from the tidal wave, which, however, shook us up considerably. The vessel boxed the compass twenty-three times in as many minutes, but the anchor and chain cable held us fast.

"Afterward we went down the coast to Arequipa, Iquique, Arica and other towns that had been destroyed by the great wave.

"Its size and force can scarcely be realized. At Arica the United States war ship Wateree was carried completely over the town and landed a long way inland. Only one man was lost from her, the vessel riding safely over the buildings, which were, of course, destroyed.

"The captain of the mail steamer Santiago, lying in Tacna, seeing the wave approaching, ordered all hands below, battened down hatches and drove the vessel, under a full head of steam, into the wave. She emerged safe on the other side, but with her decks swept clean of masts, rigging, staterooms and everything else. Not a soul was lost.

"But these were exceptional experiences. Nearly all the vessels on the coast went down with all on board, and probably one hundred thousand people perished on land or sea by this terrible tidal wave.

"It is assumed, of course, that this wave was caused by an earthquake under the sea, but what an awful convulsion of nature it must have been to raise a wave that could sweep the shores of a continent, when the greatest charge of explosives ever fired by man only occasioned a wave compared by imaginative reporters to the 'wash of a steamboat.'"—Golden Days.

BURMESE PONIES.

Where the Wonderful Equine Jumpers Come From.

The famous Burmese ponies are not Burmese at all, but Shan, and are brought down from the confines of China, some four or five hundred miles beyond our frontier. They are very sure-footed, and many of them are perfectly beautiful in symmetry. They are speedy for their size, and wonderful jumpers; they are very docile, for they are—like the pure Arabs—handled from their birth, and only require shoeing when brought upon our macadamized roads. They have a good deal of Arab blood in them, too, for a Shan has as keen an eye for a horse as a Yorkshireman, and many of them purchased officers' Arab chargers in days gone by and took them to their own country. The ordinary Burman pony is very like the natives of India, but they get through a lot of work, and a Burman will prefer one of his own breed to that of the Shans—probably because they cost a tenth of what is asked for the latter, but they are hardier, and will live where a Shan pony would starve. The saddles, bridles and stirrups in use among the Burmese are very peculiar. A Burman rides principally by balance; the knees are well away from the saddle, and when necessary they hold on by their heels. Only the great toe is inserted in the stirrup. Ungainly and unsafe as appears their seat, they get over the ground wonderfully well and seldom fall off. The ponies are all taught to amble, and a good pacer will fetch a long price.—All the Year Round.

THE OPIUM HABIT.

The Hold It Had upon Samuel Taylor Coleridge, the Great English Poet and Theologian.

In 1812 Coleridge's face was sallow, his eye wild, his hand and step tottering. The cause of his condition was no longer a secret. Cottle, as his oldest friend, expostulated with him. Coleridge in answer discloses his dreary history. He wishes to place himself in a private madhouse, and concludes: "You bid me rouse myself; go, bid a man paralytic in both arms to rub them briskly together and that will cure him. Alas!" he would reply, "that I can not move my arms is my complaint and misery." His sense of his degradation was keen. "Conceive," he writes, "a spirit in hell employed in tracing out for others a road to that heaven from which his crimes exclude him. In short, conceive what evil is most wretched, helpless, hopeless, and you will form a notion of my state." The sums which he spent in opium were large. Meanwhile he left his wife and children to be mainly supported by friends, and his son Hartley was sent to college on alms collected by Southey. He "never," wrote Southey in 1811, "writes to his wife or children, or opens a letter from them;" he did not even answer the letter in which Southey told him of the scheme for Hartley's education. He might have made money by his pen, but he preferred to accept the charity of a Cottle.—Edinburgh Review.

The best time for a young man to take his girl sleighing is during a "driving snow storm." He can then use both his arms to hold his girl in the sleigh, and let the snow storm do the "driving."

During a serious run of whooping cough at Stillwater, N. Y., the physicians found that Acker's English Remedy was a positive cure and prescribed it very freely. C. A. Wright & Co. say that in all their experience they never have known any medicine to equal it. They unafraid to recommend it to all coughs, especially chronic cases, croup, asthma and consumption.

In order that sufferers may know that Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets will always cure them, C. A. Wright & Co. emphatically say that if the Tablets do not relieve every case of Dyspepsia, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Heartburn, &c., &c., they do not want any pay. The physicians say they are the finest combination that can be found. Price 25 cents.

Our readers are cautioned about buying medicines which are not endorsed by some well known druggist. C. A. Wright & Co. have made a thorough study of Blood diseases, and after a careful investigation, and many practical tests, positively asserts that Acker's Blood Elixir will cure all blood disorders, ruling the system of its impurities, and leaving it strong, vigorous and healthy. They warrant it. It is a certain cure for all skin diseases.

Business lively for the amount of

Sam Gibson is drawing logs for a new barn.

'Wal' Cadmus is getting in a lot of tie logs.

B. F. Depuy is drawing logs for lumber to rebuild barns.

H. A. Hand remains quite indisposed. Jim Miller is doing his chores.

J. F. Gilmore and family and a Mr. Douglas of Ann Arbor, were the guests of A. Easlick Wednesday night.

Taugle-leg and sling shot got mixed up in the social at J. McCarbery's Wednesday night, causing several scalp wounds.

Olds & Bacon sold a grade Holstein last week.

'Yol' Davenport sold a yearling Jersey heifer for $100, and spring calf for $75.

The rink opening Friday night was a success, every skate being used.

Orrel Harmon, in trying to chop "tother" handed, cut his foot, which kept him in three or four days.

Alex. Gordon, teacher in district No. 7, is making arrangements for an old fashioned last day of school exibition.

Nightcap social at Grange hall this Friday evening, Feb. 5th.

"That's right, friend editor of the Adrian Record", give the tile miners a lift. Why not make a few millionaires in that direction? They would issue more currency than the national banks, and soon make tile enough to redeem it all, which is more than our gold and silver 'daddies' have ever been able to do. And relieving the surplus in the treasury is better than building vaults for dead matter, while tile placed in nature's vault would be a source of perpetual revenue, health and comfort. Reclaiming the waste places, and raising the oppressed and famishing to positions of affluence and ease, while not injuring those at present ahead—who would merely slow up while others got even—would be glory enough. But we cannot see the necessity of lawyers, as no man would object to having his farm tiled at the public expense. Nor can we see how much of a protective tariff gets into the U. S. treasury, supposing that most of it went into the coffers of the manufacturers and capitalists. Present protection means non-importation, and forces consumers to patronize home trade. Let the good work go on.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Items scarce.

Quite a good many of the boys took in the excursion to Toledo Friday.

G. P. Waring attended the Prohibition Convention at Adrian Monday.

Bertie Snedicor, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday with Jedie VanVleet.

Miss Kittie Clark returned home Saturday from a four week's visit with friends at Hillsdale and reports a splendid time.

John Larkin who has been poorly for some time was taken worse Sunday night and is quite sick.

Mrs. Samuel Rappleye and Master Lawrence visited Erastus Rappleye, of Dundee, from Friday until Monday.

Misses Anna and May Smith visited friends at Pennington's Corners for the past week.

Mrs. Wm. Brown, wife of Agent Brown, of Hanover, visited friends in the village last week.

Miss Salome Clark visited friends in Dundee Friday and Saturday.

There were three new brides at church Sunday evening and several brides elect. We look on and wonder.

Col. Waring returned to Holland Saturday.

Prof. H. C. Wilson, of Blissfield shook hands with friends and spent the day at his old home Sunday.

S. H. Linn & Son are rushing the heading business during the sleighing. They unloaded 15 loads in four hours one forenoon last week.

Samuel Luce, Mrs. J. VanVleet's father, who is stopping with her, is quite si present.

The meetings are still in progress with very encouraging success.

The second Quarterly Meeting services will be held a week from next Saturday and Sunday.

The choir will meet for rehearsal at the home of Mr. W. R. Wilson, next Saturday evening.

The choir met at the home of Mr. Joseph Osborn last Saturday evening for practice, and enjoyed a very pleasant time. We were very much surprised on Sunday morning to learn of Mrs. Osborn's severe sickness. She was taken about midnight, vomiting, and is very sick. She appeared quite well when we left for home. Her sudden sickness reminds us how uncertain health and life are.

These boys who would like to be looked upon as young men, quit fooling in the church on Sunday evening for smoking in the halls. We will not give names this time, but if it should happen that they do not live in our village.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

Literary society progresses finely. Hugh Maxon of '86 was elected President at the last meeting.

Seminary students use the sleighing as much as possible. Two jolly loads were out riding the other evening.

Dr. Morden will lecture to the students Wednesday evening Feb. 10th. Every body is invited.

Mrs. L. O. Hathaway spent Sabbath with her son and daughter at the Seminary.

Prof. Chase has organized a singing school at the Seminary. He now has thirty students and meets with them twice a week.

Monthly examinations have been introduced in some of the classes. This is entirely extra. Students will be required to pass their final examinations the same as before. It is hoped that by this means greater neatness and accuracy will be reached by the students.

The neighborhood literary society holds its next meeting at Mr. Barber's. The author for the evening is Dickens. Declamations, essays, quotations, and debate is the program for the evening.

Students remaining at the Seminary spend about an hour Sabbath evening reading aloud from some author. Much interest seems to be taken in these circles and as the selections are first-class it is hoped that the practice may prove beneficial.

ONSTED ODDS.

Mrs. Dyke Daniels has been quite sick, but we hear that she is rapidly gaining.

A number of our citizens took in the excursion to Toledo last Friday.

Mrs. Jerome Snow is visiting friends in Adrian.

Henry Sickner and wife started Monday for a months visit at their old home in Oakland county.

James Mason has sawed 1220 pickets in one hour and five minutes. How is that for a saw run by a portable engine.

A. F. Maxwell and wife, Fred Snow and wife, and Miss Leo Snow, spent several days in Morenci last week, returning Sunday P. M.

The Onsted school had a surprise last Friday afternoon. A jolly sleigh-load consisting of the teacher and about twenty pupils from the Springville school visiting them.

Alf. Onsted has returned to this part of the country again after an absence of several months. He has been looking over some of the western country.

A large number of friends surprised C. W. Greenleaf last Friday evening, it being his fifty-fourth birth-day. Any one who ever was there to a party, knows how it was enjoyed by those present.

DEVIL'S LAKE DOINGS.

A grand masquerade, costume and prize dance will be given at Allen's Devil's Lake hotel, on Monday eve., Feb. 22, 1886. No pains will be spared to make this the best party of the season. The following is the list of Prizes. 1st. For the best ladies' costume, Set best silver plated knives and forks. 2d. For second best lady's costume, Gold Pen diamond point gold mounted ebony holder. 3rd. Third best lady's costume, Gold thimble in morocco case. 4th. For the best gents costume. Plush lap robe worth $5.00. The prizes are for home made costumes, and are to be awarded by vote to those wearing the costume best representing the character assumed. If but one candidate is nominated for a prize, they must receive a vote of over one fourth of all those entitled to a vote. Music by Trumbull's orchestra, assisted by O. Bonny. Admission to hall, gents 35c, ladies 10c. Whole bill, $1.50. Masks and faces of all kinds for sale at the hotel by Feb. 15, and costumes to rent night of masquerade.

St Nicholas for February, 1886.

Has a richly varied table of contents. Among those articles which may be classed as timely is an outdoor sketch entitled "Fish-spearing through the Ice," which shows how some clever boys improved on an ingenious Indian mode of fishing. "Badminton," a sort of indoor tennis for winter days, is the subject of a paper by C. L. Norton. Sophia Sweet has an amusing Coasting story, called "The Girl Who Lost Her Locket," and there are bright Valentine verses by Elizabeth Cummings, and others.

The Nashville Students appear in full plantation costumes, and close with a musical sketch.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Master Eddie, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Weaver, was surprised Monday night by nearly twenty of his schoolmates, who dropped in on him unexpected.

John Iveson, of Holloway, spent several days this week and last, visiting old acquaintances and relatives in town.

John A. Williams, formerly of this place, but now of Sykeston, Wells co. Dakota, was shaking hands with old acquaintances here early in the week. We understand he will work for his brother Charles of Plymouth, until spring, and then return to his new home.

Cards are out for a Washington birthday party at Crandall's hall, on the evening of the 22d. Smith's full band of Hillsdale will furnish the music and a big time is expected.

Don't forget the Candidate social at the M. E. church, this evening.

The registered bull, 35th. Duke of Hillsdale, bred by Wm. Curtis & Sons, is now owned by Mr. Alonzo Lewis, one and one-half miles west of this place. Parties desiring to improve their stock will do well to see him. Mr Fred Lewis of Liberty, Jackson county, also owns the 15th. Prince of Argyle, No. 60,721, A. H. B., bred by the same parties and which is a fine animal for breeding purposes.

The Jackson Patriot of Thursday, contained the following:

The literary and musical entertainment at the Unitarian church last evening, was very entertaining and passed off very pleasantly. The most pleasing thing of the evening was the recitation by little Anna Bell, entitled, "How to speak a piece." For a child of her age, which is six years, her skill is really marvelous. In response to a hearty encore, she gave "A question of color," which she rendered in an equally happy manner.

The little miss is a daughter of John and Louie Bell, formerly of this place.

Curtis' school district west of town has a writing school. Why not invite the quill-master to teach our young ideas how to spread ink? It would certainly be a step in the 'write' direction.

While a Dakota colony is being organized in the vicinity of Hillsdale, six Readingites decamp en mass for old Virginia, and still others talk of going "up north." It looks as though our sister county might be depopulated, were it not for another class still, who stoutly affirm that heaven is the only place which affords them any temptation to move, and if the COURIER is allowed to be judge, their position is the correct one.

THE PROBATE COURT.

Following is the record of business transacted at the probate court for the week ending, Jan. 26, 1886:

Estate of Susan A. Knowles, minor; release of guardian filed; order of discharge.

Estate of John C. O'Dell, deceased; petition and consent of heirs for sale of personal property filed; order for sale.

Estate of Thomas O-born, deceased; petition for administration; hearing February 15.

Estate of Thomas Campsie, deceased; petition for administration; hearing February 15.

Estate of Sylvester Slater, deceased; warrant and inventory filed.

Estate of Catharine M. Colwell, deceased; petition for removal of executor; hearing February 16.

Estate of Hiram C. Colbath, deceased, petition for allowance of administrator's final account; hearing February 15.

Estate of Lorenzo D. Dewey, deceased; affidavit of publishing and posting commissioners' notices, commissioners' warrant and report filed, affidavit of publication, final account allowed; assignment according to will; discharge.

Estate of Helen R. Mixer, deceased, affidavit of publication, order of continuance until May 17, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Estate of Catharine M. Derby, deceased; affidavit of publication, administrator appointed, bond filed, letters issued; order appointing appraisers.

Estate of Stephen T. Miller, alleged incompetent person; petition for guardian; hearing February 15.

Estate of Sarah Main, deceased, bond filed, letters of administration issued, order appointing appraisers and commissioners.

Estate of Wm. T. B. Schermerhorn, deceased, petition for license to sell real estate; hearing March 1; application for an additional allowance for supported widow and family; order of an allowance.

Waste no time; delays have dangerous end. If a member of your family is suffering with a slight cough or cold, don't wait until it develops itself into consumption, but procure at once a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and cure that cough.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is Excellent in Lung Troubles.

DR. EUGENE CALDWAY, LaGrange, Ga., says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with wonderful success in all Lung troubles, also find it has no equal in Summer Diarrhœa of children."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[Our regular correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29, 1886.

monwealth, Dakota, and executive sessions have consumed most of the time in the Senate this week. An opportunity to do some much needed scolding was also taken advantage of by several aggrieved Senators. One of them lectured the Senate for adjourning over from Thursday to Monday, as has been its habit of late when there was so much important business on hand. He supplemented his remarks with a resolution providing that hereafter the yeas and nays shall be called on motions to adjourn over a legislative day, thus putting the people's representatives squarely on record when they vote to waste time.

Another Senator scolded the engraving clerks of the House of Representatives for sending over to the Senate, bills made up of bad spelling. It was an offense, an insult to the latter august body that could not be forgiven. He congratulated the Senate upon the good spelling of its employes, and the affair was a kind of a lovefeast at the expense of the House.

The debate that has been inaugurated in the Senate over the admission of Dakota, promises to be long and interesting. The question has become a party one, and the bill will pass the Senate by the Republican vote. The Democrats count upon beating the bill in the house. They claim not to base their opposition upon a denial of the right of Dakota to statehood. They admit that in population, wealth etc., the territory is entitled to become a state; but they assert that the people of Dakota have not complied with the legal preliminaries. It is probable a compromise will be proposed in the Senate looking to the admission of Montana, which is a Democratic territory, along with Dakota.

One plan suggested is to admit Dakota, Montana and Washington territories. Dakota is Republican, Montana Democrat, and Washington is doubtful politically.

The proceedings of the lower House of Congress so far, this week, have not been marked by any legislation of importance, nor by any important debates. Routine business and petty wrangles have filled its record.

The demands upon the time of Congressmen made by their constituents are such that most of them are under the necessity of employing clerks. The duties of these clerks are mainly to look after pension and other claims. It is now proposed to employ 332 extra pension clerks, there are just 332 members in the House, one to be assigned to the business of each Congressional district under the direction of the Representative of that district. Many members do not favor this plan however, and prefer to deal with the matter in the old way.

A Congressman's lot is not a perfectly easy one, as will be seen by some samples of information they are expected to furnish to their constituents. A Western member remarked nodding some freshly opened letters on his hand. "If there is anything in the world that my people do not write to Congressmen about, I would like to know what it is. Here is a letter from a citizen in my district who requests me to write to the American Minister at Rome to send him an Italian queen. Here is another from a woman whose husband left her seven years ago, and she has not heard from him since. She asks that I find out his present address at the census office and send it to her."

The question of abolishing secret sessions has again been up in the Senate and again met with opposition. The visitor outside of the Senate is apt to think that a very little business is transacted there in secret that might not as well be conducted and enacted upon the floor of the galleries. A matter not, but not a trivial consideration, is the convenience that open Executive sessions would afford to the thousands of people from all parts of the United States who come to Washington to see Congress. Hundreds of them at a time, aggregating hundreds of thousands in the course of a year, are hustled out of the Senate galleries every day because a Senator desires to stop legislative business in order that his friend Jones, perhaps, may be confirmed as postmaster at Jonesville. The people feel disappointed, of course, and Senators themselves acknowledge that there is a great deal of unnecessary interference with the comfort and convenience of visitors for very inadequate reasons. Business seldom comes up that could not be attended to before all the world without injury to public or private interests.

Dr. P. Pierce of this city, will officiate in meeting with a full house at the church.

We are glad to note of a discernable improvement in the health of the condition of our friend Ezra DePuy, who has been quite ill for some time, and hope that it may assume greater portions, until the melting up may permit of our meeting with his happy smile again upon our streets.

In consequence of the continued illness of the superintendent, our Clinton high school was dismissed last Thursday, and the scholars were allowed to put in the remainder of the week enjoying Mashes Luther and Hotbe over the beautiful whitewash, making happy their many friends.

There has been quite a mania of late, among the kids for "kettle-ide," and last Thursday some of them procured all the hand sleds that could conveniently be commandated, and tying them together, hitched a horse to the front sled and furnished a novel spectacle, as well as much amusement.

In consequence of indisposition, caused by a certified attack of rheumatism and neuralgia, Rev. P. Ogden did not attempt to discourse to his flock on Sunday evening, thus leaving to the people the choice between the congregational church or the little church around the corner, both of which had good representations.

The ladies of the M. E. church will hold a pop corn and candy social, on Wednesday evening next, at the residence of E. Carden, on the William Bartlett place east of the village. Preparations will be made for the transfer of all who wish to attend, and we expect to see a house full if the weather be fair.

The social held by the ladies of the Congregational Church, on Tuesday evening, was enjoyed by about one hundred persons, notwithstanding the bitter cold that prevailed. The receipts were $9.25.

Mrs. E. R. Smith went to Mason Monday to spend a few days with relatives in that city.

Fred Sturm, wife and daughter, of Monroe were in the village last Saturday, making Chas. Sturm and family happy by their presence.

James Fitzgerald and wife drove over to call upon relatives and friends in Clinton last Saturday, returning Sunday evening.

The party at Benjamin Hall's last week was composed of about sixty dancers, and upwards of one hundred supper tickets being disposed of, and everything appertaining thereto, [illegible] The supper preparations under the supervision of R. D. Tomlinson, was all that could be desired, and the increase in attendance was all [illegible] indicated growing popularity for these dances. The next one will take place one week from to-night.

Monday morning, as we were recovering from the depletion of our mediation we were [illegible] the [illegible] of the more modern words in the English dictionary [illegible] of some vessel belonging somewhat important, and upon taking our attention [illegible] proceeded, we were soon made cognizant of the fact that Brutus had intruded upon forbidden grounds, and was making an earnest effort to aid an unusual amount of Boreas to his auxiliary, to the entire dissatisfaction of the lady of the premises. We at once volunteered assistance, but the animal treated all of the railroad [illegible] with the largest section of feed that it has ever been our privilege to see moved by one dog.

Ex-postmaster S. B. Ross, Esq., was attacked very suddenly Monday morning with a paralytic stroke, from the effects of which, we are sorry to learn he has not recovered at this writing, but is in a very critical condition. He was as well as usual Saturday and was about the streets upon business connected with every day household demands, but we were with many others, surprised to learn early Monday morning that he was so suddenly prostrated. We hope it is not to be of protracted duration, but that he may soon be out again.

K. L. Kinney, who has been in the employ of Frank Brown for some time, as tinsmith, plater of sheet iron and tin, left Clinton last Tuesday, to look over other fields in contemplation, having finished his labors here. We believe he is undecided as to future location, but we think we speak the feeling of the entire community who have become intimate with K. R. Kinney and wife, that their departure from our midst is much regretted, and that their many friends unite in commending them to future companionship, as a very acceptable accession, as we are left to hope that the vacuity may be replaced with like material.

By the article that appeared in the Local of last week in regard to the semi-weekly visits of the editor of the Herald to Clinton, it would seem that the managers of that paper would have their readers understand that no other person had any right to exist in Clinton by the aid of extended friendship and patronage, but themselves. We were the projector of that paper ourselves, and continued to manage the same editorially and otherwise, until, meeting with so much opposition to our efforts, because of its being started in a foreign place, and from a desire to control the business and make improvements necessary to the advantageous conducting of the paper, we ventured to retort from the more northern interested party, a willingness to accede to our terms and let us have the material as agreed upon, at the outset. We were informed that we could procure the same for about double value, which we did not take to very readily, and consequently we abandoned the project, handing our interest over to the other party.

We stated upon entering the field that we had come to Clinton to stay and hoped to make it our future home. We have met with changes, both in business and family relations, that have seemed almost incomprehensible by the frailty of afflicted humanity, but we still live. Breathe naturally, and have an existence that is no more impaired by prevailing Widow Bedott changes than many of our neighbors, and with others, hope to survive the approaching frigid effects of old Boreas until the beautiful effulgence of spring time. In our endeavor for an honorable existence, Mr. Stacy has helped us in the near past the same as the enterprising end of the Local did in the days preceding, and we are grateful therefor. We are citizens and expend our accumulated wealth here.

MUSSEL POISONING.

A Peculiar Instance of Poisoning Which Has Excited the Medical World.

An unfortunate instance of poisoning by mussels (Mytilus edulis) recently took place at Wilhelmshaven. Two vessels were taken into dry dock for the purpose of cleaning the sides of which were covered with the common mussel. The dock workpeople collected large quantities and took them home where they were prepared and eaten. Very shortly after partaking of them symptoms of poisoning [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

From the Registrar of Deeds for Middlesex County, Northern District.

COBURG, ONT., Mar. 5, 1887.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.—Gentlemen—It affords me much pleasure to testify to the efficacy of Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health has been much shattered for some years past. I have lost much flesh, and was very nervous. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has built up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours,

J. F. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

OLD PAUL.

The Mysterious Room, and What Its Opening Revealed.

Old Paul is dead, and who cares? Nobody. For Old Paul was a sloven, a glutton and a drunkard, and when he died the world said good riddance from poor rubbish. Still, Old Paul made a most respectable appearance as he passed through the village on his way to the graveyard, the most respectable he had made in it for twenty years. For, instead of his broken-down horse, in a harness tied together with strings, Old Paul was drawn by stately white horses in rich trappings, and instead of his crazy old wagon, with rickety wheels and splintered shafts, Old Paul's carriage, though for some reason few like to ride in it, was in every way respectable. Nor was the poor old man visible, with his slovenly dress and bloodshot eyes and burning face, and grizzled, shaggy beard, for Old Paul had a driver, and rode inside, and instead of the crowd of rascally boys that were wont to follow him, deeming it rare sport to see humanity sunk so low, Old Paul was followed by a long and most respectable funeral train, for he had many relations, though no friends, and they were all most respectably dressed in mourning, though in all the sable crowd that stood around the open grave I saw not one quivering lip or falling tear as the first earth clods fell upon the coffin's lid.

Old Paul's wife left him near twenty years ago, and the world excused her for it, for how, said the world, could any woman live with such a brute? But old Aunt Prudence shook her head at this off-hand verdict of the world. For she remembered that he was once young, dashing Paul, and Polly Jones, proud and handsome as she was, met him more than half way, as the gossips said fifty years ago, for he was rich and she was poor.

"And if the truth must be known," said Aunt Prudence, knocking the ashes from her pipe, and lowering her voice to a confidential tone, as if afraid of being overheard by some tenant of the graveyard, "they do say," forgetting that the tongues once busy with such gossip, all except her own, had long been silent in the grave, "they do say that Paul married for beauty and Polly for money, and you know, as old Billy Bain down at the poorhouse says, life's wagon will go hard when there is no love to grease the wheels."

Yes, gold had dazzled and blinded the one and beauty had dazzled and blinded the other, but they soon waked up, the one to the fact that for gold she had bound her life to a coarse and brutal nature, and the other to the fact that beauty, like frostwork glittering in moonlight, may be brilliant and at the same time freezing cold.

"How shockingly they have abused them pans," said Old Paul's wife the day after he was buried, on returning to the house that had been her home for more than thirty years, where her children had all been born and most of them had died.

Old Paul was, indeed, a brute, and he was well named with one who, under such circumstances, could think of such petty trash.

But three short weeks had passed when I heard that Old Paul's wife was sick, the next day worse and the third day dead, and she passed over the same road drawn by the same richly caparisoned horses in the same much dreaded carriage, to be laid by Old Paul's side.

One day I chanced to take a walk down by Old Paul's house. The spring was in its glory. The forests were clad in richest verdure. The apple trees were in full bloom and filled the air with fragrance, while the bees feeding upon their blossoms filled it with a dreamy murmur. The corn was just peeping from the ground and the rye fields began to wave in the passing breezes. The meadows were vocal with

The bobolink's clear thrilling strain
Of liquid sweet.

The ground birds were singing in the hedges and the robins from the trees that overhung the road.

As I approached the house I noticed horses tied to the posts and groups of men standing about the doors, and heaps of old furniture scattered here and there, which reminded me that it was auction day.

It was a large, old-fashioned square house, with two mount elms growing before it, spreading their giant branches far and wide.

In their thick, damp shade the moss had accumulated year after year until the whole front had grown to the green. There was everywhere an air of dilapidation and neglect. On all sides things were broken, boards, rag-stuffed windows, rickety fences, and fallen gates, proclaiming the habitation of the drunkard.

On [illegible] I found every[illegible] with the first view fr[illegible] Fields half cultivated, fr[illegible] that had caused the ribbons of their master and had fallen or were staggering to their fall, gates [illegible] plows [illegible] carts with broken [illegible] accumulated [illegible] of making the [illegible] and [illegible] baloos of [illegible] wagon and [illegible] forward to [illegible] of the [illegible] years, I heard [illegible] Paul [illegible] Patrick Mc[illegible] was [illegible] public valu[illegible] years, as [illegible] home. [illegible] cleared [illegible]

[illegible] Old Paul had kept locked for [illegible] permitting any one to enter it but himself. A jury of neighboring gossips had met more than once and he [illegible] under advisement, and [illegible] ominous verdict of "[illegible] mysterious."

As no one knew anything about it, every one felt free to say just what her imagination suggested. Some said it was haunted, and one cadaverous old man, who had dried up in single blessedness, threw out dark hints about a meddler who had most mysteriously disappeared. Some said lights had been seen and strangely sweet music heard there more than once at the dead of night.

The children caught the infection, and, if possible, avoided passing Old Paul's house in the night, but, if at any time benighted, their fear would add wings to their feet and eyes to their imaginations, and a ghost story was sure to be the result, especially if Old Paul's white horse was feeding near the house. This room also seemed to possess a strange power over Old Paul himself. He seldom visited it, and always left it greatly agitated and commonly in tears, and after such visits he had been known to be sober for weeks together.

This mystery, whatever it might be, was now about to be cleared up. A group of eager gossips had already gathered about the door, which had to be forced, as the key could not be found. One of the shutters, which Old Paul always kept closed, was opened to let in the light of day, and with it all that mystery vanished. Instead of a haunt for the revels of spirits of darkness or murder spots that "would not out," we saw only a large square room furnished with an air of gentility and taste that the dust of twenty years could not hide, and in strange contrast with the rest of the house.

The mystery had vanished, and with it all that coarse hilarity. Even the collecting auctioneer stood mute, his coarse features covered with a shade of thoughtful sadness.

More than one lip quivered, and more than one hard hand brushed away an obtrusive tear, as this dusty old room called up from its oblivious slumber some touching memory of the past.

There was one old woman who, in the midst of the bustle, had seemed busy with her own thoughts, and more than once her heart had seemed full some little article was sold. I had noticed her, and inquired who she was; and they told me that her husband had once been a drunkard worse even than Old Paul, but that he had suddenly reformed and became a respectable man; that they had been miserably poor, with a large family, but after his reformation became quite comfortable livers, and all agreed that she was as good a woman as lived this side of heaven.

As she entered the room her feelings quite overcame her. The tears coursed each other down the deep furrows on her cheeks.

"Yes," at length she said, "this is Nelly's room, just as she left it. What a sweet creature that was! She was an angel to me in my poverty and suffering. Hardly a day passed without her bringing over some nice little things for poor little Willy, who was sick so long. But he is well now, thank God, and they are both in heaven together. And then she had such a kind way to give anything that it would make a brown crust taste good. It was different times in this house when she was in it. I always hoped she would be able to save poor Paul, for she could do anything with him; but she saved my poor husband, for he never drank a drop after she talked to him, so like an angel as she was just before she died. He could never speak of her to the day of his death without crying. She was all quite sightless when she went away. I always told him she didn't belong in this world, but was only here on a visit. What a time that was the day she was buried! Everybody seemed to feel just as if they had lost one of their own family. I didn't see but our children felt just as bad as when our Katy died.

"Poor Willie cried till it seemed as if his heart would break, though she told him but the day before she left us—for, poor child, she knew she was going—she seemed to be thinking of everybody but herself, to be patient and good-natured and not to mind if he did suffer a good deal, and he would see her again before long.

"It is enough to make one want to die just to see the dear child again. But never mind, children, I shall be be with you soon." As she said this she looked steadily upward and spoke in a confidential tone, as if she saw those dear ones on the very border of the spiritual world, waiting impatiently for her to join them.

During this simple talk of the loving old woman, if there was a dry eye in that assemblage of careless, jovial crowd, mine were so blinded that I could not see it, and I felt convinced, more than I should have been by volumes of eulogies, that from that dusty room more than twenty years ago an angel had taken her homeward flight, and that she had since been permitted occasionally to flit across Old Paul's degraded soul, if perchance, she might yet win him from the error of his ways.

But how, thought I, could such an one grow up under such circumstances and with such surroundings? How? Why, in the same way the most beautiful flower can grow and shed its fragrance under the cold droppings of the [illegible]

"The Divine goodness is so prodigal—no, not prodigal, but profuse—in the bestowal of its gifts that, as there is no place it can be without its beauty, so there is none so morally waste and desolate but it does not produce some flower of Paradise; there is no thick, mantling pool of depravity so stagnant that no germs are not sometimes stirred by the rustling of an angel's wings."—Henry T. Miles, in Toledo Blade.

A SURE GUIDE.

Better Than a Trail Upon the Prairies in a Blinding Snowstorm.

Two travelers were lost on the prairies during a blinding snowstorm. Night was coming on, the trail was obscured by the swift-falling flakes and it seemed as if they were destined to perish far away from home and friends. But suddenly one of them turned his face to the north, whence the ice-laden wind came in cutting blasts, and bidding his comrade follow, walked with swiftness and confidence against the storm. Miles onward they pressed, the one who had first faced the storm leading always, with a step that was strong and steady and an expression that told of hope in his heart.

Darkness came down upon the treeless plain and the storm increased in fury. Directly a light twinkled in the distance, and, quickening their pace, the travelers were soon receiving the hearty welcome of an old settler and his kindly wife. When his guests were enjoying their pipes before the roaring blaze in the big fireplace the old settler said:

"The trail you were following runs full five miles to the south of us. What good piece of fortune brought you through this terrible storm to our cabin door?"

"It must have been the hand of Providence," said the old settler's good wife, who was removing the remains of the supper.

"Well, very likely it was," answered the traveler who had led the way through the snow and darkness to the rude but cheerful prairie home. "Very likely it was; the hand of Providence, but you, good madam, were the instrument which that hand used to bring us numbed and weary wanderers to your hospitable door. You were boiling cabbage, you know, and we were leeward, and once I got your bearings with my nose, which I think a very reliable one, I had no difficulty in reaching the human habitation I knew to be somewhere in the dark and mysterious beyond."—Toledo Blade.

AN ODD VIEW.

What Dumas Would Have Done With the Ducats of the Dead Vanderbilt.

Hard it is, indeed, to see how Mr. Vanderbilt was the better for his money. Perhaps he had 40,000,000 pounds, there or thereabouts. What can a man do with forty millions? He can do nothing, unless he has the imagination of a Dumas or the tastes of a Beckford. Mr. Beckford collected a truly delightful and marvellous library of books. Mr. Vanderbilt did nothing of the sort. He had no particular craving for rare editions, and the masterpieces of Duseuil and Le Gascon. Dumas, again, would have run through the money like a man. He would have presented Italy to the Italians and Rome to Victor Emmanuel. Perhaps he would have annexed India; very probably, at least, he would have made the attempt. He would have carried Duchesses captive, and his dramas would have been magnificently performed in Timbuctoo. He would have cut a canal through the Isthmus of Corinth; he would have carved Mount Athos into a statue of Athos; Compte de la Fere. He would have seen to it that flying became a practical art, and France's navies would have pounced from the central blue on Birmingham and carried off the Liberal Seven to chains and slavery. Dumas would have released convicts and imprisoned Princes. He would have fitted up in palatial style as many caves as Shelley ever dreamed of, and would have filled them with the most magnificent and most magnanimous brigands, many of them cardinals in disguise. O, great and glorious Alexander, exclaims the dazzled fancy, why hadst not thou the forty millions, while the tame Vanderbilt starved on a pittance of a few yearly thousands?—Saturday Review.

HOW TO AVOID SCARS

A Physician Shows How a Little Care Will Effect Their Removal.

Scars are always unsightly, and are often painful or inconvenient on account of their propensity to contract as they become older. Dr. Ward, of New York, asserts that they may be removed by manipulation, which he expects to be employed as follows: Place the ends of two or three fingers on a scar if it be a small one, and on the margin if it be large, and vibrate the surface on the tissues beneath. The surface itself is not to be subjected to any friction; all the motion must be between the integument and the deeper parts. The locomotion of the vibratile motion should be changed every ten or fifteen seconds until the whole scar has been treated, if it be of moderate size. If the scar be the result of a large scald or burn the margin only should be treated at first; the advances toward the center should be deferred until the nutrition of the margins has been decidedly improved. Only a little treatment should be applied to any one spot at the same time, but the vibrations should be repeated as many as twenty times a day, but never with sufficient frequency or severity to cause pain. If the scar becomes irritable, suspend treatment until it subsides. In the course of two or three weeks of faithful treatment the surface of the scars of moderate size becomes more movable and will begin to form wrinkles like new skin when pressed from side to side. All these changes are due to improved nutrition, consequent on better blood circulation—the development of entirely new parts of blood in the cicatrical tissue.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Good Results in Every Case.

D. B. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs; had tried many remedies without benefit. CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Commercial Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has ever attended any modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Over 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety percent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not ten per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of germs, parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon has once adapted his cure to their extermination, this accomplished he claims the catarrh is speedily cured and the permanency is unknown. It does not appear to be within four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and inclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

A WORD ABOUT ADVERTISING.

Stacy, of the Tecumseh HERALD, made one of his semi-weekly visits to Clinton a few days ago soliciting advertising for his sheet. He offered one of our business men a half column advertisement at $[illegible] per year. We presume the editor has Tecumseh patronage at [illegible] for the same space. If Stacy can afford to run a half column for a Clinton man at $[illegible] per year, he can do the same work for one of his own townsmen at the same figure. Tecumseh business men should make a note of this fact and [illegible] [illegible] advertising here, as our friends are going through his columns. The LEADER is the only Clinton paper now published, and our people are well aware of that fact. All copies of the Tecumseh publication to the contrary, notwithstanding.

The above comes [illegible] from last week's Clinton Local. For some mysterious reason our exchange copy of the Local failed to reach us last week. But we borrowed a copy from a subscriber and thus the item accompanying came to our notice. Some of the statements therein are true and some quite the contrary. It is true that we had Clinton a few days ago and solicited advertising. Bro. Miles makes personal inquiries to the young man should give heed to the old adage. To a bad rule that does not work both ways. He failed to secure any advertising here. That statement is not true. We obtained one quarter col. card and the promise of several more at an early day. He offered one of our business men a half column advertisement at $[illegible] per year. That statement has not a shadow of foundation in fact. Bro. Miles has been egregiously imposed upon by some one in Clinton, who has misinformed him, and Mr. Miles owes it to himself and to us now to exact a written statement from his informant over his signature, in order to give the difficulty name to the parties. The rate we gave was in every instance the same, viz. "fifty cents per week for a quarter column." This has been a standard rate with us for years, notwithstanding for fear that time our circulation has more than doubled.

And [illegible] we wish to inform the Clinton Local that the HERALD's advertising rates are [illegible] than those of any paper in Lenawee County with perhaps one exception. We will be glad to compare rates with our contemporaries. That is their own concern. But we know that the HERALD gives its patrons greater returns for the amount paid for advertising than most other country newspapers in this section of the state.

What is the proper basis of advertising rates? Circulation, of course, a certain price for each 1000 papers issued. All newspapers, both large and small, city and country papers, establish their rates on that basis. A rate charged by the Detroit Free Press would be excessive, if charged by the HERALD. A fair rate for a card in the HERALD would be exorbitant when charged by a paper having one third our circulation. And yet this is a fact that our advertising rates are but little in excess of those charged by our contemporaries in this vicinity, having from one third to one half of our circulation. We are entirely willing that our advertising patrons should obtain the rates of neighboring newspapers and compare them with ours. The rates charged by the HERALD will not suffer by such a comparison.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

Friday evening Jan. 29th, the club met at John Schreder's. Their spacious rooms were filled.

Leva Gillespie gave a pleasing recitation entitled "Fifty years ago." Mrs. Geo. Griswold gave a select reading instead of an essay. Mrs. John Fisher also gave a select reading. The choir sang two old war songs, which brought vividly to mind the sad hearts during that never-to-be-forgotten strife. The club was entertained with some music out of the usual routine, played by three young men upon a violin, guitar and bones. Then followed the discussion.

Mr. Rector. I think farmers make a mistake in trying what can be raised to make the largest dividend. It is a difficult thing to decide what is most profitable. Markets change, land, soil, work &c.

[illegible] but that is owing to the soil and will not do at all times to the exclusion of other crops, but I think, taking all things into consideration, corn will give the greatest dividend. Some men think Bohemian oats give the greatest returns.

Mr. R. Gillespie. This is a hard question to talk upon, as many things [illegible] I think if we raised corn to the exclusion of wheat we would make a mistake. We can make the greatest dividends by mixed farming, but I think if depending upon one crop alone, corn will give the greatest dividend.

Mr. S. greater spoke of the statistics given by the Secretary of State proving that wheat gave the greatest dividends, but Mr. Gillespie thinks the statistician has made a mistake and low.

Mr. Griswold. I think the expense of growing for wheat is lower than I can place for. I thought he put the expense of raising corn too high. One of our discussions last winter led me to keep an account of my wheat crop last year and I found it cost me 31 cts. a bushel. I will give the figures for one field I had there, which will vary a little from 31 cents, but the whole average 31 cents.

One field 9 acres, use of land $5. per acre	$42.50
Plowing	20.00
Fitting	10.00
Drilling	9.00
Seed	14.50
Harvesting	12.00
Drawing to barn	12.00
Threshing	18.20
Marketing	6.00
	$141.20

Number of bushels of wheat raised 454.

I think the expense of raising corn was put too high, as I am confident that I can raise corn at an expense of ten cents a bushel. But if I was to calculate upon one crop, I should prefer wheat.

Mr. Everhart. Our staple crops in this section are wheat and corn, and they give the best dividends. According to some statistics I have kept, I am inclined to think corn the more profitable.

EXPENSE OF ONE ACRE OF WHEAT.

Plowing	$ 1.50
Rolling	.25
Cultivating	.75
Dragging	.50
Drilling	.30
Seed, 1½ bushels	1.50
Harvesting and drawing	2.00
Threshing	1.44
Interest on land	5.00
	$13.04
Credit by straw	1.50
	$12.54

Eighteen bushels of wheat at 85 cts. $15.30, giving a dividend of $3.16 per acre.

EXPENSE OF ONE ACRE OF CORN.

Plowing	$ 1.50
Rolling	.25
Dragging	.25
Marking	.25
Planting	.25
Cultivating six times	3.00
Cutting	1.00
Husking	3.10
Cribbing	.50
Seed	.25
Interest on land	5.00
	$15.45
Credit for stalks	2.00
	$13.45

Eighty bushels corn at 20 cents per bushel, $16.00, giving a dividend of $2.55 per acre.

According to these statistics there is more profit in corn and wheat has to be sold while corn can be fed and thus make it make a return in this way.

Mr. Fisher. I think Mr. Everhart's estimate for planting corn is too high. I think mixed farming the most profitable, but I will confine myself to understanding the question to mean what one crop can we raise that will pay the greatest dividend. I will disagree with all others before me. I think if we confine ourselves to one crop, grass is the most profitable, as it can be raised and put in the barn very cheaply, but wheat and corn must remain the staple crops.

ESTIMATED COST AND PROFIT OF ONE ACRE OF GRASS.

To use of land	$ 5.00
Cutting	.40
Tedding	.10
Raking	.10
Putting up	.25
Drawing	1.15
Total cost	$7.00

Cr. By 2 tons of hay at $8 a ton, $16.00; profit $9. The picture derived from the land is worth what the seed cost.

Mr. F. Depuy. It is a great study what to raise to make the most money. I believe the farms in this section might be made to pay a third more. We should raise more on less land. I have made it profitable to raise wheat and sheep. I know there are not many here who take much stock in sheep, but I like to raise them and I think I can enrich my land cheaply by my mode of keeping sheep.

Mr. F. Rector. There is little use of farmers in this section confining themselves to one crop, we must have mixed farming. If we confine ourselves to one crop I think oats would prove profitable, for after they are threshed and put in the bins we [illegible] the corn crop comes, all written with much hard work to feed out to make it profitable. Wheat and corn will always prove staple crops and we must raise them.

Mr. Horton. If we confine ourselves to wheat and corn as our staple crops I think corn will pay the greater dividend, as corn pays us a greater profit in a greater number of ways than any other crop we raise.

Mr. J. H. Schreder. I am not going back on the corn crop, but I think it a very expensive crop. We begin in April to draw manure to enrich the land and it is constant work until it is cribbed in Oct. or Nov., and then we work all winter feeding it out. If we took as much pains with our wheat crop and gave it the best ground and manured it as heavily as for corn, I think wheat would pay a greater profit, and I believe the wheat crop does pay the greatest dividend according to the expense of raising.

The secretary can give but a tame idea in these reports of the interest exhibited by the members in these discussions of the questions before the club, and we respectfully invite all interested in them to be present at the meetings.

The next meeting will be held Friday evening Feb. 12th, at Philip Kehoe's.

THE FUN WAS NOT OVER.

Veracious Account of a Wedding by a Newly-Commissioned Justice of the Peace in Arkansas.

A very interesting wedding occurred over at Hock Springs the other night. Ben Lother and Ida Grimes ran away from the neighborhood where they had been reared and applied to young Wilkinson, who recently accepted a call to preach. The arrival of the runaway couple soon became known, and quite a number of young people gathered at the school house where the ceremony was to be performed. The preacher, upon arriving, called Bill Fellers to one side and said:

"Bill, I couldn't refuse to accommodate that young couple, but to tell the truth I don't know how to perform a marriage ceremony. I was never married and I never saw anybody married, and I don't understand the performance."

"I never saw anybody married, either," Bill replied, "and I don't believe there's anybody here that understands it."

"It won't do to disappoint them, for I understand the girl's father is in pursuit. Let's see, you were commissioned as a justice of the peace the other day, weren't you?"

"Yes, but the papers didn't shed any light on marriage ceremonies."

"I don't know what to do about it," the young preacher continued. "They've begun to grow restless, you see."

"Well, parson, I don't understand it any more than you, but I am willing, if you'll help me kill hogs next week, to take the job off your hands."

"All right."

Bill turned to the company and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, we are met here to engage in a very serious business. This young couple pointing think they ought to be married, and it ain't for me to say they ought not. Young fellow, have you got your license?"

"Yes, sir."

"All right. Hop out here, now." The young couple advanced.

"Join hands," said Bill, "I would like to say that the new ceremony just approved by the governor has gone into effect. Those who have never seen the ceremony will doubtless be surprised at its novelty, but I'll say right here that all snickering will be treated as contempt of court. Young man, what is your business?"

"I am a farmer."

"Ah, hah! How many rails can you split in a day?"

"Forty hundred in good timber."

"Will you swear it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Hold up your right hand." He held up his hand and was sworn. Bill [illegible]

"Are you a good hand to cover corn?"

"Yes, sir."

"Please say, 'yes your honor.'"

"Yes, your honor."

"That's right. How much can you cover in a day?"

"Three acres if the land's in good condition."

"Will you swear that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yes, your honor."

"Please say, 'Yes your honor.' Hold up your right hand and let us see your scale. Can you see the weight of the large boss you ever caught?"

"Yes, your honor."

"Will you swear it?"

"No, your honor."

"All right. Are you willing to marry this girl?"

"Yes, your honor. If I wasn't I wouldn't have brought her here."

"That's what I thought." Bill meditatively replied. "You love her, I reckon?"

"Yes, your honor."

"How much?"

"Oh, I don't know. Ever so much."

"What did she say when you asked her?"

"She said 'Yes.'"

"Glad to hear it. Now, young lady, will you please advance and kiss the judge?"

The girl hesitated a moment, but she stepped up and kissed Bill.

"Do you love this man?"

"Yes, your honor."

The girl corrected her mistake.

"How much do you love him?"

"Lots."

"Glad to hear it. Please step forward and kiss the judge."

Again she kissed him.

"Remember that you are under oath. Did you ever love any one else?"

"Yes, your honor."

"Why didn't you marry him?"

"He didn't ask me."

"Please advance and kiss the judge."

"Look here, squire," said the would-be bridegroom, "I believe we'd rather be married the old way."

"The old way is repealed. Young lady, how old are you?"

"Look here, judge," said the now impatient lover, "that's none of your business."

"Yes, it is. Young lady, will you please advance and kiss the judge."

"No, I'll be blamed if she shall," exclaimed the young man, "and more than that, this thing has gone far enough. Now, I want to ask you a few questions. Don't move." The young fellow whipped out a pistol and Bill's knees began to hump each other. "Now, just stand there. Did you ever see a bigger liar than you are?"

"No, sir."

"No, colonel."

"No, colonel," Bill repeated.

"Wouldn't you steal if you got a chance?"

"Yes, colonel."

"That's what I thought. Now, confound you, lead us to a preacher's house pretty devilish quick. Come on, folks, the fun ain't over yet."

Services at the Universalist church next Sunday, Feb. 7th as follows: In the morning at 10:30, a sermon upon "The Handwriting of God." At 11:45 Sunday School. In the evening at 7 o'clock a discourse upon "The Glory of Life." All cordially invited to attend.

The M. & O. excursion to Toledo last Friday was well patronized. Both morning and afternoon trains going east were filled and five coaches were loaded down on the return train at night. The Tecumseh contingent arrived home about two o'clock the next morning.

Two new sewing machines are on sale at the HERALD office. One is a new style American, and the other an improved Singer. Both are first-class machines and have never been used except for trial. Any person wanting to buy a new sewing machine for cash will find either of these a bargain. Call and look at them.

Mr. O. B. DeWolf received a letter the other day from Will D. Robbins, who is running a jewelry business now at St. Paul, Minn. He sells on the installment plan and is working up a fine trade. A few months ago he invested a few hundred dollars in a tract of real estate and sold it the other day at an advance of $1000.

The holidays of 1886 are as follows: Washington's birthday comes on Monday; St. Valentine's day, Sunday; All Fool's day, Thursday; Memorial day, Sunday; St. Patrick's day, Wednesday; Fourth of July, Sunday; and Christmas on Saturday. Easter Sunday will fall on the 25th of April and Lent begins on March 10. There will be two eclipses of the sun during the year.

We are in receipt of a neat wedding card announcing the marriage, on Wednesday, Jan. 27, of George Lord Graves to Mary Stuart Bridges, at Milwaukee. George Graves never returns to the old home without finding many friends to welcome him, all of whom will join us in extending their warmest congratulations. His beautiful children need a kind mother, and we trust Providence will bless the choice Mr. Graves has made.

Three young chaps were arrested Monday morning for disturbing the Free Methodist meeting on the evening previous, deputy Rhoades making the arrest on a warrant sworn out by one of the members of the church before Justice McCann. They pled guilty and deposited $3.40 fine and costs. One of them claimed he could not help but snicker when a paper ball struck Elder Fisk on the back of the head with a swash, as he was engaged in one of his characteristic prayers. Such snickers sometimes come high, though.—Blissfield Advance.

Last Saturday afternoon a party of twelve happy young people from the vicinity of Tecumseh, took a sleigh ride to Adrian, to visit the new court house and pay their respects to the young gentlemen and ladies at Mr. Harmon Camburn's. The ride and visit were all that was anticipated, and they were warmly welcomed and hospitably entertained by Mrs. Camburn, who treated them to a supper of oysters, coffee and other delicious and substantial viands. After spending a pleasant evening they bid their hostess and the young people good bye, and arriving home at twelve o'clock they all expressed themselves as having had a "jolly" time and think Mr. Camburn's a "boss" place to visit.

We learn that Dr. E. M. Conklin intends to remove to Wichita, Kansas, about the first of March, to practice his profession. The doctor has many friends in Tecumseh who will receive this intelligence with deep regret.

The Tecumseh & Franklin Farmer's Club had a rousing meeting last week. The proceedings, which will be found elsewhere, will repay careful perusal.

Harry Spaulding and wife, of Milwaukee, arrived in town last Saturday and spent the Sabbath and Monday at his fathers. His friends were right glad to see him but he made rather too short a visit. Come again.

The February number of the Gardener's monthly is on hand in good season and from the first cover page to the last is filled with useful information for the market gardener. Chas. H. Marot, Publisher, 814 Chestnut St. Phil.

C. A. Wright & Co. have remodeled the interior of their store. The shelving for wall paper has been moved to the front end of the room on the west side, and other improvements have been made. The present arrangement will be much better than the old one for displaying their large stock of wall papers.

Our esteemed contemporary, the HERALD, stated to its readers last week that the editor of the News was afflicted with a cancerous sore throat. We hasten to correct the error. It is true we had a sore throat for a few days, the result of a severe cold, but it wasn't cancerous. It was cantankerous. We are not quite ready to have our obituary written yet.—Tecumseh News.

A large party of the G. A. R. boys, with their wives, making a company of about fifty in all, took a sleigh ride Tuesday evening up to Comrade Chas. Davis's west of Clinton. It was a complete surprise to him, but the party took oysters and other refreshments along with them, and hence they were prepared for a good evening's entertainment. Mr. Davis and his estimable wife acted the host and hostess most acceptably, and the guests passed a most enjoyable evening, as one of the comrades expressed it yesterday—"We had a tip-top time."

We take great pleasure in calling attention to the Rural New Yorker the more so, because it is owned and edited by successful, every day, practical farmers. Such men being of the farm, are always for the farmer, and entitled to the farmer's confidence and support. It is also doing a good work in scattering broadcast, by its Free Seed Distribution, many new and very valuable seeds and plants. If you are not already a subscriber, you should loose no time in becoming one, and thus be entitled to share in its next Distribution. Price $2.00 per year. Clubbed with the HERALD for $3.00.

THE COMMERCIAL TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The annual business meeting of this thriving young organization was held last Monday, when the following persons were chosen officers for the ensuing year.

President—Dr. R. B. House.
Vice Pres.—O. B. Bills.
Treasurer—W. B. Keyser.
Secretary—Dr. L. G. North.
Manager—R. J. W. Bowen.

The Board of Directors consists of six members, the five officers named above and Abner Wilson.

The reports presented at the meeting show some interesting statistics. The company was incorporated under its present name in January 1883. It now extends into the towns of Franklin, Clinton and Raisin, and it is expected to run the line to Ridgeway and Sand Lake during the present season. There are now 31 instruments on the line, distributed as follows: Twelve farmers, seven private residences in the village, two merchants, two doctors, both railroad depots and one each of banker, studio, livery stable, news depot, lumber dealer and freight office. Last year the company paid a state tax of $14.95.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATION.

A Hedgeville (Ill.) special to the Chicago Tribune says: A few weeks ago the "Bohemian oats" racket was exposed. Now, however, the same sharps are working the same territory again by a new scheme. They offer a fabulous price for oats, and take a few bushels to "bind the trade," the farmer singing an agreement to furnish a certain number of bushels at the big price. The "agreement" comes back in thirty days as a note in the hands of an innocent third party, and collectable. In the meantime the swindlers have moved to another neighborhood.

Dundee can show up its full quota of cases of sneak thieving, till tapping, robbing hen roosts, &c., but cannot show up where the perpetrators of such offenses have come in contact with the law, even after detection. Crime is committed with impunity. We are not specially desirous of seeing any one "sent over the road," but are desirous of seeing some demonstration indicating that we are not living in a lawless community.—Dundee Reporter.

Warren Babcock took possession of the postoffice Tuesday afternoon, and is now performing the duties of new post master. The office has been in the hands of the Palmers for nearly 15 years, the salary in t at time ranging from $60 to $600 per year, showing that there is now ten times as much business transacted there now as there was at the time it was taken by Dr. Palmer.—Milan Leader.

A curiosity that has attracted considerable attention at the bookstore is a Chinese lilly, with a profusion of fragrant small white flowers. The queer feature is that it grows on clean rock, in water, without any soil. The bulb was presented to Mrs. Wood about six weeks ago by Hing Lee, the almond-eyed celestial who does the washee-washee in Ypsilanti. He brought the bulbs over on his return from a recent visit to the Flowry Kingdom.—Hudson Gazette.

LECTURE FOR THE G. A. R.

Geo. W. Bain, the great Kentucky orator, will lecture at the Opera House on Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th, for the benefit of G. A. R. relief fund. His subject will be, Boys and Girls, Nice and Naughty, or the Pendulum of Life. It is full of wit, eloquence and practical thoughts, and is worth a days journey to listen to it. Here is what the press says about it.

It was the best address ever given in the tabernacle.—Hannibal (Mo.) Daily.

Bain's lecture last evening on "Boys and Girls—Nice and Naughty," was by far the best of the course.—Lowville (N. Y.) Times.

We have never heard anything more beautiful and sublime than were some of his descriptive sentences. When he turns his arguments, thus illumined by the power of his vivid imagination upon the audience with a pathetic tenderness which is irresistible, they understand something of the power of human eloquence.—Brantford (Canada) Intelligencer.

He possesses, in a marked degree, that indescribable magnetism of appearance that characterized Clay and Douglass. By that magnetism, and his matchless eloquence, he held the sweltering, surging mass of humanity spell bound by appeals clothed with the most beautiful language ever heard in Kansas.—Kansas City Times.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

On the evening of Jan. 27th, the farmers came from the east, the west, the north and the south, and brought their wives and children, until Wm. Waldron's house was as full as it could be. But there was a welcome for all. Several visitors from the Farmer's Social Club were present and took part in the discussion.

The literary programme was carried out as published with the addition of music by Grant Schreder and Henry Horton, and Mrs. Harry, by request, favored the audience with another selection.

The club then settled down to the question "How can corn be raised with the most profit?"

The gentlemen who was to open the discussion [illegible] and, in the president appointed Mr. Fay DePuy, who set the ball rolling as follows. I can make more on the same number of acres from a crop of corn than any thing else I raise, my land being well adapted to corn. Select my seed when husking it, and keep it dry. I cultivate thoroughly, keeping the ground clean. You cannot raise corn and weeds.

W. S. Osborn. I use all the manure I have to spare. Plow in the spring not over five inches, and fit thoroughly. Mark with a ridge marker, using the single tooth first, and doubl[illegible] in crossing. Plant with ha[illegible] think i[illegible] cheaper, and tha[illegible] comes better. I raise the [illegible] show dent. I think it as earl[illegible] as the small kinds and will yield more. I would not leave over 3 or 4 spears in a hill without I want it for fodder. I think 100 bushels a good crop and can afford to raise it for that amount per acre.

H. Hoag. I try to save my own seed before I cut the corn, saving the earliest and best. Kiln dry and do not shell 'till ready to plant. Plow in the spring, and usually fit in good shape. We are apt to be in too much of a hurry about planting. Plant with a hoe. Think the corn comes better than when I used the planter. In cultivating commence with a drag. If the ground crusts before the corn is up I drag it. Keep the cultivator going, especially through haying and harvest, when we are apt to neglect the corn field.

Geo. Griswold. If I have any manure I put it on the corn ground and plow as deep as I can (8 or 9 inches). I like to plant when the ground is in good shape, had rather wait a few day's and have it put in good. Use a planter. If the ground crusts over would drag it, want it well cultivated, would go over the field every 3 or 4 day's or after rain. Like the big kinds of dent, and consider 100 to 125 bushels per acre a good fair crop. Shallow plowing starts the corn first but deep plowing turns out the most bushels. I have been troubled with cut-worms, and do not know any remedy for them. Have had no trouble when I planted on wheat stubble. I can raise corn and put it in the crib for 10c. per bushel.

H. Wilson. It is my idea that we will have to change our method and plow up sod for wheat, and plant the stubble with corn. I plow 9 inches. The corn does better than on shallow plowing, as it stands the drouth best. You cannot fit the ground too much. Had rather have the ground in good shape if I did not plant till the 1st. of June. I prefer the small yellow dent. In cultivating I use a planter and think it the best cultivator that was ever put in a corn field.

W. S. Osborn. I think on the clay that you can't get a plow down nine inches, and if you did the corn would not come up in two years; think that 4 weeks in the spring is worth 6 in the fall, on a crop of corn. I use a spring tooth cultivator and think the planet is no good in a corn field.

R. Gillespie. My farm is sandy loom and well adapted to corn. I prefer a clover sod well manured with barn yard manure. Plow 7 to 8 inches as a general rule. Fit well and get the corn in as early as I can, as soon as the 10th of May, using seed that will grow. I think that we should select a kind of corn suited to the soil; that it is better to have less yield, than soft corn. Cultivate thoroughly. I would have the corn cut up in good shape and husked as soon as I can, on dry days, and draw every day all we husk. Think the sooner we get the corn in the crib after husking, the better. Plant 4 feet apart each way, using hand planter.

A. H. Hall. I think the ground has been pretty well gone over, but will say, I drag my corn after planting whether it rains or not. If planted with a planter you can use any kind of a drag and not drag out the corn. I use a two horse cultivator and can get close enough to the row if we take time enough and can do as good work as with a one horse cultivator.

S. Munger. I would plow in the fall. Do not think the worms are as bad as when plowed in the spring. Find that the cut worms are worse on land that has lain in pasture 2 or 3 years. I plow 6 or 7 inches. Plant the white dent, think it matures as early as any and has more sound corn.

President Hurry. I select my seed corn when I am husking, and put it up over the kitchen stove, as our kitchen is more useful than ornamental, and is a good place to cure seed corn. I have tried salt, but it did not kill the worms. I have planted my corn ground this fall, and think it pays. I plow 5 to 6 inches. I raised 130 bushels per acre the first three years I lived on my present farm. It was on creek bottoms. The soil has more to do with the yield than the cultivator.

The club adjourned to meet Feb. 10 at James Updyke's, Jr., when they will indulge in an oyster supper.

A BUSINESS MELODY.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise;
For when he marked his prices down,
He then did advertise.

And when he saw his trade increase
[illegible]
He marked his flowers every price
And advertised again.
—New York Journal.

And w[illegible]en he advertised again
His rivals loudly swore,
To see folks rush with might and main
To patronize his store.

And while they sat in solitude,
And saw him custom win,
That man behind the counter stood
And raked the shekels in.
—Charlestown News.

The while his rival down the street
Looked on with great surprise.
And called the printer naughty names
And wiped his weeping eyes.

But now his blunder he can see,
His fate he does bewail,
He's closing out his stock of goods
At sheriff's bankrupt sale.

SOME QUEER FISH.

A Walking Fish Whose Goggle Eyes Project and Twist Around.

A far more singular walking fish than any of these is the old creature that rejoices, unfortunately, in the very classical surname of Periophthalmus, which, being interpreted, Sneezabout. If he had a recognized English name of his own, I would gladly give it here, and so I shall, perhaps, if I can find him somewhere. The Periophthalmus, shy, is an oddity of mudflats and tropic shores, a fish of fairy tale, or rather, of the Arabian Nights, with goggle eyes, and a habit of walking on the surface of the water and promenades the bare beach erect on two legs, in search of small crabs and other stray marine animals left behind by the receding waters. If you try to catch him, he hops away briskly much like a frog and stares back at you grumpily over his left shoulder, with his squinting optics. So completely adapted is he for this amphibious longshore existence, that his big eyes, unlike those of most other fish, are formed for seeing in the air as well as in the water. Nothing can be more ludicrous than to watch him suddenly thrusting these very movable orbs right out of their sockets like a pair of telescopes, and then twisting round in all directions so as to see before, behind, on top, below, in one delightful circular sweep.

There is also a certain minnow tropical American carp, which, though it hardly deserves to be considered in the strict sense a fish out of water, [illegible] half way under that peculiar category, for it always swims with its dorsal parts above water and partly in air. But the fashion in which its eyes are arranged is the fashion in which half of each eye is cast in the air and the other half is beneath the water. Accordingly, the eye is divided by a dark strip into two distinct and nearly proportion, the upper one of which has a pupil adapted to vision in the air alone, while the lower is adapted for seeing in the water only. The poor little creature swims with its eye half out of the water, and it can see as well on dry land as in its native ocean. Its name is Anableps, but it does not wish the fact to be generally known.—Cornhill Magazine.

DESERVES THE BELT.

An Oregon Fish Story Whose Author Is Entitled to a Prize.

There are several fine trout streams in the vicinity of Scandron, and H. G. Gould, who edits and publishes the Advocate there, has become quite a fish-digest. Like all who write or talk about fish, some of his statements seem almost incredible, as the following sample shows. About three years ago a farmer on Pudding River built a fish pond and stocked it with trapping trout. That winter the river overflowed the pond and the fish escaped, and have since remained in the river. Not long since a farmer who had a field of fine fall grain adjoining the river, noticed that something had been wallowing it down. There were no tracks of animals visiting the place, irregular, small patches leading up from the river, [illegible] of the new trapper pond. [illegible] at hand and in the bright moonlight stood a [illegible] with his head. He had [illegible] of a long train of colts that came wadding up from the river and the grain. Waiting until the colts had [illegible] over a considerable space of ground, the farmer made a mistake and was almost persuaded to feel that the issues were chip who were feeding like swine upon his succulent wheat. Proceeding a little he killed a dozen of the largest and took them home. The fish displayed another his awkward ability in escaping to the river. The farmer will have fresh fish all winter. Carp are known to be very fond of [illegible] and it is a question for them they can sustain life out of the native element for several hours at a time.—Portland Oregonian.

TORNADO PREDICTION.

The Main Peculiarity Upon Which the Signal Service Advises Are Based.

The most remarkable and interesting feature of these tornadoes is the fact that they nearly always form southeast of a moving center of low pressure, and then, traveling northeast and there continue, subject to the progressive direction of the main storm. For example, on January 15, 1884, 41 tornadoes occurred in Georgia, Alabama and North Carolina, but principally in Georgia and Alabama. They developed at a distance of from 300 to 400 miles from the storm center that moved across the northern part of the United States, beginning at the northern extremity of the Rocky Mountains in Montana, thence southeastward through Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin to Northern Illinois and Indiana, northward through Michigan across Lake Huron, disappearing north of Quebec. This sudden skip to the storm center southward, into Illinois and Indiana, seems to have relation to the unprecedentedly large number of tornadoes that developed not far from the South Atlantic coast, extending inland as far as Southern Illinois and Indiana. This southward large of a mass of cold, moist air seems to have caused the abnormal conditions of temperature and dew-point and the high winds necessary to cause the most tremendous of all kind of destructive tornadoes ever recorded by the Signal Service. This, and [illegible] the storm [illegible] of the [illegible] which [illegible] [illegible]

The Wonderful Gifts of Science [illegible]

The first railway [illegible] which was constructed [illegible] ton and Darlington, [illegible] September, 1825, [illegible] [illegible] animals of our knowledge [illegible] discovery of the true cause of phenomena, is a long way [illegible] compass of [illegible] It is unnecessary for me to [illegible] more than these four of the many gifts made by science to mankind during the last sixty years. [illegible] survey here, I would ask if there [illegible] corresponding period in [illegible] tory which can take credit for so many momentous applications of scientific knowledge to the wants of mankind? Depreciators of the value of [illegible] knowledge are wont to speak [illegible] scornfully of these and such like [illegible] factions as mere additions to material welfare. I must own to the weakness of believing that material welfare is highly desirable in itself, and I have yet to meet with the man who prefers material ill-fare. But even if this should be, as some may say, painful evidence of the materialistic tendencies incidental to scientific pursuits, it is not at all possible, without much ingenuity or any prejudice to fairness of one's view of the mutual relations of material and spiritual phenomena, to show that each of these four applications of science has exerted a prodigious influence on the moral, social and political relations of mankind, and that such influence can only increase as time goes on. If the sewerless metropolis, born of pestilence, which formerly converted neighbors, whether they belonged to adjacent families or to adjacent nations, into natural enemies, are dying away, improved means of communication deserve the chief credit of the change; it will become less frequent it will be chiefly because its population will be intensified beyond bearing, the close interdependence and community of interests established by railways and telegraphs to be less than by the huge wealth of the means of destruction to so terrible invention. Arms of precision have taken the mastery of the world out of the hands of brute force and given it to those of industry and intelligence. If railways and electric telegraphs have rendered it unnecessary that modern empires should fall to pieces by their own weight as ancient empires did, arms of precision have provided against the possibility of their being swept away by barbarous invasions. Health means not merely wealth, not merely bodily welfare, but intellectual and moral soundness, and I doubt if, since the time of the father of medicine, any discovery has contributed so much to the promotion of health and the cure of disease as that of the part played by fungoid parasites in the animal economy, and of the means of checking them, even though, as yet, unfortunately, it be only in a few cases.—Prof. Huxley in Nature.

WOMEN AS INVENTORS.

What Joseph Harris Writes from England on This Subject.

A list of American women patentees has called the attention of social reformers to this interesting subject, and while the number on this side of the Atlantic of women who have the most patents for new inventions is very small in comparison with those of the United States, the number of patents granted to women from July, 1884, to the end of March in the current year of 1885, shows a great increase on previous years, and is not without special interest at the present moment. It is however noticeable that with American women, who rush into the arena of the sciences and practical and scientific research and invention, Englishwomen are [illegible] generally regarded [illegible] their own particular sphere. Walter an American woman invented a Burlington sewing machine, an Englishwoman takes out a patent for a improved perambulator, while Mrs. Mary E. Walker patentes a system for deadening the sound of elevated railroads in a English sister, a government [illegible] a [illegible] and [illegible] at hotels and other establishments, while Mrs. A. H. Maynard invents a new process and sewing machine, an English [illegible] of a book for registering appointments, for the manufacture of bread. Mrs. Mather in the United States improves the dough and bread, and Mrs. Jones of England, [illegible] a compound for the paste, and so on. Not that I would infer there is no evidence of [illegible] than is represented in these English patents, for among others women have taken out patents for improvements in pianoforte keyboards, in the manufacture of non-alcoholic beverages from fruits, and improvements in connection with circular frame knitters. The comparison I have given above is, nevertheless, a just one, although it may fairly be said for Englishwomen that just as they are only now entering upon a course of social and political freedom, they are only beginning to take up the role of inventors.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The British Museum has now a department entirely devoted to newspapers, which is a great boon to students. The number of readers in special ticket has now increased so largely that although only adults are admitted more room will soon have to be provided or the admission limited.

DARK GOBBLERS.

Extraordinary Birds Whose Meat Drove a Number of Arkansas Dignitaries to Despair.

Judge Fitherton, a well known jurist and a gentleman of the old Arkansas school, treated with scorn the idea that the best turkeys come from the North. He holds the opinion that the Arkansas turkey is the best in the world. In fact, he goes further and declares that no one but the old time negro understands cooking the great bird. Several days ago, the Judge meeting old Hackney, said to him:

"Hackney, I am going to give a dinner at my house on Wednesday. I want your assistance."

"Yas, sah, Judge, I'll be dar. What time do you want me to come?"

"I want you to get me a couple of turkeys, the best you can find, cook them, mince and bring them in to my house early in the morning, so that they will be ready."

"I'll do dat, for I know where to get de best in de country."

"All right. What will you charge me?"

"Wall, sah, I think dat gittin' 'em an' cookin' 'em an' fetchin' 'em to yer house oughter be wot I'd charge."

"That's pretty steep, but go ahead and be sure to come on time."

"I'll do it."

Hackney, [illegible] puzzled to decide upon a plan of action. He knew that turkeys were shrewd and that their roosts were closely watched. At length he concluded to use an army gun, an old muzzle loader, to kill a couple of wild turkeys. He had no gun, but could find none. He borrowed two dollars and he had a desperate enterprise. The next day he took his gun and went out early, but it was sick of the day before was exhausted. His spirits were very low as he walked toward home.

"Dar's no chance for er houses' man heah," he mitered. "I'd [illegible] ter kill er couple o' dem buzzards. Yander sets twenty de groun'. I sho'ly tempted," he continued as he rested his gun on the fence. "De's right up close jer gedder. Lemme see how I could teck sight."

He glanced along the gun barrel. The gun fired. The buzzards fell over and fluttered. Hackney climbed up on the fence and looked all round. No one was in sight. He approached the dead buzzards. He had to hold his nose. He took them to a bayou and dressed them as well as he could. Then putting them into a sack he took them home. That night he worked on them. He scalded them, rubbed them with lime and ashes then proceeded to bake them. He took down a quart bottle of cheap perfume—something a negro always has on hand—and from time to time basted the buzzards with the liquid. When the buzzards were cooked they were certainly dark, but there was no scent of their original odor hanging about them. Just before setting out for the Judge's residence, he gave the gobblers another cologne bath. He took them around to the Judge's kitchen and said to the cook:

"Heahs de dark gobblers I promised de Jedge. Whar is de gentleman?"

"In de house. My, how sweet dem birds do smell. What yer say da is?"

"Dark gobblers—wild ones, honey. Go tell de Jedge dat I'se heah."

When the Judge came out, he survey'ed the buzzards and said:

"Hackney, they are not very large."

"Oh, no, sah, dis sorter turkey doan grow big. Da's called de dark gobblers, an' aldough dar meat is dark, it's de sweetest meat in de world. I jes happened ter get dese. Dis de jest I hab seen in dis country for many weeks. Jes' smell o' 'em Jedge."

"Ah, hah," said the Judge when he had sniffed the cologne, "they do smell sweet. Well, here's your money."

"Thank yer, sah. Say, Jedge, if I had so much trouble gittin' dem dark gobblers down yer think you mighter gin me jes' er bout er dollar mo'? It wuz hard work er gittin' 'em, an' er restaunt man down town said he mighter be wuf eight dollars in de heap."

"Well, here's another dollar."

"Thankee, sah."

When the company had sat down to dinner—when the Rev. Dr. Boggleworth had asked a blessing—the Judge said:

"I have the pleasure of introducing you all to a kind of meat you doubtless never saw before. These birds are dark gobblers, a species of wild turkey now extremely rare. Dr. Boggleworth, will you please carve one?"

The doctor took the carving-knife, drew one of the dark gobblers toward him, and began to cut into the flesh. A stifling stench arose. The doctor put down his knife, turned away from the table, and gasped. The Judge, whose nose had begun to wrinkle, attempted to say something but could not. The odor grew more pronounced, and, with one impulse, the company arose from the table.

"They are buzzards," the minister gasped. "Let us go out and stand in the lot."

The Judge was disposed to take a shot-gun and kill Hackney, but he knew that a man occupying his position could not well afford such a measure. Several days elapsed before he met the old negro. Hackney attempted to dodge the Judge, but when finally captured, he took off his hat and said:

"Mawnin', Judge, mawnin', sah."

"I am thinking," replied the Judge, striving to be calm, "if it would not be better, law or no law, to take a gun and kill you."

"Wy, Jedge, wat's de matter wid yer?"

"You infamous scoundrel, to bring me buzzards."

"Who fotch yer buzzards?"

"You did.

"Hah, dat's mighty curis. Wall, Jedge, I got to go on down heah an' meet er man. For de Lawd, I thought yer was pleased wid de birds. Arter dis I'll be mo' partickular an' won't deal wid yhery pusson dat comes trianng. Almos' impossible to please er white pusson."—Arkansaw Traveler.

SPARROWS AS FOOD.

How the Little English Invaders Can Be Utilized to Advantage.

When Paterson sportsmen run short of other game they have been compelled to shoot English sparrows, and sparrow pie is no longer an experiment in this city, but a dish relished by all who have tasted it. One of the latter carriers is an enthusiast on the question of sparrows, and devotes most all of his spare time to getting sparrows ready for the pot. He says that they make the best eating and are delicacies of the gourmet. The principal sparrow shooters are, however, to be found among the English residents of this city who come from the home of the sparrow and know well how to prepare them for the table. Many things are necessary for a sparrow pie, and the chief of these is first to catch your sparrows. The sparrow is one of the most knowing of birds, and the methods and tactics of the sportsman who will bring by his lead a dozen of his fellows, whose weight of his fellows is equal to a bushel of wheat and fairly fat, is one of the things that are rarely observed, though they are well worth observing. Naturally they are as unpopular with the farmer as is the barn owl. Sparrows are much too artful for any trap. It is almost idle to set nooses for them, as for these birds. The sportsman's method is known, as follows: For bait-lowing four sparrows are the proper number. The sportsman bears a lantern at the end of a pole, toward the light of which the birds fly when suddenly aroused from sleep. The other two hold and rattle close against the roosting haunt of the birds a wide-mouthed net, made like a fan, up against but considerably larger; and while the sparrows dash, bewildered by the noise and dazzled by the light.

Speaking of the different methods of preparing the sparrow for the table, the same correspondent says: "But there are other ways of cooking a sparrow than to boil them with beefsteak and crust, and in every way he repays the trouble of the cook. Roll a piece of bacon over his breast (not too large a piece), toast him in a Dutch oven, and so serve him hot. Schoolboys know this, although they are often obliged to dispense with the bacon. Or, another way. Curry a dozen sparrows, and serve them with the proper gravy in a rampart of rice. In fact, when you have once understood how dainty a bird a well-fed sparrow is, a dozen worthy modes of presenting him at table will occur to you. Has not a book been written detailing a hundred methods of cooking the potato? One way may be recommended as excellent: Cut enough off the end of a large potato to enable you to scoop a receptacle for your sparrow. Place him therein, as Izaak Walton said, 'tenderly,' with appropriate adjuncts to your taste. Lute on the head of your potato again with flour and water. Use your judgment as to time of serving, and this baked potato will astonish your guest."—Paterson (N. J.) Press.

LIMEKILN CLUB.

Brother Gardner Proves That Brains Can Not Be Pitted Against Drink.

When the meeting opened in due form Brother Gardner announced that the Hon. Profile Livermore, of Arkansas, was in the anteroom and waiting to address the meeting. The subject of his address was: "Has the White Man Passed His Zenith?" If there were no objections he would be brought in.

Prof. Wintergreen Davis didn't propose to object, but he would like to be informed of the meaning of the word zenith. He had attended twenty-one different ward caucuses and had clerked in a wood yard for three weeks, but he had never met with the word before.

There was a deep silence as he settled down, and Brother Gardner scratched his bald pate until as if the friction would start a fire.

"Zenith," he finally said, "why, I ar' mo' dan surprised at your ignorence. Ebery cull'd pusson in dis kentry orter to know all about zenith."

"Yes, sir, but de word breaks me up."

"Zenith an' a drefful easy word," continued the President, as he looked up and down the hall in a nervous manner. "You didn't git zenith an' zither all mixed up, did you?"

"No, sah."

"When anybody says that Samuel Shin, for instance, has passed his zenith dey can't be tooken up for slander. If dey does—it means—"

He waited so long that the Rev. Penstock arose and said:

"Misser President, it means dat he has passed his best pint. Zenith am de highest pitch."

"Bladder Penstock, sot right down dis minit!" exclaimed the President, as he used his gavel in a vigorous manner. "Who axed you to riz up an' splain bout zenith? When dis chair cah'l stan' on one leg an' splain any word in common use he will confess his ignorence an' call for help! I shall fine yer two thousand dollars for disturbin' dis meetin, an' Prof. Davis will now be brought in!"

It was evident to all as soon as he entered the room that the Professor was "off." He grinned and bowed and scraped, and finally took a chair near the stove. When Gayslam Jones went over to him and asked if he was ill he replied:

"Shaw! I'll fight you two rounds for twenty-five cents!"

He was drunk. As soon as Brother Gardner realized this fact he ordered him removed from the lodge. The stranger was assisted down stairs into the alley, and has not been seen in Detroit since. From the splashes of mud on the right board fence, and the distance between his tracks, it is believed that he left in a hurry.

"Dis am but another proof," said Brother Gardner as he took his seat, "dat when you pit brains agin whisky, common-sense agin gin, or intellect agin lager-beer, de liquids are bound to go under de wire a length ahead."—Detroit Free Press.

THE ADRIAN POSTOFFICE.

Mr. Kirkwood, the special agent of the postoffice department, left to-day, in tolerably robust health, notwithstanding he was besieged from his arrival to his departure by persons interested in the postoffice location. The city hall man first came down on him and afterward "Antis" sailed in in force, a delegation this morning filling his room. He listened very attentively to all suggestions and arguments. Mr. Kirkwood said it was very clear that the Maumee and Main streets were the most eligible places, and that the office ought to be there, but as there were no facilities for accommodation the best possible must be done. He said he had three proposals before him to consider—the city hall, the present location and the Lawrence block. He thought the latter ought to have the main entrance on Maumee street if it were to be used as a postoffice, said that it was not his purpose to serve private but public interests in the matter of postoffice location, and regretted that an available permanent location was not now attainable. With such a location the government would feel willing to allow a larger rental than otherwise. Mr. Kirkwood left without indicating what recommendation he would make to the postoffice department.—Adrian Record of last Saturday.

MUTUAL PROTECTION SOCIETY

The Lenawee county Mutual Protective Society met yesterday at the council-room, Adrian, and held its thirty-fifth annual conclave. The secretary's report showed the addition, during the year of thirty-two members. The treasurer submitted his report, by which it appears that there are now $179.91 in the treasury. The total membership of the society is now 302.

Officers chosen for the ensuing year were as follows:

President—J. G. Mason.
Vice President—J. K. Johnson.
Secretary—Oscar Doolittle.
Treasurer—W. S. Wilcox.

The only change is the above from last year was the substitution of Oscar Doolittle as secretary in place of Jesse Warren, who declined to serve further, as it employed time that he desired should be given otherwise. The board of directors remains the same as last year except in Franklin, for which Samuel Wilson was elected in place of the former director, who has moved away.

Where the Boys are Drifting.

"One of the greatest dangers threatening this city and country," said a prominent Congregationalist clergyman yesterday, "is the rapidly increasing tendency of our young men and boys towards crime and dissipation. It is an astonishing fact that our prisons, jails and reformatories are crowded with young men, while in the churches they are seldom found. It is estimated that only 15 per cent of the young men of the country attend church with any regularity, but 5 per cent are members and 75 per cent never go to church at all. On the other hand in one reformatory in a western city which contains 1,[illegible] prisoners there are 1,172 between the ages of 16 and 21 years. In another penitentiary, where no boys are confined, there are 1,000 criminals whose average age is less than 24 years. The gambling dens and the back rooms of rum holes or 'club parlors' as they are called, with unconscious sarcasm, are crowded with boys from the ages of 15 to 20, and it is a fact that almost every saloon, every house of shame and every other den, mouth of hell depends upon our young men for support."—Lansing Republican.

Guardian Sale.

James H. Small will sell at auction sale on the farm of I. D. Martin in Lake Ridge, one and one-half miles above the postoffice, Thursday, Feb. [illegible], 1886, at 1 o'clock P. Onions.

Why do not our farmers raise more onions. It is an easy matter to grow specimens per bushel that are now worth $[illegible] per bushel. Many carloads must be sent to market in small quantities each day, but onions can be sent all at once and are marketed as easily as potatoes or corn. Let the farmers try a couple patch this spring. The Joseph Harris Seed Co., Moreton Farm, Rochester, N. Y., are large onion growers and raise the best of seed. They let the boys and girls under fifteen years of age have seed for their own use at 25 per cent. discount from regular catalogue rates. This is a genuine offer. Send for the catalogue and try their onion seed. It is warranted fresh crop of 1885, and of the highest quality. Old onion seed will not grow. Look out for it. New seed is scarce and high, but no experienced onion grower will sow any other.

The Original Nashville Students will appear at the Opera House, Thursday evening next, Feb. 11th. The management do not wish this company confounded with other companies of its kind which have appeared here in the past. This company is under the exclusive Bureau control of the Redpath Lyceum Bureau, and has appeared for three successive seasons in the Tremont Temple, course of Boston, and twice season in the Star Course in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia. These facts are sufficient guarantee that this is the original company and not one of its imitators. The troupe appear in both evening dress and full plantation costumes, and will close with a musical sketch [illegible] of unquestionable ability. Below is a clipping from leading authority:

I have no hesitation in saying that your Company gave the best entertainment in their line that I have ever listened to, without any exception.

DIED.

MORSE.—At her residence in this village on the 25th ult. after a long and painful sickness, Mrs. Almira Morse, beloved wife of Nathan Morse of this place, in the 74th year of her age.

The funeral took place at her late residence on Wednesday the 27th and was attended by a large concourse of friends and relatives. The burial service of the Episcopal church was read by the Rev. Mr. Phelps of St. Peter's church of which church she was a member. During the past year she together with her husband had received the sacrament of Baptism, and with others at the time of Bishop Harris' last visitation received the rite of confirmation. Upon the first subsequent celebration of the Holy Communion she received that Holy Sacrament and frequently afterwards. The last time on her dying bed surrounded by her family. It must be a comfort for her husband and family to know that she received the most watchful care and kindest attention during her fatal illness and especially that the consolations of religion were hers and assured her of a reasonable and holy hope in the promises of the ever blessed Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Mrs. Morse's maiden name was Almira Newton. She was born in Greenfield, Erie Co., Penn., Aug. 14, 1812. There her childhood and youth were passed, and there she became the wife of Mr. Morse, who now mourns her loss after a married life of some three-score years. In the month of June 1834 she with her family removed to Michigan and first settled in the town of Sharon, Washtenaw Co., where they remained until 1836 and then removed to Dundee, Monroe Co., where they lived until 1853, and then came to Tecumseh where her remaining years were passed. She has left to mourn her loss, twenty-six children—William S. and Harvey P. Morse, Mrs. Mary Conklin and Mrs. Martha Gage, Manchester, Mrs. Carrie Brown, of Lancaster, Ohio, Mrs. Ella Simons, of Elkhart, Ind., Mrs. James W. Patterson and Mrs. Almira Gage of Tecumseh, all of whom were with their mother during her last illness at various times and present at the funeral. Six children preceded their mother in their passage through the dark valley.

ESTATE OF JAMES MILLER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 26 day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of James Miller, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Alexander W. Miller, administrator of the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration of said estate have been duly paid and praying for the allowance of the final account, for an assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate to and among the persons entitled thereto and for his discharge.

It is ordered that Monday, the 1st day of March next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be held at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, and show cause why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Monday took the cake and with it the sleighing.

S. H. Linn & Son shipped six carloads of [illegible] last week.

[illegible] that has been brought in. He drew three cords and a quarter at one load.

The choir will meet next Saturday evening at the house of G. P. Waring for practice.

Quarterly meeting next Saturday and Sunday. Preaching Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Miss Cora Kelly of Holloway, visited her aunt, Mrs. W. R. Wilson, last week. Her health has improved of late.

We are glad to see Miss Susie Billmeyer, who has been sick for a long time, improved sufficiently to be out again.

Miss Mattie Gray of Cambridge was the guest of Miss Loana Davidson over Sunday.

James Pocklington went to Perrysburg last week to attend the funeral of his father-in-law, Mr. Henry Prumpy, who was killed by having a log roll over him.

Willis Helm and Ambrose Arner visited friends at Tipton last week Wednesday and Thursday.

Charles Foot left for Farmersville, N. Y., Monday night to attend the funeral of his brother Robert, who was killed by a falling tree.

E. V. DePuy was in the village Tuesday on business.

Mrs. B. F. Pocklington, accompanied her sister Miss Thornton, to her home at Perrysburg, Ohio, last week.

Miss Ada Linn is visiting friends at Dundee this week.

One of the young ladies of our village had her mind so broken up Saturday evening, on receiving a letter, that she looked for her rubbers for several moments Sunday morning after service, only to find them both on one foot.

The woman's missionary society met at the home of Mrs. Henry Williams on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The attendance was quite large. The ladies occupied the time in piecing blocks for a quilt. The following are the officers of the society

President—Mrs. H. Williams.
1st. Vice Pres.—Mrs. M. A. Wilson.
2d. " " " T. H. Temple.

MACON CENTER CLIPPINGS.

The Cap Social for the amusement of the young people, given by Macon Grange, on Friday evening of last week, was a most enjoyable time for all present. Receipts above expenses $5.00. By request of many present at that time, another social will be held at Grange Hall, on Friday evening, Feb. 19th, inst. Social to be a box social. Boxes furnished by the ladies and sold at auction to highest bidder.

The first meeting of the board of directors for Macon Grange Hall Association, was held at Grange Hall, Feb. 5th, the following are the officers of the board for this year.

President—J. F. Gallery.
Secretary—Matthew Yates.
Treasurer—M. J. Martin.
Custodian of Hall—Cyrus Mead.

The next regular meeting of Macon Grange, No. 167, will be held on Friday the 12th inst., at 7 o'clock P. M. A general attendance of members is requested, as there is important business to be transacted at that time. A short but interesting program is expected to be carried out.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Masquerade at Springville Hotel Friday evening.

Sleighride season is over for the present.

Fred Groger has everything in readiness and can saw pickets on short notice. James Mason has a machine of the same sort and has plenty to do in the picket line and grinding feed also.

We occasionally hear the question asked "what ticket will be elected this spring." We are unable to say but presume the best men, regardless of party.

Some of our best democrats reason thus. One year ago last fall I labored with the party I have labored with so long, and have since supposed attained success, but the same political opponent who gets quarterly returns from Uncle Sam, says to me "now what did you accomplish by so doing" it seems almost unbearable. Don't be discouraged friend, the change must come.

MACON NOTES.

A nine pound boy arrived at the home of Mr. Geo. Acers last week Thursday. All parties concerned are getting along nicely.

The Hendershot, after an absence of six weeks, caused by a difference of [illegible] cow, is now able to be among his friends again.

Frank, the little son of Chas. Morgan, while playing at school the other day, fell and broke his leg above the knee. The little fellow is doing finely under the care of Dr. Morden.

The Rev. Mr. Pierce of the M. E. church has been trying hard for the past two weeks to convert the wicked in and around Macon, and will tackle them again this week. May success attend his efforts.

Milan Sage is selling tile at the rate of 10,000 per day, and all who are in want of first-class tile should improve the opportunity and obtain them while he has them on hand. Mr. Sage has also put in a new Cob Meal Grinder and is prepared to do all kinds of feed grinding in a first-class manner.

Some time ago Ransom Remington, while leading her out to slaughter had a little dispute with old Bugeye. (Bugeye was no relation to the Redeye one can purchase at the Tecumseh saloons, but a frisky cow of nineteen summers, who could skip a ten rail fence with a grace of a trick mule and never bark a shin.) But Bugeye is no more, as ye scribe can testify as he whet his teeth on part of him. And Ransom, after staying in bed about four weeks is now able to come to the Corner's and exchange lies with the boys again, although his head is a little sore yet.

NEWBURG NOTES.

A Lyceum was held at the school house, Feb. 4th. Another will be held Thursday, 11th. The question is "Resolved that money is better than friends."

S. Sheldon's little boy Levi, was burned one day last week.

Chas. McNie is president of the lyceum, and is a splendid officer.

Geo. Stacy and Clara Farley have attended school in town regular during January.

Olive C. Beal now has a desire to travel down to her old home for a few days. May she have a pleasant trip.

Helen Sheldon is staying in town through these cold days.

Frank Conger was twenty last Saturday Jan. 30th. Only one more year for you, Frank.

David Carson is now at the Patterson House as porter.

Rumor says Richard Farley will now buckle on his armor and march as a member of Company C.

Miss Adah Conger visited Joe Fullers, at Tipton, going up by M. and O. Jan. 30, and returning Feb. 3.

Wood sawing is popular. The following young men are sawing wood at present. Frank Conger, Milo Martin, Maurice and Frank Nay, Al. Stacy and C. McNeil.

Rather cold weather at present.

BRITSON BUDGET.

The cold wave came and went.

Weather fine and pleasant.

Farmers are busy as bees—saw logs and stave bolts are coming in fast. The yards are almost full.

Your Ridgeway correspondent does boast of a man drawing fifteen loads of heading bolts in four hours. A man in this vicinity took in fifty five cords and thirty 30 feet of stave bolts in one day. Its hard to beat the men in this section of the country.

S. Underwood has been on the sick list for a week. He is better now.

Mrs. Geo. Gifford has been sick a long time to day she is reported very low.

Mrs. Dr. Hallock has been visiting her sister at Webster, the past week.

Several new houses are promised our village this season.

The literary society is well under way. Their programs are varied and interesting.

Catholic Home Almanac

It is seldom that an "Almanac" has fallen under our notice of which we can speak in higher terms of commendation than the above mentioned almanac. It is without question the finest almanac we have yet seen. In design, execution and matter it is unequalled by any other. The lovely colored chromo, which forms the title page is alone worth the money. The illustrations throughout are good. The contents comprise a choice selection of Prose and Verse, embracing Tales, Anecdotes, Short Poems, Biographies, Descriptive sketches, Astronomical Calculations, etc. We recommend it to every household in the land. Benziger Brothers, publishers, I. B. 437 Cincinnati, O. Price 25cts. free by mail.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Still sleighing.

Two couples were married during the month of January.

John Boyd is drawing logs to complete the bill of lumber for the brick [illegible].

[illegible] drop Friday while unloading a large log. The cant hook gave way letting him fall four or five feet, striking flat on his back. It was several minutes before he regained his feet.

There is a highly esteemed aged married couple in this vicinity, who have become so attached to the HERALD that one can't wait for the other to read it, so each takes a copy.

The old and middle aged married people had a regular old fashioned old folks at home gathering at the Lake Ridge house, Friday evening.

Will Spaulding of Franklin, teacher in district No. 3 of Ridgeway, stopped over Saturday and Sunday at A. Easlick's, taking in the school in district No. 7 of Macon, Saturday afternoon.

There was a phrenological and slight-o-hand show at Grange Hall, Thursday night. The night-cap social was a good one.

There will be a rink masquerade at Lake Ridge house, Friday evening the 12th inst. closing with a freedance.

A number of farmers threshed seed clover last week—average yield about three bushels per acre.

Miner Miller is quite severely afflicted with rheumatism.

Fred Miller's baby is quite sick with teething fever.

The remains of Mrs. John Wilson were brought from Ann Arbor, Wednesday and placed in Lake Ridge cemetery. Mrs. Wilson formerly lived in this township. She has been an invalid four or five years.

The kids are going the rounds making the most of the sleighing. About 200 couple with music and viands, repaired to Sage & Cary's hall, last Wednesday evening, and report a grand time. About the same number gave Sam. Stewart of Ridgeway, a dusting out Friday night. Baughman & Hoagland's orchestra furnishes the music. We might mention numerous other similar events, past, present and future which demonstrates the necessity of parents providing for the welfare of the young and frisky just coming upon the stage. Every well regulated community should have a commodious and pleasantly constructed hall, centrally located, where old and young can commingle for social and literary improvement, the whole under control of a broad shouldered liberal minded set of officers, having in view social, moral, mental and physical culture. The present construction of dwelling houses and school houses unfit them for such gatherings, and the fearfully long drives in inclement weather to localities thus provided, endangers constitutional health and takes them from restraint and supervision of parents and friends.

FRANKLIN FACTS

Rev. Thos Ruston preaches at the Evan's Lake school house every two weeks.

Lloyd Crittenden has been obliged to leave his school. Sickness the result of over work being the cause. Mrs. Josie Kemp is his successor.

Miss Cyrthia Monaghan is teaching a very successful term of school, so says dame rumor. As this is the young lady's first attempt at wielding the rod, we prophesy success for her in the near future.

We understand the literary society of this place have been obliged to discontinue their meetings for want of places to hold forth. What a pity that a society so well calculated to enlighten and instruct the minds of the young should want for anything pertaining to the development of their cause.

James Campbell has purchased a span of fine young horses. We suppose "Mr. Jim" will not make his flying visits on foot in future.

Mrs. Ella Lancaster who has been receiving medical treatment for some weeks past does not gain very rapidly. However her physician entertains great hope for her as the season for warmer weather approaches.

The lyceum formerly held at the school house in Franklin will meet on Tuesday evenings in future at Evan's Lake school house.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Feb. 8, 1886.

With the debate in the Senate on Mrs. Dakota, the Electoral count, and in the House consideration of the silver question, and speeches of members among members, it would seem that our lawmakers are busy. Yet the complaint is that they are only wasting time as usual.

The house is always asking for some investigation or explanation. Its latest "important demonstration" is against silver. In a test vote on Wednesday there was decided opposition to the administration's financial policy, and the Secretary of the Treasury will be asked to outline to the House of Representatives his future policy on the silver question.

A representative Democrat who thought the House was going too far in demanding the Secretary to state his future intentions said, "It is pretty hard on the President." The Senate wants to know his reasons for everything he has done in the past and everything he is doing now, and the House demands his intentions and promises for the future.

Three Cabinet officers so far have been requested to furnish the Senate with information bearing on removals. The Attorney General refused to furnish them. Secretary Manning of the Treasury has drafted a letter of refusal which have been sent to the Senate ere this reaches you, and Secretary Lamar of the Interior will doubtless proceed in the same way.

When Senator Beck of Ky., was asked what he thought would be the outcome of the controversy between the President and Senate he replied "It all depends upon what the Republican majority will do. They are in the majority and they can delay public business by declining not to confirm appointees." He thought this course would be all right if the Republicans were satisfied with it. The Democrats he said would adhere to their present plan and he thought it would be for them a good enough issue on which to appeal to the people.

A rather singular episode took place in a Senate committee. Senator Sherman astonished the Democrats in a talk about appointments. Allusion was made to the dead lock which has taken place in the confirmation of officers to succeed those suspended, and a Democratic Senator asked in an inquiring way, why the committee should not act on those nominations over which there was no contest. Whereupon Senator Sherman remarked that there were the removal officers in his own state who had written to him that their successors were men of first class character and in every way competent, and they hoped no efforts would be made against their confirmation.

Senators Morrill of Vt., and Conger, of Mich., talked about high art in connection with suggestions for new monuments in Washington. Monuments are proposed to Columbus, William Penn and Lafayette. They talked about the renaissance, perspective and perspective. The Senator from Mich. said he did not know what those things were, but he would despise them all the same. He became witty and witty, and satirized and criticised the monuments of the Capital, many of which merit all the abuse that can be heaped upon them.

Senator Logan made a long speech in behalf of Dakota's admission. He was expected to speak on this subject last Monday. A large crowd filled the galleries on that day to hear him and were disappointed. He happened to speak on Wednesday the day of the heavy snow storm here, and not only were the galleries empty, but there were just fourteen Senators at their seats when he commenced. He drew attention to this sparce attendance by remarking that it was not very encouraging to observe how little interest was taken on either side of the chamber on the great question of the admission of a new state to the Union. In the course of his speech Senator Butler, of S. C., asked him if he was not at one time a Democratic leader. "I never was a leader. I was a follower, and I followed so far behind that I got left," was his reply, which was received with loud laughter.

Several efforts have been made this session to have nominations considered in open session. Senator Platt of Conn. he made the last proposition of this kind to the Senate. He says secrecy begets suspicion, and as long as Senators work within barred doors they will have imputed to them motives that do not actuate them.

CLINTON PAGE.

C. B. SPAFFORD, REPORTER.

CLINTON MICH. FEB 11 1886.

[illegible]

Prof. Laflin's father came over from Ypsilanti, Sunday, once more.

Gliding over the beautiful has ceased for a time and the roders are delighted.

S. W. Freese, Esq., has been employed for a time past at Chicago, but has returned home to spend the balance of the season on his farm.

Will Mall has moved into the house of Mr. Blanchard, which he recently purchased.

Mr. Laflin and mother have moved into rooms over D. St John's store, on Chicago street.

Miss Mott returned from a visit with her sister and other friends in Detroit, last Friday evening.

James Walker, his mother, and Clyde Marsteller, have gone to South Bend.

The local office has taken a flight, not out of town, but has soared most and alighted in a room over the Bank.

We understand Mrs. Tracy has procured a situation at Jackson, and has gone to that city to manufacture ladies corsets.

The streets put on an appearance of activity as the snow threatened to leave Tuesday and sleighing was lost forenoon.

Kittie Elliott and Lizzie Kirk, took in the sights and made their Adrian friends happy by their presence, last Thursday.

E. Collin has removed his knitting works to the rear room, above Van Fleet & Smith's Bank and is now very pleasantly located.

The ladies of the Episcopal Church will hold a social at the residence of Mrs. Charles Clark, next Tuesday evening, Feb. 7th.

We are glad to announce that Prof. F. B. Laflin is once more at his post in the school, after a continued aggravating illness of several days.

There were no services at the M. E. Church, in this village last Sunday evening, on account of the continued demand for the presence of the pastor at Macon.

We are informed by Rev. E. P. Pierce, that the revival meetings at Macon are continued with manifested interest, and that much good has been and is being accomplished.

Edna Lapell, of, Caro, is still with her former schoolmates in the village. She gives a glowing account of her present home in the north, and says they are all equally well pleased.

We have received the Conway Leaflet, published at the point which N. W. Spafford was in. It is an eight column folio, and by the appearance of its advertising columns we should say it is a well patronized journal.

Mrs. R. S. Hicks, of North Adams, died last Sunday afternoon. She was the mother of Mrs. Horatio Keyser, and sister-in-law to Hiram Saxon of Clinton. The funeral solemnities were observed at the above named place, yesterday, at 11 o'clock.

The meeting of the Literary Society, at the high school building, last Friday evening, was attended by a fair average audience, and the exercises, though of short duration, were interesting. The Literary is becoming a fixture that is appreciated and its dates are looked for with manifest interest.

Do not forget the masquerade at town hall, to-morrow evening. Come out and bring the snowy appendages of your bed with you—take up part of the bed and there will be music. Hunt's orchestra furnish the music, which is a sure guaranty of a good time in store for the lucky contributors.

The sudden change in the weather and appearance of a genuine sleigh did not in the least deter those who had counted on the good time in anticipation at the residence of L. Ogden. The attendance was large and the anticipations were fully realized as was acknowledged by all who were lucky enough to be counted.

One of the most enjoyable occasions of the season, was the party gathering given at Allen Dillingham's, in Bridgewater, north of this village, last Saturday evening, by Will, and Lizzie. A number of young folks from this place participated, and all unite in pronouncing it a good place to go for an evening's enjoyment. There was a chance to "trip the light fantastic," which was by no means rejected, but the glide was a perceptible feature of the entire evening, and all returned home at the latest unimpeachable hour, only to regret that it were not upon some other evening.

"Get There!"

At Town Hall.

Friday evening, Feb. 19.

Supper and concert. 25 cents.

Mrs. S. W. Demuth is visiting her parents in Franklin this week.

There was a special meeting of the Masonic chapter Wednesday evening.

Florence Rowland, of Tecumseh, was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. J. E. McCollum, Tuesday.

John Martin, is doing the work in connection with the stores, in the absence of Will Mott.

The Tecumseh correspondent of the Jackson Citizen, has made a mistake in the number of his letters, which should be 13 instead of 14.

Mrs. Anna Dillingham and Mrs. Hamlin, and mother have moved into rooms over D. St John's store, on Chicago street.

Miss Mott returned from a visit with her sister and other friends in Detroit, last Friday evening.

James Walker, his mother, and Clyde Marsteller, have gone to South Bend.

them of their gaiter and compelled them to return to wheels.

George Belding was called to Dundee Wednesday on business pertaining to the settlement of some difficulty by law; we did not learn what the action was.

A slight alteration took place between Jacob Brown of Bridgewater, and L. Sedark, last Friday, brought about from some misunderstanding about some number that Ed. had purchased of Brown. But we have heard of nothing very serious springing therefrom, although Ed. has a mark of remembrance on his chin.

L. F. Wheeler, of Tecumseh, took a small audience through a European tour at town hall Tuesday evening. Mr. W. has made a number of efforts [illegible] to witness the views he has so carefully prepared for this lecture and certainly is deserving of better recompense, as the lecture is a choice one and together with the views is very beneficial to all who are desirous of gaining historical information. We are sorry he met with no better reward for his efforts.

Just one week has elapsed since we penned the article that conveyed the sad intelligence to the readers of the Herald that ex-postmaster S. B. Rose, Esq., had received a stroke of paralysis, and to-day, we are called upon to make the still more sad statement, that it was not the wish of a kind Providence that he should rally, but that the sudden prostration must needs be but a forerunner to his departure from us. And now we are pained as we make the statement that his spirit has departed and we shall no more hear the voice of one who has so faithfully served the people of this village as postmaster, for upwards of twenty years. He was one of the early pioneers of the village, and has gained many warm friends not only here, but in many of the surrounding townships. He departed this life Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock having reached the advanced age of three-score and two years. He leaves an affectionate wife and three children, two sons and a daughter, with their families, to mourn an irreparable loss.

Your reporter has been the lucky recipient of several invitations, at as many different times, to take a trip into the country for a day's recreation and when a friend proposed to come for us at any time and return as often the visit, the temptation was too great and we compromised the matter by gathering the remnant of our little family and preparing to be transported to the residence of Fayette DePuy, in Franklin, last saturday. The day was an admirable one for the season, the sleighing all that one could desire, and a fine team of bays soon landed us at the end of our journey. Mr. D. and wife are very pleasantly situated on a good farm about three and one-half miles south-west of this place, and are an exception to the numerous enunciators of hard times, as they smile upon the prospects of a valuable addition to their already pleasant domicil in the coming spring time, the respected [illegible] now conveyed to the premises. We were [illegible] the visit with pleasure, when we were permitted to participate in a surprise that was not announced in the program. John Hendershot, wife and family and Mr. Taylor and wife, nee Rose DePuy, were ushered in, to help us out with the ample supply of roast chickens, pies, cakes &c., and complete a wonderfully expressive of the occasion. We had but two regrets to add—that the winter days were so short, and that other engagements for the evening required the attention of the younger portion of the household.

Millie Pennock and Geddie Spaulding of Tecumseh, were callers at Grace Spafford's yesterday.

Mr. Ferris, of Hillsdale, was in town yesterday.

Some heathen, are not as much of the heathen as we think; read a Mahometan proverb, "God has bestowed the good things of this world to relieve our necessities, not to reward our virtues: these will be rewarded in another world." We know of no greater necessity to be relieved, than a stubborn cold, and we know of no better relief than Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

NEW ENGLAND SUPPER.

Arrangements have been completed and the long anticipated New England supper will take place at town hall, Friday evening, Feb. 19th, the following bill of fare will be presented: Pork and Beans—Corned Beef—Brown and White Bread—Hulled Corn—Baked Indian Pudding—Pumpkin, Mince and Apple pie—Fried Cakes—Pickles—Baked Apples—Cake—Tea—Coffee.

After the supper there will be a representation of the Kitchen of years agone, with pale tallows burning, the spinning wheel in view, the [illegible] of the time, [illegible] the proper furnishing of the time—the place will be quaint [illegible]

Following this will come the genuine Old Folks' Concert, consisting of selections from Father Kemp's Old Folks Concert book, Hall Columbia, Lenox, Coronation, Easter Anthem, Bethany, Celestial Watching, Sherburne, New Jerusalem, Strike the Cymbal, Song of the Old Folks, Home Again, My Grandmother's Advice, The Old Folks at Home, interspersed with some modern selections sung by Tom Thumb & wife in full costume, quartette by the Palmer family, of Norvell, quartette by the Avery family, and a male quartett—the fit of the season—and solos by R. Randall, D. W. Palmer, B. Green and others. A duet in foreign language, will be introduced, the parties appearing in genuine foreign dress.

The object of this entertainment is to raise means to clear the parsonage, and as that structure is not only a convenience to the society, but also a much more presentable ornament to this place, it is hoped and expected that more than usual effort will be put forth to fill the hall and so help in this laudable undertaking.

GRANT'S EARLY FLAMES.

The Great Soldier a Favorite Among the Maidens When He Was a Cadet.

Since the discovery in the East of pictures painted by General Grant [illegible] of his old companions and school acquaintances have been ransacking among their relics for his memento. Several have been suggested for young Grant, as a cadet on vacation or a soldier on furlough, made real favor among hearts in this region of his childhood. While at school he displayed considerable artistic ability and devoted much of his time to drawing portraits than to study. For drawing a caricature of an old [illegible] and [illegible] was [illegible] whipped, but the [illegible] was [illegible] Where Was Penelope Ulysses during his absence with Miss Kate Bowen, who lived with her brother [illegible] and was [illegible] Fort Pickens, 1861, while commanding the Twenty-fifth Ohio Regiment. He had served with Grant in the Mexican war, and the young Captain was looked upon as an accepted suitor long before he left West Point. While there he sent her a water-color landscape which she greatly prized, and has kept all these years. She is now an old lady. Mrs. Kate Bothwell, of Jersey City.

But there are other of Grant's early flames of [illegible] who have preserved his letters and presents. Miss Hattie King, a maiden lady of Georgetown, O., was in her school days an admirer of the young soldier, and keeps to-day her old album in which he wrote a verse when on a vacation. When in Mexico he sent her a pencil drawing of Tehuantepec, which is also preserved. There was considerable rivalry between Miss Hattie and her sister, Mary A. King. The first never married, but Mary, who found most favor in Grant's eyes while he was a cadet, was forgotten when he came home a [illegible] dier. There was some misunderstanding between them, and the correspondence was broken off. She is now Mrs. John Talford, a widow of Thibodaux, La. Grant never forgot her, and while at Batavia and Georgetown, after the war, inquired of her relatives as to her residence. He learned that she had been in the South during the war, and had lost her husband and much of her fortune. One of his first acts as President, in 1869, was to appoint her Postmistress. Her Confederate neighbors advised her not to accept. She accordingly refused and Grant dropped the matter.

Mrs. Dr. Compere, of Georgetown, who was also a youthful friend of Grant, says that he was a great gallant among the rural girls. He was at every dance and party for miles, and was counted a good dancer. One of his early attachments was for Miss Sarah Clarke, sister of Congressmen B. W. Clarke, and who, after marrying Charles Hunt, died of cholera in 1850. Among Grant's other early flames were Miss Carrie Tice, who died Mrs. Richards, and Mrs. Hubbell, now a doctor's widow living at Mount Carmel, in Clermont County.—Batavia (O.) Cor. N. Y. Sun.

A PRINCELY PRINCE.

Something About Prince Amadeo, Ex-Sovereign of Spain.

King Amadeo was an intellectual and spirited gentleman, refined in his tastes, and simple and unostentatious in his habits. This latter peculiarity was the greatest crime that his political foes could urge against him. He and his wife did not sufficiently maintain, they alleged, the state and splendor of Spanish royalty. They were too fond of intruding into the affairs of the common people and in trying to ameliorate their condition. They interested themselves in founding hospitals. They were snubbed and scoffed at, and insulted by the Spanish aristocracy. The Queen died, heartbroken, it is said, by the ingratitude and aggressive insolence of the great nobles of Spain and their families. Her husband flung the crown from his head and the royal mantle from his shoulders, and now lives at Turin a prosperous gentleman. Last spring I saw him in that city, traversing one of the principal streets on foot—with his young son, Prince Emmanuel, beside him. No attendant followed the father and son, and the only evidence of their rank was to be found in the bowed and low-doffed head of every person that they passed. And Prince Amadeo returned every salutation, even of the humblest promenader, with a punctilious courtesy that was more than princely—it was kingly. A grave intellectual looking man is this ex-King of Spain, exceedingly simple and exquisitely refined in manner and in bearing, the princeliest prince, in short, that I have ever looked upon in Europe. The Prince of Wales is a jolly, good humored-looking bon viveur. The Prince Imperial of Germany is every inch a soldier. The Duke of Edinburgh has very much the aspect of a third-rate shopkeeper. King Humbert of Italy, has the aspect of a serious country gentleman. But Prince Amadeo in look and bearing is the typical prince, the "perfect gentleman," without ostentation or pretense—exactly what one would imagine the descendant of a hundred Kings to be, and what those descendants very seldom are. In his pleasant Italian palace I can imagine him conning to-day the news from Spain, and thanking his stars that he is well out of that political hornets' nest, alive with noisy buzzings and with cruel stings.—Lucy Hooper.

—New York had a mad dog epidemic about twelve years ago, when several persons were attacked with hydrophobia. Many alleged sure cures for the malady were published in the papers, but the record of trustworthy cases shows that all ended fatally.—N. Y. Herald.

—"I declare, Charley," exclaimed Clara. "You take the words right out of my mouth!" "Oh, mamma!" piped in the little pitcher, "now I know what Clara and Charley were doing out in the hall when she let him in!"—N. Y. Ledger.

WHAT WILL convince you of the wonderful curative properties combined in Hood's SARSAPARILLA, all the remarkable cures that have been effected by its use fail to impress upon your mind this repeatedly proven fact? Thousands are using it, and all declare that it is a medicine possessing more than we claim for it. My friend, if you are sick or in that condition that you cannot call yourself either sick or well, go and get a bottle of Hood's SARSAPARILLA, and realize yourself how this medicine purifies the blood, stimulates the stomach, gives tone to the nerves, and imparts elasticity of mind and vigor to the whole human system.

WILL CONVINCE

From the Registrar of Deeds for Middlesex County, Northern District.

LOWELL, Mass., Dec. 1, 1885.

It affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's SARSAPARILLA. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that fit my wants as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours,

J. P. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

A COINCIDENCE.

"I'm going to be married," the entry said,
She looked up in sweet surprise.
The color from cheek to brow to face sped,
The light grew dim in her eyes.

"I'm going to be married!" she whispered low,
Her cheek had a steady color.
"A couple going to church, who or you go,
A groom and a bride, mother."

"Your lover, Kate, is a fine young man, Clever, and comely, and proper."
She arched her eyebrows, a little, at this,
"I wonder how he got my address."

"Perhaps he has seen you at church."
The color that out of her face had fled
Came back with a deeper hue.
"Why, isn't it funny," she shyly said,
"That I'm to be married, too?"

CHEAP AND COSTLY.

The Comparative Value of the Newspaper and the Book

One would naturally think that knowing so much as he does the Newspaper would be puffed up with pride to the point of explosion—that is, one who is not intimately acquainted with the Newspaper, and foolishly judges him by the people whom he does know, might think so. But he would make a serious mistake, besides doing a worthy object a great injustice. Although he is filled with information from his date line to the blank space at the bottom of his four pages, he is modest to a degree. His editorial page bristles with facts which require years of study to write. His news pages are filled with information gleaned from every part of the world, and his selected miscellany is culled from the most esteemed contemporaries printed in the language. Yet, in spite of so much learning, he is undemonstrative, retiring and as unpretending as the calf-bound encyclopædia under the deep layer of dust on the bottom shelf of the book-case. Even the rattle he makes when he is unfolded is deprecatory, and not owing one-half so much to his self-assertion as to the brittle nature of his composition, which no fair-minded critic will hold against him for an instant.

Beside the Newspaper, on the desk, there has a Book of poems bound in blue cloth and glittering with gilt. This Book is the very opposite of the Newspaper. Although he is not wise nor filled with facts he is presumptive, and makes up for his short-comings by a large supply of personal vanity. He is pretty, and what is worse, he knows it and is proud of it. This, however, is only to be expected. He is a presentation copy of an edition printed at the expense of the author. He was made to give away, not to sell, to be advertised, not to be read, and it would have been strange, indeed, under these circumstances, were he not rather inflated with the sense of his own importance.

It so happened one day that these two publications found themselves side by side and alone. The man who subscribed for the Newspaper had laid it down after reading the morning news, and it fell beside the Book, who looked up to see what was the occasion of the disturbance.

"Well," observed the Book, somewhat testily, "what's all this noise about?"

"I beg your pardon," replied the Newspaper, politely. "I trust I have not disturbed you."

"Not to speak of," responded the Book, "only I think he ought to be careful where he throws his newspapers."

"He was probably in a hurry," explained the Newspaper, "and didn't happen to see you."

"Don't flatter yourself," answered the Book, haughtily. "He never forgets me."

"I beg pardon," again apologized the Journal.

"Don't mention it," said the Book. "I presume you never heard of me. You are so young. You are not to be blamed for that. It is not your fault. I was written by his sweetheart years ago, and I have always been kept on his desk ever since. He used to read me, but of late years he has contented himself with leaving me where he could see me whenever he wanted to."

"Where is his sweetheart now?" asked the Newspaper with professional curiosity.

"She married an insurance agent, and has ten children now. She writes to him every once in a while for help, and he always sends it to her on account of old times. Oh! I tell you, he is very fond of me. He wouldn't dispose of me for the world. I am very expensive. I cost her ten dollars, so I have heard her say. May I ask what is your price?"

"Two cents," responded the Newspaper, modestly.

"So little as that! How excessively common. But I ought to make allowances for you. You have no poetry about you, no sentiment, no romance. You are all hard, cold facts, scandals and politics."

"I have the news," replied the Newspaper. "I contain everything that happens. I am a history of the world for one day."

"How you must bore you?" observed the Book, pityingly. "You must feel like a bulletin board that every one writes on. How stupid, too."

"Not at all," responded the Newspaper, with interest. "I do a good work and I enjoy it thoroughly. I tell the world what is going on. I give notice to the well of those who are sick. I tell the living of those who are dead. I tell those who are married who have separated, and to the old I tell who are born. I tell the people what their servants, the office-holders, are doing. I record the movements of governments. I tell of wars of peace-makings. The meetings of Kings and the conventions of workingmen I record impartially. Nothing is too great nor too small to come into my columns. Many a heart-rending tale of distress, many a tragic story of death, many a murder, many a suicide is first known to the world through the medium of myself. I help unravel mysteries. I correct mighty wrongs. I make men great and make many a great man small by my black types."

"Then," inquired the Book, in surprise, "why are you sold so cheaply? You ought to bring two hundred dollars."

"True," responded the Newspaper, "you are right, perhaps. I ought to, but I am sold at a cheap price so that all may have one. Thus my power of doing good is increased."

"But," said the other, shaking his head, "you let any and everybody handle you. You are free to all. You are read and soiled with facts."

"What are more valuable than a young woman who came to this city from the country, fell in with bad company, was cold, hungry and friendless, and advantage was taken of her by some bad men. Through me her true lover, who loved her when she wore short dresses, who, went to school with her when they were children together, heard of her. He is a physician in a large Western city. He came to New York, saw her, and to-day they were married. That is romantic enough for you, isn't it?"

"Yes, that is romantic, but that is only one instance out of a thousand."

"Not at all. The day before Christmas a German fell dead in his grimy shop, leaving a wife and six little children gathered around a dwarf of a Christmas tree waiting his coming. They had less than a dollar in the house. That was the story I told. In less than two days the widow had five hundred dollars in money, which my readers sent to her, and the children are all comfortably provided for. Then again a wretched, hungry, shivering man kissed his wife and children good-bye in the morning and started out on the streets to look for work to buy them bread to keep them alive. He came to the bridge and disheartened by failure he was about to end his sorrow by throwing himself into the river when he was saved by two men who saw him. I told his sad story. His family are clothed and fed now, and he is provided with employment. That is romance for you?"

"Well," remarked the Book, after a pause, during which its mind reverted to its own importance, "I am filled with poetry and sentiment too, and I do good also."

"I have no doubt of it," replied the Newspaper.

"I am written in pretty verse, and I am very highly prized. I teach high morals and improve the world—or at least I would if I could be read by every one. I am sure that he wouldn't sell me for anything. He would feel lost if it were not for me. He would miss me if I were out of his desk for one instant. He throws you away," added the Book, with a trace of conscious superiority in its voice, "but he wouldn't think of doing so with me. He wants me here to look at and to remind him of my author. He can buy another of you for a mere pittance and he doesn't value you at all. In truth, I have listened to all you have had to say and think that you are really of very little importance or you surely would cost more. I don't believe he cares whether he sees you at all."

"May be not," the Newspaper was about to say when the owner of the desk returned and resumed his seat.

"John," he exclaimed, calling to the office boy, "bring me a wrapper. I want to mail this paper to a friend of mine. It has got more news in it that I could write in a week and I know he will appreciate it."

"Yes, sir," responded the boy.

"By the way," continued the man, "I read lately in a paper that a committee of ladies were to call down town for books and magazines to take to the hospitals for the sick to read."

"Yes, sir," said the boy.

"If they come here give them this blue book of poetry. It is making me tired seeing it around. I never read it and can't say whether it is worth anything or not. At any rate, I shall be glad to get it out of my sight. It always reminds me of that beggar who wrote it and made me pay ten times as much for it as it is worth."

"Yes, sir," said the boy, and the doleful sighs of the mortified Book was drowned by the cheerful rattle of the Newspaper as each started out on his new mission of life.—Benjamin Northrop, in N. Y. Graphic.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Amenities of Life as Displayed by Members of the "Puffesh."

An oldish, thick-set man, with side whiskers and a bald head, got on the train at Amsterdam the other day to come into the city, and he was obliged to take a seat alongside of a young man who wore eye-glasses and parted his hair in the middle. The oldish man seemed annoyed because he couldn't get a seat alone, and the young man took no pains to conceal the fact that he was mad at being disturbed.

"The place for dudes," said the old man, as he wriggled around, "is in the baggage-car."

"And the place for hogs," replied the other, "is on a freight train."

"H'm. How do I know you aren't a pickpocket?"

"And how do I know you aren't a murderer?"

"If I'm I think I'd better call the conductor."

"Don't give yourself away, old man."

"Don't you talk that way to me."

"And don't you try to bluff me."

At that moment the conductor came along, and as he took the oldish man's ticket he gave both a sharp look, and said:

"If one of you try any of your tricks on this train I'll make it the saddest event of your lives."

"H'm!" "Scuse me," said the oldish man to the dude as the conductor passed on. "I didn't know you belonged to the purfesh."

"And 'scuse me, partner, I'm just out of the cooler, and don't know any of the new gang. Let's shake."—N. Y. Star.

KING LUDWIG.

How the Bankrupt Bavarian Monarch Indulges his Royal Musical Tastes.

King Ludwig of Bavaria is a monarch unique in all things musical. He has been charmed with Wagnerian music, and indeed, it is dreamed that he would take stock in any other. When therefore a special royal performance of "The Trumpeter of Sackingen" was announced, the friends of Richard Wagner felt sure that the opera could not be a success. The special performance of his royal Majesty of Bavaria was seen by the world next. Nobody but the King himself attended them, not even a valet. The Bavarians are a loyal people. They love their King, and when he goes to a place of amusement. On the evening of the special royal performance of "The Trumpeter," Herr von Perfall, the director, could not believe his eyes. Ludwig seemed to enjoy the overture immensely. He nodded his royal head just as he used to do when there was a premiere of his friend, Richard Wagner. The report that his Majesty was pleased with the music spread behind the scenes and down to the dressing-rooms, and everybody was delighted. The King kept up the expression of pleasure, and when Werner sang his first melodious song he gave the signal for the encore. This new and rare sign of royal approval made the artist even more ambitious than before. Everybody did his best, and the splendid opera had most perfect rendition. Margaretta's pretty song called for a 'bravo' from the King. The Baron, the Burgomaster and Werner especially received the compliments of the King for their efforts. After the catching cornet solo behind the scenes in the second act his Majesty ordered Director von Perfall to the box and expressed his delight. Werner's splendid and touching song—the finale of the second act—"God Be With Thee," had to be repeated twice at the special request of his Majesty, and when the performance closed the artists had the rare pleasure of seeing the King lean forward in his box and applaud their efforts vigorously. On the same evening Ludwig ordered a second special royal performance of the opera and presented the composer and the artists with generous presents to express approval of their united efforts.—*N. THE PAMIR.

An Almost Unknown Asiatic Region and Its Inhabitants.

At the last general meeting of the Russian Geographical Society M Groum Grjimailo gave a very interesting account of the geographical features of the Pamir region, which he had recently visited. His narrative included the state of its flora, its zoological resources and the material condition of its inhabitants. The speaker began with a minute description of the mountains, the enormous glaciers, the water courses, the trade routes and the geological condition of the country, as well as the plants and animals, which, with few exceptions, are the same as would be found in Europe. But we are told in the Russian account of the proceedings that what most interested the audience was the lecturer's description of the life of the Kara Khirghiz and Tajiks, nomadic races inhabiting the Pamir. M. Groum Grjimaïlo gave a graphic account of their existence, condemned to seek shelter in their tents during a long winter, and seeming to emerge from a state of lethargy at the first gleams of a spring sun, when their joy may be compared to that of children. They celebrate their return to active life with a pastoral fete. As a general rule the men are light-hearted, but ignorant of the simplest subjects, disdainful of manual labor, which they leave to the women, but still cunning enough, and great singers as well as performers on musical instruments. The possession of a fine voice is held in the highest esteem among them, and their national instrument is a simple kind of mandoline. These people are essentially of a pastoral disposition, having reconciled themselves with a certain philosophy to the hardships of their lot. Some of the tribes enjoy a somewhat higher prosperity from the greater fertility of the spot in which they have fixed their camps. Between the Kara Khirghiz and Tajiks M. Groum Grjimaïlo gives preference to the latter, as more laborious and inured to fatigue, as well as more hospitably disposed toward foreigners.—London Times.

A SPANISH JOKE.

The Ceiling Burlesque on the Carolines Attracts Crowds at Madrid.

There is something quite praiseworthy in the manner in which Spaniards make capital out of the famous Caroline Islands. Madrid dailies have had their full share in it, public housekeepers, under whose hospitable roofs countless political meetings of all possible and impossible parties were held, have supplied their patrons with long reports of the said meetings, they all and many others have profited by it. Now lastly the members of the theatrical profession are having their turn, for since the new piece, "Las Carolinas," has been played at the Madrid Variedades Theater the public crowds to every performance in order to view the question from a new point of view. The plot of the piece is this: Two little girls, Hispania and Germania by name, are furiously quarrelling over the possession of some dolls, and neither party can be appeased until some one happily suggests that papa—which stands for both "father" and "pope" in Spanish—should solve the difficulty of the ownership of the dolls. Papa's verdict is that the dolls belong by rights to Hispania, but that Germania should be allowed to play with them. It would seem that the playwright had a better conception of the true importance of the question which troubled King Alfonso's last days than most of the Spanish and German politicians concerned in it.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Taken together, all the beauties of art and nature combined, this exhibition is made to unfold the view of thousands every hour.

Send to C. I. Hood & Co., Mass., for a book containing statements of many remarkable cures of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

I have been afflicted with catarrh for 20 years. It became chronic, and there was a constant dropping of mucous matter from the roof of my mouth. It extended to my throat, causing hoarseness and great difficulty in speaking, indeed for years I was not able to speak more than thirty minutes, and often this with great difficulty. I also, to a great extent, lost the sense of hearing in the left ear, and of taste. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm all dropping of mucous has ceased and my voice and hearing has greatly improved.—Jas. W. Davidson, Attorney at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

Caught by an Octopus.

A diver who was trying to find pearls off the Alaska coast, found none, but found himself all of a sudden, in the grasp of an ugly octopus with arms twenty-seven feet long. Such an experience is rare; but there are thousands of people who are caught by dyspepsia, which is quite as bad. An octopus hates to let go. So does dyspepsia. Brown's Iron Bitters settles dyspepsia, and makes it loose its cruel grip. Mrs. Schmidt and her daughter, of 136 Conway Street, Baltimore, were both cured of dyspepsia by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters.

Throat-all seldom gets well of itself, but deepens until it undermines the constitution, wastes away health and strength and flesh, and finally fastens itself on the lungs, completing the wreck and ruin of the whole man. Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure is the only safe, sure and speedy remedy for coughs, colds and all throat and lung diseases. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents and one dollar. Pleasant to take and safe for children.

No family can afford to be without a bottle of Cheney's Stomach and Liver Regulator in the house. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

Furred Tongue, Aching Bones, Headache, disappear as if by magic by using Cheney's Stomach and Liver Regulator. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

A metal hitherto unknown, and which is said to be likely to supplant nickel in general use, has been discovered in the Lehigh Valley.

Food for the brain and nerves that will invigorate the body without intoxicating, is what we need in these days of rush and worry. Parker's Tonic restores the vital energies, soothes the nerves, and brings good health quicker than any thing you can use.

In order that our town shall have the best goods possible the popular druggists C. A. Wright & Co., have arranged to sell Acker's English Prescriptions among which is Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. They act upon the system when suffering with Dyspepsia, bad breath, sour stomach, flatulency, heartburn, &c., &c., with a wonderful certainty, hence they guarantee them to cure always, or will refund the money.

While attempting to drive across the Wabash track at Blue Mound, Ill., Jesse Campbell was thrown seventy-five feet and instantly killed.

"Quinsy troubled me for twenty years. Since I started using Dr Thomas' Eclectric Oil, have not had an attack. The Oil cures sore throat at once." Mrs. Letta Conrad, Standish, Mich.

Never neglect a constipated condition of the bowels, or serious results surely follow, such as piles, impure blood, and many chronic complaints. Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. N. A. Robinson drowned herself and her infant child in the cistern of her dwelling at Columbus, Wis., late Tuesday night.

About three years ago the agent for Acker's English Remedy first called at this town and since then the number of testimonials that have been sent in to C. A. Wright & Co., concerning the merits of the Remedy, and the many cures effected surprises, they wish it to thoroughly understood that for all colds, hoarseness, asthma, croup, whooping cough, at Phthisical troubles they have never known its equal, and positively guarantee it.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 500 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised nostrums never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination. This accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The Application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

BY S. C. STACY

DEATH OF GEN. HANCOCK.

Death loves a shining mark. Before the nation has fairly recovered [illegible] the death of Generals Grant and McClellan and Vice President Hendricks, the brave Bashford, and, we were just then [illegible] Winfield Scott Hancock has gone to the great reward. He died at his home [illegible] on Friday morning [illegible] Hancock was not confined to the house but [illegible] expected to receive the sad news. And [illegible] the day of his death [illegible] twenty-two years of age. His [illegible] Mrs. Hancock.

Gen. Hancock was [illegible] Richard Hancock was a sailor in the Revolution and his father, Benjamin Franklin Hancock, served as a [illegible] in the war of 1812 under Gen. Winfield Scott, for whom he entertained such a devotion that he christened his son with Scott's name. Young Hancock entered West Point in 1840 when only 16 years of age. Among his cadet companions were Grant, McClellan, Stonewall Jackson, Franklin, Burnside, Longstreet and other generals who became famous during the war. He served with distinction during the Mexican war and was brevetted for bravery at Chapultepec. He then served in several Indian campaigns and retained his position in the regular army until the rebellion. In September 1861 he was made Brig. Gen. of Volunteers and took active part in the organization of the army of the Potomac and during the entire war he was one of the leaders of that glorious army. During the Battle of Gettysburg he was in the thickest of the fray and led the charge of Pickett and Longstreet at the storming of Cemetery Ridge and in the battle of Gettysburg. At Gettysburg Hancock's command [illegible] the left center and [illegible] victory. At Williamsburg, Spotsylvania and at Harrison's Landing he has been the recipient of the thanks of the Congress of the United States. Since leaving the army he has been in the south and west, and since 1880 he has been the commander of the department of the Atlantic with headquarters at Governors Island. In three Democratic National Conventions he was a prominent candidate for the Presidency and in 1880 received the nomination but was defeated by Gen. Garfield.

Gen. Hancock was by nature and education a soldier. He was cast in a gigantic mold. Physically, morally and intellectually he was a model man. He was one of Nature's noblemen. On the field of battle as thoroughly a hero, in the home circle as tender as a child. His entire life from the age of [illegible] was spent in the service of his country, and his record is without a stain. The fortunes of war gave a few other generals more prominence during the eventful years of the war, but no commander fought more bravely, no one performed his duty more promptly, no one served his country more faithfully than Gen. Hancock. The future historian will assign to him one of the brightest pages in the annals of the war. Many a gray veteran who has marched under Hancock in the army of the Potomac will speak of his death with a moistened eye and quivering lip. Young men will look to him as an exemplar to follow. Every patriot will cherish his memory so long as courage, manliness and integrity are esteemed among men.

A couple of Mediums, who have been prospecting in Kentucky, have returned, and think more of Michigan than before the journey. The Wolverine state never loses by comparison with the sleepy comonwealths around her.

PROHIBITION CONFERENCE.

The prohibitionists of Lenawee [illegible] conference at Adrian last Monday. They had a good attendance and an interesting session. From the report of the proceedings in the Record we condense the following points:

The convention was called to order by the chairman of the County Committee, Hon. Thos. F. Moore, who made a brief address. Herald:

It is a long time my friends since we have met together in a meeting where [illegible] [illegible] great reason to rejoice at the success [illegible] Lenawee County at the last campaign and in advance [illegible] the State ticket [illegible] the great Democratic party [illegible] before the nation. The subject [illegible] have assaulted [illegible] manner of ways. Those who do not know they were doing so, do know that they were severing the last cord which bound many of us to them. It was a great struggle to leave the old parties. It was severing bonds of friendship cemented when our national life was at stake. The issues of that day have passed away. New issues have been presented by the progress of the day. We may have made mistakes, but our objects and aims have always been true. There never was a time when the outlook is so encouraging as to-day. At the close of the last canvass I was told, on the streets of Adrian by a good friend, "We can have done it now. The thing is accomplished. You have saved the country." Well there is but one issue between the old parties, the other is dead. Hence we are willing to bear the blame I make is attached. Senator Sherman, of Ohio, recently referred to the growing prohibition sentiment [illegible] that the old parties at last temperance question must be grappled with. What does this mean when a man like Senator Sherman, a republican in every bone and sinew, gives utterance to such sentiment. In every state in this union there is a growing prohibition sentiment, and in every state in this country but throughout Great Britain and all the civilized world. We have with us here to-day a brother at whose request this meeting was called. I will call upon him to outline the work proposed.

Mr. M. J. Fanning of Jackson, then outlined the work to be done.

Rev. E. B. Sutton moved the adoption of the programme presented by Mr. Fanning. The motion was carried. The committees provided for by the programme were then appointed as follows:

Committee on Resolutions—Rev. E. B. Sutton, L. R. Damon, J. H. Smith.

Committee on Enrollment—C. Quick, Byron Noel, George Hackett.

The remainder of the forenoon was spent in discussing the question "How can we promote the interests of prohibition in Lenawee county?"

In the afternoon the County Committee held a long session in a side room, and the conference proceeded with the public exercises in the main room. Mr. C. Quick of Weston presided. Upon the return of the committee the question box was opened, the questions read and answers given by Mr. Fanning. This was one of the entertaining features of the meeting.

Is there a single infidel or ungodly person among the leaders of the prohibition party?

I don't know. The question is not a proper one.

2. What would be the result of the so called republican prohibition convention to be held in Toledo in May nominating the republican party?

Answer a prophet but thinks the convention will make votes for the prohibitionists. I don't think the convention will be held, but if it is it will probably ask the national convention to do something for prohibition, which they will not do.

3. Why do the republicans say that the course of the prohibitionists will result in free whiskey?

Because they are getting rattled. They don't know what they are talking about or if they do, they don't care what they say. There are three kinds of prohibition, democratic prohibition, republican prohibition and prohibitory prohibition. Down south they have democratic prohibition, and the democratic papers say it is a failure. In this state we had republican prohibition, and the republican papers said it was a failure. We want prohibitory prohibition with the prohibition party behind it.

4. Why is it that some prohibitionists object so strongly to a prohibition national party?

I don't think their arguments are sound. It is need a party at all we need it from top to bottom. A recent decision of the U. S. supreme court shows the need of a prohibition national party. The court overruled the state courts and said the state had no right to tax a liquor dealer selling by samples in this state.

Which is the meaner man, the saloon keeper or the church member who voted to let him continue the business?

The saloon keeper is a pretty mean man. Yet I believe if I could gather together all the saloon keepers on God's green earth and have some process by which all the meanness could be extracted from all of them and concentrated in one lump, I don't believe a man made from this lump of concentrated meanness would be as mean a man as a Christian who votes to let the saloon keeper continue his business.

And what are we to do with our ministers who still vote with the whiskey party?

Pray for them. Labor with them. Don't do with them as the republicans do with prohibition ministers, cut off their supplies.

7. Why not appoint a committee to make a careful investigation of the effects of the liquor traffic upon the county taxes and report the same for publication as soon as possible?

That's a sensible question. Show the people that you are paying out more for the liquor traffic than you are receiving from it and you make many votes.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Large manufacturers of goods of all kinds all over the land are busy. The supply of capital for legitimate enterprises is ample, and low rates of interest are prevailing. The enforced economy of the last two years among the people at large has had the result to cause a consumption of accumulated apparel and supplies, so that now nearly every consumer is compelled to become a purchaser.

Another factor that in our estimation enters largely into the assurance of prosperous times is that the active hard working men have not been reduced to any, or any near the proportion in which the purchasing power of their money has been increased. By this we mean that a dollar now will buy almost every thing, and people to can purchase from 25 to 50 per cent. more real or clothing than it would a year or 18 months ago, while labor not being reduced a single dollar or even a cent a month, have in such a percentage of reduction in wages. Indeed we might, did the prices of great value as food supplies that are cheaper than they have been known to be for very many years—some of them so remarkably cheap that it is a wonder that they can be produced at all, and the cost of putting them into market reimbursed. So then we are more strongly than ever inclined to the belief that we are at the beginning of a prosperous year, at least for the mercantile and manufacturing classes of people.

We can not precisely see how the capitalists are to make any great profit this year for rates of interest are very low and the enormous reduction in values of all kinds of merchandise of course releases a large amount of money from our ordinary business affairs. More men and firms find it easy to try to do the usual bulk of business on their own capital, without borrowing, than ever before within our knowledge. Besides the number of speculators has been largely decreased during the last year or two. A look at the list of wild-cat mining schemes, for instance, that have collapsed within two years past, but which have, previous to that period, constantly employed large sums of money in fictitious operations, will give any one a good idea of the extent to which speculation, in at least one department, has declined—indeed, has almost entirely ceased.

A legitimate result that, it seems to us, must certainly follow from this plethora of capital and its non employment in speculative transactions is an increased demand for real estate which will be eagerly sought after by capitalists who want to put their money into permanent investments, and are willing to do so at very small earnings. We could name several well-known moneyed men in Cincinnati who to day are willing to invest large amounts in desirable real estate and will be perfectly satisfied to get from it a net income of 3 per cent. per annum.

So, barring all unforseen accidents—and if such there are they must be serious ones—we repeat again that we have confidence that we may expect a year of genuine prosperity all over the country.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Magazine of Art.

The magazine of Art for February is a charming number, and is ushered in by a poem from the pen of Austin Dobson, illustrated by the pencil of Randolph Caldecott. These two gentlemen have the 18th century spirit in perfection, and one is only surprized that they were not of the age of powdered and patch. The first article is "Buckingham Palace," described so vividly with pen and pencil as to open one's Republican eyes with wonder at so much royal grandeur. The little poem, "A Song of the Road," by R. L. Stevenson, brings him back to a certain simplicity and he is got well in hand for this work-a-day world by the time he has read the story of "David Neal's Struggles and Successes." Mr. Neal is a New England man by birth, but he owes his art education to Munich, of whose school of painting he is a worthy exponent. The examples of his work that are given by the engraver are most admirable. In the paper on the "Romance of Art" we have the story of "A Faith Healing Academician," which in a more practical line we are given a chapter on "Tables and Table Customs." Cassell & Company, Limited, New York, 35 Cents a Copy, $3.50 a year in advance.

Don't Hold on to Your Produce.

If you have anything to sell, sell it and draw it to market. If what you have to sell is cheap, what you have to buy is cheap also. It seldom pays to hold on to farm produce. If any of the neighbors want a little teaming done, it will not hurt one to do the job—or the horses either. It will bring in money enough to keep the library table well supplied with agricultural, religious, and literary papers, magazines, and books. Start a Farmers' Club. Take subscriptions for the American Agriculturist, and secure one of the premiums. Test your field and garden seeds. Make boxes for starting plants in the house. Make or repair frames for hot-beds, re-putty and paint the sash, and make mats for covers. If the law and the pathmaster will permit you to work out the road tax, by drawing gravel, do so now. And when you are doing it, draw some for the roads and walks about the house and barns. Take an interest in the school, and visit it. Neglect no social, political, or religious duty. Study, not merely read, some good books. If you are constitutionally tired, wake up. The more you do, the more you may do, and the easier it is to do it.—Joseph Harris, in American Agriculturist for January.

Waste no time, delays have dangerous end. If a member of your family is suffering, with a slight cough or cold, don't wait until it develops itself into consumption, but procure at once a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and cure that cough.

The great popularity and success of Salvation Oil, the great pain destroyer, has made it a target for counterfeiters. Beware of imitations. Price 25 cents a bottle.

FOR SALE.—A [illegible] Brahma rooster [illegible]. Enquire at residence. H. E. STOUT.

LOST.—A seven face silver watch between Mr. [illegible] and the village, on Saturday [illegible]. HERALD OFFICE.

TWENTY HENS.—I have twenty hens [illegible] for sale at 10½ cents each. [illegible] JAMES G. WOODWORTH.

TO RENT.—A good tenement [illegible] enquire of [illegible] A. BADWAY.

SOLDIERS, ATTENTION!—A gentleman from the firm of Stevens & Co. of Detroit, will be at Adrian at Chamberlain's office, Tuesday, Feb. 16, and at Hillsdale, Feb. 17, 18, to receive claims (not now in their hands) for pension, increase of pension, bounty, etc., all interested parties may desire to have prosecuted by said attorneys.

Next Sunday is Valentine's day.

Mr. Geo. Tiffany was in Adrian last Tuesday on business.

Grant Hanford, of Ann Arbor, was in town over Sunday.

W. W. Frazer went to Dundee last Friday on legal business.

John Messler returned from a visit to Toledo, last Saturday.

Frank Beman and wife returned from New York last Thursday.

The Hudson papers are fighting valiantly for the new railroad.

Frank Snedicor, of Dundee, was in town the first of the week.

Prof. E. G. Walker has a letter awaiting him in the Tecumseh post office.

The State Horticultural Society is in session this week at Adrian. The meetings began Tuesday evening.

The Adrian Record sagely observes. The newspapers who have Palmer captured seem to be ahead of the office.

The new township system of caring for the poor is giving rise to numerous disputes and entails much extra labor upon the county superintendents.

L. L. Hough, who now lives in the town of Saline, comes over to Tecumseh occasionally. He was in town yesterday and gave this HERALD a call.

The second Quarterly Meeting of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held on Sunday, Feb. 14th. Love Feast at 9 A. M. Rev. T. J. Joslin, the Presiding Elder, will preach in the evening.

We have two new neighborhood letters this week, one from North Franklin, and one from Newburg, both of which are well composed and add materially to the interest of our first page.

Although the "30 couple from Adrian" failed to put in an appearance last Friday night at the rink, a large number of the home skaters availed themselves of the opportunity of rinkulating, and Khapp's band had a good benefit.

When C. H. Gainsley came to take his goods in the store one evening this week, that were on the walk outside, he found that some one had bolted off with one of his bolts of prints. No clew to the thief.

A committee of young men are perfecting arrangements for a party at the opera house on Friday evening, Feb. 19. Ollie Hunt's orchestra of Adrian will furnish music for the dancers, which is a guarantee that it will be the best. Admission to gallery 15 cents.

P. W. Adams, of Delaware, arrived in town last week and will remain here about a month. Waller is always welcome at the old home, and yet we humbly suggest that when a Delaware peach farmer and zero weather arrive on the same day, it is rather an ominous coincidence.

Can it be possible that the editor of the Record has a grudge against one friend Santus, of Ridgeway? He says "In the list of unclaimed postmasters must be included Jay A. Santus, of Ridgeway. And yet no township in the county can provide a rarer assortment of housekeeping material than Ridgeway. Any lady calling for the postmaster after this date will please say 'advertised.'

The performing bear proved to be a drawing feature at the rink last Tuesday evening, as the rink was crowded. The animal seemed to be quite proficient in skating and other tricks, including that of climbing a ladder and coming down on the opposite side, waltzing, turning somersaults, etc. It was one of the most unique entertainments that has visited Tecumseh in a long time and was well worth the price of admission.

We wish to again inform our correspondents that their letters must be sent in not later than Tuesday to insure insertion the same week. We received three letters yesterday about 6 o'clock P. M. At that hour the type for this week's issue was nearly all set. Letters that reach us Wednesday afternoon will be held over till the next week.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD,

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 11, 1886.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Will you be my Valentine?

Remember the Nashville Students this evening.

DeGarmo Grandy, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday.

Richard Underwood is reported quite sick at his father's, Jacob Chaffee's.

Will Sutton, of Toledo, was shaking hands with his old Tecumseh friends last Sunday.

Under-sheriff Bowen has gone to Nebraska to unravel the report that Annie Palmer has been found there.

The Nashville Students will give one of the finest entertainments that Tecumseh has been favored with this winter. Give them a rousing house.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Sawyer, of Hudson, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Wood the latter part of last week and over the Sabbath.

The profits from the entertainment this evening will be turned into the treasury of the Library Association. Remember this and give the Nashville students a full house.

As Valentine's Day falls on Sunday this year, it will be necessary to observe both Saturday and Monday which will be a good stroke for the book sellers and for Uncle Sam's postal revenue.

Mr. Ed. C. Baird, of Dayton, who has been stopping in Tecumseh for several days, with his wife, returned home Monday. Mrs. Baird will remain at her mother's a few days longer before going home.

C. M. Burlingame has severed his connection with the HERALD and has accepted a place as foreman in the office of the Coldwater Republican. Will T. Eccles has resumed his old position as pressman in the HERALD office.

Met. Conklin and Ell. Cairns have got neatly settled in their new quarters in the Usborne block, and are ready to sell anyone a binder, reaper or mower, who is in need of such an article. They intend to push the campaign lively this year.

We call attention to the prospectus of the New York Weekly Star which appears elsewhere. The Star, although a new candidate for public favor, is an admirably edited paper and merits an extended circulation. Club bed with the HERALD at reduced rates.

Last Friday, Feb. 5th, was the Chinese new year. Our washee washee man, Yee Din, celebrated the event with an extra pot of rice, and several cups of Hong Kong tea. He invited a few Mejican men to share the feast with him, but the zero weather of last week warned them to be cautious in their diet, and they wisely refrained.

A grand Washington's birthday party will be given at the Lancaster Hotel, Evan's Lake, on Friday evening, Feb. 19th. Music by Gray Bros. and Bonney's full band. Geo. W. Boardman has proven himself to be a first class manager of a dancing party, and he can look for a large attendance. Young man, engage your best girl at once and go to Evan's Lake.

The Shakespeare club, so much talked about by our neighboring papers, is no more. Last Monday night the more-to-fore Shakespeare club met at the residence of Charles Slayton, being highly entertained by Miss Inez Laing. At the meeting at that place the club resolved to hereafter call themselves the "Dickens Club," having taken up the work, "Our Mutual Friend," by Charles Dickens. The Club is in a flourishing condition and is not yet ready to be married at any rate none would take up with the editor of the Hudson Post.

A Kentucky paper, speaking of Geo. W. Bain, says "His power over an audience is simply wonderful, never failing to captivate almost the entire auditory whenever he speaks. With a remarkable and happy faculty for illustration, he is never at a loss to explain and force home on his hearers whatever point he may be seeking to make. He sparkles like a jewel with repartee and wit, while his fund of anecdotes and incidents seems to be inexhaustible. With these he carries his audience from the extreme to the mournful, from the grave to the gay, and from tears to spontaneous laughter, almost instantaneously and seemingly at will."

The Detroit Tribune of Feb. 2nd says:

A. W. Slayton, of Tecumseh, has 15 saw mills throughout the state, sawing on a large contract for basswood lumber. Mr. Slayton started for Northern Michigan Monday.

Geo. W. Bain, the eloquent Kentucky orator, will lecture for the G. A. R. Post on Tuesday evening next Feb. 16th. The proceeds will go to the G. A. R. Relief fund. Mr. Bain needs no introduction to the people of Tecumseh. He has lectured here on temperance in years agone and his temperance talk was pronounced second only to that of John B. Gough. Both the orator and his object deserve a large audience.

Dean's Opera House in Adrian is now lighted by electricity.

John McGee, of Brooklyn, Mich., was visiting in town the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hall, of Holloway, celebrated their golden wedding yesterday.

Dr. Waldron went up to Napoleon last Thursday to consult with Dr. Haines, of Jackson.

There are nine secret societies in Hudson and yet the ladies sewing circles are flourishing as ever.

Chas. Crane, formerly landlord Wm. McCowan's hotel, is now at Ann Arbor this week up which we infer Mich. tion.

The Hudson Hornet says Frank Bunting [illegible] on their forge this week, and more will be added next week.

Hudson wants a charity ball team, and the newspapers are working up the boom. Can it be that the editors feel a personal interest in the proceeds?

Mrs. James Heck, who was reported sod ingerously ill in our last week's paper is said to be gaining, and strong hopes are now entertained of her recovery.

Thomas Boyd was arrested and brought before Justice Burridge on Monday last for fast driving and fined $3 and costs. Don't do so any more, Thomas.

Hunt's orchestra of Adrian will furnish the music for the party Friday eve. Feb. 19, at the opera house, and those wishing to enjoy a musical treat should go early. Admission to gallery 15 cents.

The old James block is once more the scene of repairing &c. We understand that Dave and Dudley Macham, our popular barbers, have consolidated and will put in a first-class barber shop on the corner as soon as it is ready. We wish them success in the new enterprise.

A party of young folks numbering about 20 couple loaded themselves into hob sleighs last Friday evening with the intention of taking a ride out to Met. Conklin's and surprising Miss Nellie. They evidently succeeded in their intentions as all report a big time and a pleasant surprise to the young lady.

John Usborne has put a partition in his store, dividing it into two compartments. The west part will be used by Will Usborne, who intends to go into the business of purchasing butter and eggs. The east part is used by Conklin & Cairns for an office room, and the rear of the store will be used by them for the storage of agricultural implements.

We have received a poem from a "clique of High School girls" with a request to print the same. If the fair damsels will kindly appoint a committee of one who will favor us with a personal interview and shoulder the poem, figuratively speaking, in our presence, we shall be happy to grant the favor. The young lady's name is not solicited for publicity but as a "guarantee of good faith, you know."

Remember Geo. W. Bain's lecture.

The Northern Christian Advocate, in sketching the International Christian Temperance Association, held at Thousand Islands Park, referring to Mr. Bain, said: "The speaker is characterized by brilliancy of imagination readiness of speech, large powers of pathos, simplicity of manner, delicacy of perception and expression, force of argument and sense of the ludicrous. He is an earnest Christian man, his address will be remembered as the most brilliant, perhaps, that has ever been delivered at the Park."

Some weeks since, the G. A. R. boys knowing that Geo. W. Bain was to make quite an extended trip through Michigan this winter, wrote to him for a second evening's lecture, and in response received the following:

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Feb. 1, '86.

A. W. Mills, Dear Sir,

Yours received. I am engaged for every day while in Michigan. Wish I could give you a second evening, but cannot. Will have to give the other some other time.

Yours truly,

Geo. W. Bain.

The one lecture engaged will be given on Tuesday evening next as already announced.

The Myrtle Club met at the residence of Chas. Tefft, on Thursday evening, Feb. 4. The following officers presided: Pres., Maurice Nay, Sec. Mrs. A. J. Whiting; Treas., Charles Brown; Marshall, John O'Neil; who were elected at a preliminary meeting held at J. W. Wooden's, Jan. 28, 1886. The next meeting will be held Thursday, Feb. 18, at the residence of Elias Brown, in Raisin, when the following program will be the entertainment of the evening:

Song—Louise Brown.
Rec.—Ella Brown.
Reading—Belle Wooden.
Dec.—Frank Nay.
Music.
Rec.—Stella Prichard.
Reading—Mrs. Geo. Hasford.
Charade.
Music.

Sutton, Fairfield & Co., announce a half off sale on cloaks. Now is the time for big bargains.

THE GRAB BAG.

[illegible]
Out of a single cent.
Will never reach that Heavenly home
Where the good Elijah went.
But when at last this life is passed,
This life of toil and woe,
He'll straightway stand in a fairy band
Where they never shovel snow.

L. F. Wheeler, as everyone who is acquainted with him knows, is an enthusiastic admirer of the drama. The other day he struck an old settler who was waiting the train which the stage has detained.

Why, said he, our best actors are dropping away. John McCullough is dead and John E. Owens, Lawrence Barrett is sick and Dan'l Chas Morris turned away the other night. Joe Emmet is on a continental tour. Mr. [illegible] is gray and will soon retire. I tell you the best days of the stage are numbered.

Old Settler—"Oh, that's nothin'. The Ohio legislature is still runnin', Uncle Tom's Cabin is still on deck with a full assortment o dogs and donkeys and the bear on roller skates still lives."

Mr. Wheeler still clings to his opinion but acknowledges that the Old Settler was too much for him on an argument.

* * * *

Fannie—"I say, Jennie, have you got your name inscribed on that new Methodist quilt? That scheme is too nobby for anything, is it?"

Jennie—"Not yet, but I shall have. My hubby has spoke for a hub and I've spoke for a spoke. Between my spoke and my hubby's hub, I shall be pretty well represented."

* * * *

Mr. J. A. Bardwell dropped into the HERALD office the other day on a business errand, and our reporter accosted him thus.

Reporter—"You are looking unusually well this morning, Mr. Bardwell. You don't seem to grow old a bit."

Mr. B.—"How old do you think I am? Make a guess."

R.—"I should say about sixty."

Mr. B.—"You're not a very good guesser. I'm eighty two."

Mr. Bardwell would not care to try roller skates or a bicycle, we presume, but he is remarkably active for a man of his age, and is good for many years yet.

* * * *

Jack—"Keep cool now, Bob, there's a hen on. I've bin readin' in the papers lately 'bout the toboggan clubs in Canady, and up in Dakoty where the snow's ten feet deep and it gits so cold that it bursts all the thermometers, the toboggan clubs are jest boomin'. Why should'nt Tecumseh have a toboggan club? Tobiggans is cheap and the old Globe Mill hill would make jest a splendid slide. Let's call a meetin' and work 'er up."

Bob.—"All right. I'll draft a constertution and carry the spondulix. You can buy the toboggans. This hill town 'll be slidin' down the Globe mill hill within a fortnight."

The HERALD would like to know:

Whether the back bone of winter is broken.

Whether soft coal will be used for fuel in the future world.

Whether subscribers will all pay up promptly in the millenium.

Whether Chicago street will be properly graded and paved during the coming summer.

Whether the anonymous correspondent will ever die.

Whether the price of buckwheat flour and maple syrup is likely to rise.

Whether the prohibition party has come to stay.

Whether the weather clerk has got over his winter spree.

Whether Tecumseh is going to have a charity ball.

Whether Tom Applegate is to control the Detroit Tribune.

The Adrian Record of last Thursday contains this item.

Peter Horning an old Tecumseh resident died yesterday morning at the county house aged 82 years. He was formerly a tailor and was a man well spoken of.

And there by hangs a tale. No obituary notice is written for him. No wife or children follow his remains with tear bedewed cheeks to the tomb. He was formerly a tailor, and was a man well spoken of. Here the record ends. The old settlers of Tecumseh will remember Peter well. A quiet inoffensive man, as proud as Lucifer and as poor as a church mouse, he was a bundle of contradictions and eccentricities. One cold day, when the wood pile had vanished and his pocket book was empty he registered a vow that he would never work another day, and he kept his word. For eight or ten years he wandered about in Tecumseh and Franklin, living upon the charity of old friends, until finally he was taken to the County House where his last years have been passed in comfort. Among the stories of scrubs which were told about Peter years ago, we recall a sample one.

He dropped in upon an old acquaintance just at dusk and begged for a night's lodging which was given. In the morning the house wife asked Peter how he felt.

"I'm about used up. I can't sleep any more. I got no sleep last night. I heard the clock strike every hour between sundown and sunrise."

"That is passing strange, Peter. Almost a miracle. The striking part of our clock is broken and the clock has'nt struck in over six months."

Placing both hands on his stomach and with a pathetic tone of voice that would have drawn tears from a flint, Peter exclaimed, "Oh, My God."

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

Revival meetings are in vogue in Dundee.

Progressive euchre has struck the township of Medina.

To morrow is the day fixed for a sallee party at Ottyton.

The Hudson G. A. R. have organized a Woman's Relief Corps.

A lodge of the Knights of Pythias was instituted at Hudson last week.

Hall's Hudson Gleaner has a farmer who has come to hand. Although an advertising sheet it is well worth a dollar to any one interested in farming. Mr. Hall will accept the offer of the dazzlers as pay in exchange for goods.

[illegible] in the vicinity of Adrian [illegible] Now if the farmers of that section will chase them into the big ravine drain and "cover them over" they will deserve to be enrolled as public benefactors.

The enterprising reporter of the Hudson Post has discovered a young lady who builds the fires in the morning and has warm feet when she retires. It is wonderful how much an industrious person like this scribe can find out.—Adrian Record.

A little boy at Hillsdale caught his foot under the runner of a sleigh, while catching on bobs last week, and the Standard rises up to remark: "Boys should be made to keep off sleighs, if it takes the hor-whip to do it. Better apply the whipsh to them as a preventive than surgical instruments to a cure."

"Saw my leg off" has been sing for many years, but it came near being acted in real life a few days since, when Eugene Weaver was caught by a buzz saw and thrown into the air, with one of his nether extremities nearly sawed off. For the first time in his life he felt the blessing of having a wooden leg.—Hudson Post.

A Wheatland man a few nights since took his store teeth from his mouth and laid them where they would be convenient to get in the morning. But during the hours when man sleepeth and needeth not his grinders, rats put in an appearance and carried off the masticators. May the rats who thus purloined property useless to themselves meet with speedy retribution, and we hope no more to be called on to chronicle such toothsome news.—Hudson Post.

Modest requests occasionally come to postmasters for information, as witness the following received at the Adrian office a few days ago.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Jan. [illegible], '86.

P. M.—Will you please state in a postal to me here, the name of the volume and page where may be found these words:—"Admissions in favor of truth from the ranks of its enemies constitute the highest kind of evidence." From the pen of president Asa Mahan. He was president of a college in Adrian from 1861 to 1871. Please look in his "Science of Logic" or "Moral Philosophy." Truly.

The writer was notified that if he would send the volume the passage would be duly hunted up.—Adrian Press.

Alex. Watterson came to town a couple of weeks ago, went to the residence of his wife for the purpose of inducing her to again return to his roof, which she had been compelled to leave some time ago on account of his brutal treatment. He acknowledged his wrong doings and promised to hereafter be a kind and loving husband. Believing his promises to be sincere she forgave him for the past and promised to return to him. Last Saturday his old propensity for wife beating again manifested itself and he indulged in his favorite pastime of choking and beating her and breaking her furniture. She made a complaint before Justice Covell and a warrant was issued for the arrest of the genial Alex. On promise to quit and not again interfere with his wife, the proceedings were discontinued. He is a wagon maker at Chadwick and formerly lived at Adrian and Tecumseh. This week a bill of complaint of a similar nature was filed in circuit court by Mrs. Watterson.—Dundee Reporter.

Last Saturday forenoon Mr. Stearns at the postoffice, called up Dundee phone Mr. A. J. Comstock at the Press office. Mr. C. answered promptly and Willard began his talk. Just then the ferocious wolf dog "Philander Perkins" which happened to be a throughfare at the time, saw from the window John Mason's dog worrying a white spitz in front of the office, and at once began barking to kill, he was worth. Of course Mr. C. could not hear a word the postmaster was saying, so he yelled at the top of his voice to the dog, "Shut out you miserable, worthless cur," forgetting how over to leave the phone, and the result was that Mr. Stearns got the full benefit of Mr. Comstock's energetic ejaculations while the pup kept up his barking as though nothing had happened. By the vigorous use of a scuffed club the Peruvian bark of the dog was at length suppressed and on going to the phone again Mr. C. distinctly heard these words from the astonished P. M.: "What's that you said?" Explanations followed, and the conversation was then continued without further interruption.—Adrian Press.

FLASHES BY THE C. T. LINE.

W. B. Keyser recently killed a porker that dressed 468 pounds.

Mrs. R. W. Hillman, of Fayette, Mich., and son Floyd, are visiting among their old neighbors.

E. D. Burlingame, of Newburg, is preparing to boom the chicken trade next season, by having had ten pure bred Wyandottes hatched in January last.

The Newburg Lyceum carried off a very interesting program last Thursday evening, and as a whole the entertainment was one to cement that Lyceum more firmly together.

A spelling school over at the Divin district in Franklin, with Tecumseh in charge, is the happy man this week. It's a boy and all doing well.

Mrs. Richard Hicks departed this life at North Adams on Tuesday. She was mother of Mrs. Horatio Keyser, of this township.

Another loop to be made in the C. T. Line. We understand that J. M. Burns and Wm. Tankins are setting out the poles for an extension of C. T. Line to their residence, one half mile south of Tipton. Mr. Burns is the agent of the M. & O.

The flowing well on the farm of John Cook of Franklin, is in a state of commotion. A cask used for a reservoir suddenly disappeared below the surface, and upon examination it was found about ten feet below in a chasm ten feet across. Some attempt has been made to fill up the hole but with little progress.

M. W. Goodrich is getting finely started in the cigar box business. He has added a retail cigar department and will keep some of the best brands on sale at retail. He is talking of putting in steam power at an early day.

Several Ridgeway farmers have been sued on their Bohemian notes. They can now say: "The harvest is passed, and my Bohemian oats are not sold but my Bohemian notes are sold and so am I."

One of the best places we know of to enjoy a real good old fashioned tip top game of whist is at Lt. Elliott Grey's. Mr. Grey himself plays a skillful hand and his daughters are excellent partners.

A Free Seed Catalogue.

We have received the new Seed Catalogue for 1886, from the Joseph Harris Seed Co., Moreton Farm, Rochester, N. Y. It is a good catalogue, and better still, the seeds are warranted to be fresh, pure and sure to grow. The Catalogue will be sent free to any of our readers. Address as above.

TEDIOUS STORY TELLERS.

A Class of Bores Who Spin Yarns About Every Thing.

The story-telling bore is one of the [illegible] He is a long-winded biped, and invariably chooses an unsuitable time for his stories. The slightest hint will start him on one of his interminable tales, prefaced by "that reminds me." Talk of Waterloo, and he will tell you of a grandmother of his own who knew the Capitoline of a Napoleon, who was intimately acquainted with a man who once rode from Brussels to Waterloo in a day, and then being wounded in a battle, he will relate his experience for hours. Discuss the increased circulation of English newspapers and magazines, and he will be reminded of a friend of his [illegible] of a dog possessed by Abraham Lincoln, and which performed an extraordinary feat during the American war, which he proceeds to relate. You ask him where he purchased the handsome cane which he carries. "Ah, my dear fellow, I have a story to tell you in connection with the purchase of that cane." You know Harley, of Elmwood. Well, I met him one day in London about two years ago. He had just returned from South America, and we had mined for cash about. Harley was always a great talker—very prosy. I proposed lunch. He agreed. On our way down the street we met Morton—you know Morton—fine sister. (You remember her at Brighton three summers ago. By the bones of Napoleon, sir, I loved that girl. Well, Morton told me his cousin Gregory had been killed in the Riel rebellion—fine fellow, Gregory. He was out one morning on a reconnoitering expedition, but first I must tell you why he joined the volunteer force; by Jove, I had a great mind to join it myself. Did I tell you of the row I had with my governor about that? No. Well, a few days before Riel was captured I said to the old man—" etc., etc. 'Tis ever thus. I haven't yet found out where he bought that cane.—N. Y. Telegram.

A LUNAR PROBLEM.

Prof. Young's Ideas of the Relations Existing Between Earth and Moon.

Once upon a time, many millions of years ago, the earth and moon, then young, hot and plastic, were very near each other, revolving around their common center of gravity only in from three to six hours, and also whirling on their axes in the same time, so as to keep always visible. Probably at some time before this they had formed a single mass, which on account of some unevenness of density or figure, separated into two under the rapid rotation. But starting from the condition first named, when day and month were equal and each about four hours long, Dr. Darwin has shown that it is essentially an unstable state of affairs, and that if the moon were brought ever so little nearer to the earth, it would then draw closer and closer with ever-increasing speed, until at last it would rejoin the parent mass; but if, on the other hand, its distance from the earth were ever so slightly increased then it would begin to recede, and would slowly withdraw farther and farther from the earth. As it recedes both day and month will lengthen, the moon at first most rapidly, and then the day, until finally, in some far distant future, a condition of stable equilibrium will be attained when day and month will again equal each other in length, being something less than sixty of our present days, and the corresponding distance of the moon about sixty per cent greater than at present. After that, so far as their mutual interaction is concerned, the world and its faithful companion, brother and daughter will live for ever happily—apart.—Prof. Young, in Princeton Review.

THE RUSSIAN STUDENT.

A Sedate Individual Lost in Philosophic Speculations.

Go to Paris, Geneva or Berlin, enter a [illegible] where students are in the habit of meeting together, and join in their conversation. About what subjects will it be? About dogs, about some lecture of some professor, perhaps, about swing, or, at Paris, about some political event of the day, a few sentences taken from leading newspaper being exchanged. And go now to a student's room in the Vassili Ostrov at St. Petersburg, or in the famous "Sivtsef's Ravine" at Moscow. The scenery will be changed, and all, then, the subjects of conversation. The questions discussed there will be first "the Weltanschauung—the Philosophy of the Universe—painfully constructed by each student separately and by all together. For a Russian student may have no boots, in which to go to the university, but he must have his own Weltanschauung. Kant, Comte and Spencer are quite familiar to them, and while innumerable glasses of tea, or rather of tea-water, are consumed, the relative importance of these psychological systems carefully discussed. The economical and political Anschauungen may differ at Yassili Ostrov and in the Sivtsef's ravine, but here and there Rodbertus, Marx, Mill and Tchernyshevski will be discussed and boldly criticised. Be sure that Spencer's "Evolution of Morals" is already a quite familiar book in Sivtsef's ravine, and that it is considered there a shame not to be acquainted with it.—Prince Kropotkine, in Nineteenth Century.

—A traveler in New Mexico gives a glowing description of the country through which a new road passes, and tells of the seven cities of the Chico Valley, what almost reads like the romantic explorations of the members of the Smithsonian Institute. He says that there are to-day in that valley ruins of large buildings five stories high, and some of them in such an excellent state of preservation that the masonry and plastering are looking as new and fresh as though done but a few years instead of centuries ago. These buildings are popularly supposed to be of Aztec origin, but, strange to say, there is at present no historical account of them or their builders.—Chicago Herald.

LOST RIVERS.

The Tributaries of a Stream That Does Not Exist.

There is one remarkable case in New Mexico where the rivers flow and are plentiful but the main stream does not exist. This is in a valley which lies between the Rio Grande and Pecos Rivers. The valley begins near the Sangre Mountains, and shot out from the streams on each side by spurs of mountain chains. It is [illegible] valley, not very broad, but has a length perhaps of three hundred miles. Flowing down, especially on the east side, are the finest streams, and the cattle ranches lie along the base of the mountains. But the main stream has so completely disappeared that it was [illegible]

In the Valley lie the ruins of the Gran Quivira, the existence of which not only proved by the ruins themselves, but also by the accounts of the earliest Spanish settlers. The records of the Spanish up to the latter part of the seventeenth century, when they were expelled by the Indians, are in complete as the Indians destroyed all that they left behind. That the Gran Quivira was well known to them, however, is shown by the fact that the most prominent ruin there is that of a church. There is now no water for many miles from the ruins. That there must have been once can well be granted, for no large city would have been built by human beings at a distance of fifteen or twenty miles from a scanty water supply. The valley may be traced from this city, and would then be the Gran Quivira Valley. About half way down the valley it is broken by a long, narrow, thin layer of lava, now much broken up, and making a desolate region, locally known as the Mal-pais, or "bad land." The crater from which the lava was derived was in the northern end or the Mal-pais. Just above the Mal-pais an old river-bed is reached at the depth of about two hundred feet below it the river-bed, which found, is at a slight depth. Southwest of the Apache Reservation the old river-bed runs into a large salt marsh. A stream of no mean size seems to have once run down this valley. Not only has it now disappeared, but it is buried by lava and loose soil sometimes to great depths. As to the cause of the disappearance, it may have some connection with a tradition of the Indians, which tells of a time when this valley was so filled with flame and poisonous gases as to be made uninhabitable. When this occurred the chronology of the Indians is not perfect enough to tell us. That it was long ago is attested by the depth to which the old bed is covered by a detritus, probably washed down from the mountains, and by trees of considerable size which are found in some places in it. But that it was not so extremely long ago that it had become entirely uninhabitable is made probable by the comparatively late description of the Gran Quivira. It is entirely possible that the Indian year of fire may have long preceded the drying up of the part of the valley in which Gran Quivira was situated.—Popular Science Monthly.

MISPLACED FRIENDSHIP.

How an Honest Countryman Was Deceived by a Flashy Hotel Clerk.

There is one type of Arkansawyer who forms sudden and strong attachments, and who sometimes, after meeting a man once, afterward refers to him as his friend. Nelson Boyle, of Polk County, is a man of this type. Several days ago he came to Little Rock, having been summoned as a witness before the United States Court. He had never attempted to live high, and, as he expressed it, decided to go to a hotel and live like a pet fox. He soon took a fancy to a clerk. Why he took this fancy would be hard to say. On one or two occasions during the three days' visit of Mr. Boyle the clerk turned over from his lofty pedestal of dignity and spoke to him. This assured Mr. Boyle that his friendship for the clerk was returned. When his business with the court was settled, Mr. Boyle went down to bid the clerk goodbye. He thought of something appropriate to say and employed all his entire stock of warm words in framing a form of invitation, which he knew would induce the clerk to visit him in the close future.

"Well, Colonel," said Mr. Boyle, as he laid one hand on the register, "I must leave you. I am sorry—"

"Front!" shouted the clerk.

"I am sorry to break a—"

"Front!"

"I have enjoyed my visit very much, for your society, and now I want you to promise me—"

"Front!"

"Promise me that next summer—"

"Front!"

"Summer you will come out and spend—"

"Front!" yelled the clerk, as he glossied on the simple minded countryman.

Mr. Boyle waited a moment and continued:

"You won't find much style at my house, but—"

"Front!"

"Look here, I want to know what you mean—"

"Front!"

The countryman hopped over the counter, seized the clerk by the collar with one hand, boxed his ears with the other and yelled "Front!" Then he jammed him into a corner and exclaimed "Front!" He pulled him out of the corner, shook him and yelled "Front!" Still he was not satisfied. He seized the clerk's plug hat, shoved his foot through the crown and, in a confidential and cordial manner, remarked: "Front!"

"Now, old Fellah," said he, as he gave the clerk's nose a parting twist, "I am about done. Whenever you feel like you want to go into the front business again, send for me."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Harper's Bazar

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is the only paper in the world that combines the choicest literature and the finest illustrations with the latest fashions and methods of household adornment. Its weekly descriptions and designs for the newest Paris and New York styles, with its useful patterns and supplements and its patterns, by means of which ladies can be their own dressmakers, save many times the cost of subscription. Its papers on cooking, the management of servants, and housekeeping in all its various details are eminently practical. Much attention is given to the interesting topic of social etiquette, and its illustrations of art needle-work are acknowledged to be unrivalled. Its literary merit is of the highest excellence, and the unique character of its numerous pictures has won for it the name of American Punch.

PIANO KEYS.

Handsome Pieces of Embroidery Used on Covers for the Keys.

Ornamental covers for piano keys serve to keep [illegible] and every one who can play at all knows the advantage of a well-dusted piano and how pretty [illegible] look.

Handsome pieces of embroidery are now to be seen on keys; a specially handsome one recently exhibited was made of white satin and plush. On the satin was worked a flowing geometrical pattern in gold thread, and in the middle, in black and white silks, a music scroll. The lines and spaces were marked out in the fine black for the black music, and a few notes were put between them. The whole had a border of gold and one box. Here the white is [illegible] of Cocoanut Odes, [illegible] not so [illegible] make and with hearts as hand-some an effect, are all [illegible] in the drawing room. Many [illegible] pretty strips of [illegible] worked in crewel stitches upon a black or dark colored plush and a spray of Virginian creeper leaves. Bramble leaves, berries and fruit have a beautiful effect on the pale blue or green plush. If neatness and quaintness are preferred to more elaborate embroidery, repeat the black notes on white satin with black velvet. Those ladies who would like a motto, better than any other design will find many suitable for the purpose. Quilted satin is rich and handsome, and requires after the quilting is once done, but little dainty work. Most of the covers are only laid along the top of the keys, and are the exact size of them; a strip could, however, easily be sewn along one side and fall over to protect the edge of the keys. Feathers tacked closely down are warm and soft-looking, especially if the colors and shades of color are properly arranged. For a school room pianoforte, patchwork properly lined would have the same effect as the more careful drawing room elegancies, or even colored flannel lightly wadded—one layer only of wadding—may be made ornamental by means of a little embroidery in feather and other fancy stitches.—N. Y. Graphic.

CARVING TURKEY.

Territorial Losses of the "Sick Man" During the Last Two Centuries.

The Novoe Vremya gives the following summary of the territorial losses of Turkey during the last two centuries: Since the capture of Constantinople in 1453 they had gradually seized the whole of the Balkan Peninsula excepting Montenegro, the Peloponnesus, the northern shore of the Black Sea and of the Sea of Azov. In 1711 the Ottoman Empire possessed more territory in Europe than any other power except Russia, her possessions extending westward to the Dniester, the Dnieper, the Don and the Kuban. Thus Bessarabia, the Crimea and other Mongolian regions were under the dominion of the Turks, whose possessions on the Continent of Europe covered an area of fifteen thousand four hundred and forty-five square miles. But from this period the decadence of Turkey commenced, and, with the exception of her temporary success against Austria in 1739, she went on losing territory to such an extent that upon the eve of the war with Russia she had only nine thousand four hundred and fifty-six square miles of territory, of which two thousand nine hundred and forty-six miles were governed by Princes, who merely owed her suzerainty. The Berlin treaty deprived her of ten thousand five hundred and fifty-eight miles, so that from 1699 to 1878 the Ottoman Empire lost in Europe ten thousand six hundred and sixty-six square miles, out of which eight thousand nine hundred and two were conferred by Russia, who thus annexed four thousand eight hundred and sixty-four square miles. After the war of 1877-8 Russia annexed four hundred and sixty-eight square miles in Asia Minor and one hundred and sixty-seven in Europe, while Austria annexed one thousand and seventy-three (Bosnia and the Herzegovina), and England one hundred and seventy-four (Cyprus.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Reason Why Egypt is Necessary to Her Political Importance.

The interest which England has in the southeast of Europe and the concern which she may feel in the dynastic mutations and territorial redistributions of which that corner of the world is the scene, are in fact. It is therefore necessary that she should not, and is to the last degree improbable that she will, repeat the mistake committed by Lord Beaconsfield eight years ago, and attempt to assert herself as a Danubian Power. But in the true East, the Asiatic East that is to say, her stake is paramount, her interest most immediate, her concern absolutely vital. What, even in these latitudes, affects her supremacy on the development of the power of the Anglo-Saxon race generally, she can not afford to disregard. The very considerations which should induce her to adopt a waiting policy in Europe should suffice to keep her on the alert, ever vigilant and ever ready to be active in Asia. Unless England is prepared to sever herself from other Anglo-Saxon communities, to take no part nor share in those great enterprises in trade of the Anglo-Saxon race, she must be the undisputed mistress of Egypt. That is the only country on the globe possession of which will enable Great Britain to hold out a hand to and so keep touch of the men of her own kith and kin, who have interests similar to or identical with her own in the Eastern seas. This, in outline, is the real meaning of that policy which the late Lord Beaconsfield surrounded with so many undigested conceits regarding those places of arms we were to establish on our high road to India.—Fortnightly.

—Some enterprising American has been stuffing the London papers, one of which says: "At a sumptuous dinner with Vanderbilt the delicatessen invariably found [illegible] greenbacks [illegible] napkins."—N. Y. Tribune.

THE BAD LANDS.

The Wild and Romantic Country Inhabited by the Crow Indians.

The country along the Yellowstone for [illegible] hundred miles [illegible] side a beautiful level plain, clothed with fine buffalo grass, a great grand pasture for [illegible] numerous inhabitants, while on the other side rugged hills and towering peaks meet the eye, presenting the aspect of complete sterility. Beyond is the region of the Big Horn River, a fine large stream of clear water, meandering along the bottom of a [illegible] with [illegible] the peaks of the Rocky Mountain range, with their snow-capped summits, appearing in the [illegible] Beyond, [illegible] the Yellowstone, [illegible] the Bad Lands, [illegible] Harper's Weekly, fantastically sculptured with what seems to be broken towers and crumbling pyramids, and it requires but little imagination to suppose oneself in some grand old decaying city of the dead. The traveler wanders at the base through labyrinthian passages, while from above Gothic castles, with towers and bastions and solid walls, frown down on him, in gloomy grandeur.

Here he will see many a place where [illegible] Blackfeet have met in deadly strife, for scarcely a month passed previous to the treaty between these two nations that some bloody contest did not occur.

When you near the foot of the mountains, the scenery is wonderfully grand and imposing.

In early times the traveler would often find himself solitary and alone on some lofty butte or towering mound, viewing that lonely region clothed in indescribable magnificence and grandeur. At every glance he saw large herds of buffalo, elk, deer, antelope, and often the grizzly bear. To-day no country seems more adapted to the wild Indian than this.

There is still game in abundance for his subsistence, grass for animals, and wood enough for his fuel; and the red man asks for nothing more. But from its very nature, the hand of civilization will leave it undisturbed forever.

The buffalo, now so scarce, is sometimes captured by the Crows, and throughout their entire country there is a variety of game. Wild fruits are very abundant, and many kinds of roots, which supply them with all the vegetable food their wants require, are also found in plenty. Service berries, cherries, plums, currants and gooseberries are found in greatest abundance on the forks of the Yellowstone.

The Crows have ever been in the highest degree nomadic, and their necessities do not require them to till the ground.—Golden Days.

FRUIT GROWING.

Advantages and Disadvantages of the Two Branches of Industry.

We are often asked this question: but it is one that we can seldom answer to our satisfaction, as so much depends upon the locality, nature of the soil, climate and the surrounding market. Usually it is best not to confine yourself to one branch entirely, but to plant both large and small fruits. We have known inexperienced men to begin fruit growing by planting one hundred acres of pears and nothing else, or fifty acres of grape vines, or large fields of strawberries. These people often come to grief. How much better it would have been if they had divided their planting among numerous species. Fruit trees, plants and vines are liable to occasional failure, the same as anything else in this world is liable to fail. Therefore, if one has planted a variety of fruits, the failure of one or of several does not cause him serious loss, and he continues from year to year to receive an average income. Aside from this, if he plants a large acreage of one specialty, he is obliged to harvest and market his specialty in haste, at a certain date; whereas, if it was divided into numerous species, the time of harvesting and marketing would be extended over a large period, and could be done with much less expense and danger from storms and other contingencies.

Usually the drift of such inquiries is to learn whether small fruits or large are most profitable. There is this much in favor of small fruits, they can be made to bring in revenue sooner than large fruits; therefore, most fruit growers begin fruit-growing by planting strawberries, raspberries and blackberries, grapes and currants. They plant at the same time orchards of pears, apples, peaches and quinces, depending upon the early grapes, strawberries and other small fruits to tide along the way until the large fruits get into bearing. Then they have an opportunity of testing thoroughly whether large or small fruits pay best in their locality and on their soil. Thus, if they find the market for small fruits in excess of the supply, they can gradually diminish that department, and devote their attention to large fruits. This is the proper way to begin fruit-growing. Orchards of large fruits require years for their maturity, and it is a matter of speculation somewhat as to what the outcome will be, and yet we have every assurance that they will prove profitable; but how profitable no one can say. In planting small fruits we have but a short period to look forward to, and we can decide with some certainty regarding the demand.—Fruit Grower.

—Mr. Bergh has his eyes on no less a place than Paris, where cruelty to horses is said to be distressingly common. A cruel thing that is ceaselessly happening all over Paris is the cracking of the whip just over the horse's head, so as to cause it to make a detonation like a pistol shot. In a satirical writing of 1617, and then, it's not given as new, occurs the saying: "Paris is the paradise of women, the purgatory of men and the hell of horses."—N. Y. Herald.

—A Coroner's Jury at Virginia City, Nev., found that a man came to his death "from gun-shot wounds inflicted by a pistol."

HEROIC SACRIFICE.

A Woman's Wonderful Work and What It is Doing To-day.

The commander of a Government [illegible] on the Niagara river during the early part of this century, was apparently at the point of death. His associates gathered around him, but neither they nor the Post Surgeon could do anything for his relief. His heart throbbed so violently that every one in the room could hear it beat, and the occasional spasm of anguish that passed over his face showed how much he suffered. At length one of the officers spoke up suddenly:

"I know of an elderly lady who lives many miles away, whose reputation as a nurse, and almost as I have often heard, is world wide. I will bring her."

And in less than one week after approval or disapproval, the lady came down in Cobb's Ferry, which had set away and piled the snow in drifts. But in spite of the elements, and perhaps modified opinions, she came to the bedside through the storm. At length they reached the post, and under the skillfully applied remedies which were administered, the officer was brought back to health. But the effect of the storm and exertion of travel were too great and Chloe Hibbard, who had saved the life of another, was stricken with total blindness. Her's had been a peaceful life. She had loved nature and in studying it, had discovered nature's remedies. She had loved humanity and longed to relieve its suffering. She had seen men and women racked by rheumatism in all its forms, and she had carefully studied to find a means of relief. She succeeded in finding this means, and was gratified by seeing hundreds of sufferers restored to health. She realized that rheumatism was the cause of most so-called heart disease, and she saved many lives just at the point of death, as she did that of the Post commandant. But she sacrificed herself upon the altar of philanthropy, became blind, and died unrewarded. It is fortunate, however, that her good work goes on. Her nephew, Hon. Daniel B. Hibbard, one of the most prominent citizens of Jackson, Mich., being possessed of the formula by which his Aunt accomplished so much good, determined as a duty he owes both to his ancestor and humanity to give it to the world, and to-day Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is sold in every drug store, and is becoming the most popular, as it is unquestionably the most efficient remedy for rheumatism ever known.

Science is accomplishing much for the world and doing great things for the relief of suffering. Dr. Koch revealed the cause of cholera, and Pasteur has found a cure for hydrophobia, but the discovery of nature's pure and simple means for relieving immediate suffering and postponing death is far more valuable to us all. Especially is this true in the case of rheumatism, which is not only so painful an affliction, but by the quickness with which it flies to the heart is so dangerous.

THE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Adrian Times gives those who [illegible] show that the new association [illegible] a success financially.

A supplementary report of Mr. Hunter, secretary of the county fair association, shows the net profit of the fair the two years its meetings have been held on the new grounds. The last year the fair was held on the old grounds there were 1,800 entries made. In 1884 there were 1,800, and in 1883 there were 2,000. The grand stand on the new grounds paid twenty-five per cent. of its cost in fifteen days from the time of its completion. The report also gives the following interesting exhibits of items of receipts and expenditures for the two years on the new grounds:

RECEIPTS.

Gate receipts, 1884	$2,[illegible]
Gate receipts, 1885	3,312
Booth rents, 1884	120
Booth rents, 1885	[illegible]
Grand stand, 1885	321
Gates, 1885	97
Use of track, 1885	110
Total	$[illegible]

EXPENSES.

Premiums, 1884	$1,335
Premiums, 1885	1,481
Other expenses, 1884	927
Other expenses, 1885	1,279
Total	$5,022

Showing a net profit for the two years of $1,569, which certainly is a gratifying showing.

In all cases of neuralgia there are certain localities where pain is more intense—these are called the "painful points." Rub the "painful points" thoroughly, when afflicted with this disease, with Salvation Oil, the great pain annihilator. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Some heathen are not as much of the heathen as we think; read a Mahometan proverb, "God has bestowed the good things of this world to relieve our necessities, not to reward our virtues; these will be rewarded in another world." We know of no greater necessity to be relieved, than a stubborn cold, and we know of no better relief than Dr Bull's Cough Syrup.

A WIFE'S FOLLY.

The Nimocks Divorce Suit Tried and Granted in the District Court.

The following item is taken from the Minneapolis News. Mr. W. A. Nimocks was manager of the Hotel Brunswick one year ago in Ney Castle, and is now a joint owner of the Detroit Tribune.

It transpires that the divorce suit of Walter A. Nimocks vs. Martha A. Nimocks was tried at chambers by Judge Koon about 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon. There was the appearance of the defendant and an affidavit of the defendant and an affidavit of [illegible] service of complaint and summons upon her at Sparta, Wis. [illegible] was submitted. Whereupon [illegible] thirty days had passed the court extended the time for answering to full, and as she did not make no response, the following facts set forth in the complaint were accepted as true: That the plaintiff is 4[illegible] years old and the defendant of [illegible] years; that they were married June [illegible], 1882, at Chicago, that they have had no children; that the plaintiff has always been a kind, indulgent husband, and that the plaintiff disregarding her marriage vows did, on the 15th day of November, 1885, at the city of St. Paul, commit adultery with one Frank D. Robertson. Judge Koon granted a decree of absolute divorce.

THE DIVORCE

is the outcome of a sensational escapade that recently set society agog. Mr. Nimocks was, until a few months ago, one of the proprietors of the Evening Journal; a man of means, and highly respected. His domestic relations were apparently happy and his affection for his wife lead him to treat her with lavish indulgence. Her slightest whim was humored and every caprice gratified. She was vivacious and fond of society and at parties and balls became a conspicuous figure. Rumors of certain indiscretions on her part at length reached the ears of relatives. Mr. Nimocks refused to believe them, but at length consented that a private detective from Chicago should be employed to watch her conduct. The detective reported that he could discover nothing wrong, and Mr. Nimocks was only too glad to accept this evidence of his wife's purity. The relatives, however, were not so easily quieted. Thinking that the detective must have been mistaken, intentionally or otherwise, and feeling that the family name was at stake, they secured the services of a local detective and took the matter vigorously in hand. They did not have long to wait. Mrs. Nimocks one evening went to St. Paul and at the union depot met Robertson, a Chicago hardware drummer, by appointment and accompanied him to the Merchants hotel, where they registered as man and wife. In due time the detective and a brother gained an entrance to the room on some pretext and there discovered the erring wife in a situation that left no doubt as to her guilt. Shortly after this expose Mrs. Nimocks, accompanied by her aged father, left the city and has never returned, although it is understood that letters imploring forgiveness have since been received from her. The tale is a sad one, revealing the spectacle of a woman who failed to appreciate the value of a loving husband and a happy home and who for some unaccountable reason chose to cast them aside for the clandestine society of a man for whom it is said she had no real regard and could not have had much acquaintance.

The February Century.

The publishers respectfully call attention to the fact that in the contents of the "Send winter" Century may be found a remarkable variety of subjects of future interest, and an equally remarkable list of names associated with the history, literature, and art of America. If this issue of the magazine has an unexplainable look to foreign contributors, who happen to be wholly and by accident excluded, they may find recompense of comfort in the plain speech from forty-five American writers, on "International Copyright," spoken in the "Open Letters" department, and which is one of the most striking features of the number. Lowell opens the argument against literary theft with a quatrain in the most biting vein of Biglow's humor; epigrams of satire, reason, justice, and exhortation from writers prominent in every branch of letters follow, and Whittier at the end speaks a few words of Quaker scorn of the American attitude to the subject more bellicose than avowed warfare. The leading article in "Topics of the Time" expresses the editoral view of The Demand of American Authors.

[illegible]

We sail on life's stormy sea;
Adrift to floe from the approaching lee.
We seek some small escape—we weep, we pray.
But when the blow falls our hearts are still.
Not that the pain or grief or sharpness of it
But that the evil must be borne.

We twine our life around some other life
And hold it closer, dearer than our own.
Anon it faints and falls in deathly strife
Leaving us stunned, stricken and alone.
But still, we do not die with those we mourn.
This also must be borne.

E. A. AKERS.
Mendon, Ill.

Jan. 9th, 1886.

In Memory of Mrs. Chas. Belmont.

Hushed was the home and still that Tuesday eve
Not even a sigh passed through the room
As they beheld that young life cleave,
Leaving them alone in sorrow and gloom.

Only here a minute per day
That day where once such loveliness beamed
The Angel of Death seized her as his prey
Not wealth or beauty could her life redeem.

One could that Angel but pity feel
For him that's left to this sad fate
But no, we must in submission bend
And say, it is but a just God's will.

But the loved keep her lovely shrine warm
Free from this world's pain and care
And soon time will wait his shadows on
And you will meet her, "over there."

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY HAMLETS

The cool wave and blizzard struck us Monday with a little snow.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lawton, who have been visiting relatives here for the past few months, left for their home at Tonawanda, N. Y., Monday.

Prof. Earl Dresser of Litchfield, was the guest of Miss Hattie Moon over Sunday. We are informed he is looking for a place to edit a paper. We would suggest that he take a half interest in the Editor of the R. Comet.

Miss Ada Loree went to Hillsdale Saturday to visit friends.

Ambrose Arner sprained his ankle Saturday, by jumping, and now uses crutches for a means of conveyance.

John Larkin is quite poorly; the Doctor was with him nearly all night Saturday night.

Mrs. M. M. Florence, Mrs. David Coryell, Miss Salome Clark and Nellie Rappleye are on the sick list at this writing.

Mr. Whiting is quite sick with diabetes.

During the recent muddy spell a little boy at Britton, got stuck in the mud so that he had to be pulled out by a friend. We should think life preservers would be a good investment for our friends down the creek.

There will be a special school meeting of Dist. No. 1, next Monday night, for the purpose of hearing the report of the building committee.

The Annual Donation will be held at the church, Feb. 24th. All persons interested will meet at the home of G. P. Waring on Friday of this week to make the necessary arrangements.

The Literary will hold its first meeting of the year, a week from next Friday evening, when a short programme, will be carried out, after which the election of officers will take place.

Mrs. Sarah Rappleye received a card from her sister, Mrs. Ellen Burch of Oneida, Dakota, with very encouraging news. They began sowing wheat on the 8th, and report everything prosperous for a good season. Florida will have to take a back seat this spring. What is the matter of going west to spend the winter in the sunny south.

Last week Wednesday being a spring like day, we in company with Miss Belle Barlow, Ada Loree, Anna and May Smith, Allie and Lou Arner, drove over to Mr. M. M. Florence's and spent the day very pleasantly. The latch string is out for all, and all are made welcome.

ONSTED ODDS.

Geo. P. Hines went to Tecumseh Saturday.

Henry C. Smith of Adrian, was in town Saturday.

Fred Olena was in Toledo Saturday buying goods.

Walter B. Wing, who is attending school in Tecumseh, was home Saturday and Sunday.

We would advise a certain young man of this town, to be more careful the next time he sends out invitations for a dance.

George Griggs of Springville, was coughing around town Saturday for his eleven year old boy. Said boy had ran away from school the day before, and failed to come home Friday night.

Wilson Lee received a writ from a lawyer Saturday, representing Moreland Bros. & Cramp, of Adrian. Said lawyer said that very damaging reports had been sent in against the firm of Lee & Son. On making a careful examination of the case he was satisfied that there was no danger but that Lee & Son were perfectly able and willing to pay their obligations. It would seem that the commercial agencies should be represented by men, who would take pains to find out the facts before sending in reports that might materially injure a man's business prospects. Mr. Lee says that, although he is selling out his stock at cost, his creditors will find him at the old stand ready to meet all claims.

MACON CENTER CLIPPINGS.

The change of weather has made the roads very hard. An agreeable change; they were too soft before.

Our quiet and usually happy neighborhood was startled with the news, last Thursday morning that Hattie, wife of A. Russell, was dead. She had been very sick for a few days but on Tuesday morning was apparently better. On the evening of that day however a decided change for the worse came. She soon became unconscious, and continued to sink rapidly away until just ten minutes past 3 o'clock A. M. Thursday Feb. 11th, when death ended her sufferings.

The blow to her family and to our place from is a severe one. She was a faithful daughter, a good wife, a loving mother, a kind friend, a warm hearted neighbor. Her funeral services on Saturday the 13th, were conducted by the Rev. Chas. S. Dutton, assisted by the Rev. E. W. Boyden. The large concourse of people that turned out to pay the last tribute of respect, regardless of the inclemency of the weather and the terrible condition of the roads, is evidence enough that she was a person held in high esteem. Her mother, Mrs. Abigail Martin, is still living and will be 92 years old one week from next Tuesday, if she should live to see that date.

Mrs. J. W. Osborn still lies in a critical condition.

Mrs. Daniel Bailey and Mrs. Samuel Weeks are both improving slowly.

Box social at Grange Hall, Friday evening.

Regular meeting of Macon Grange No. 167, on the 26th, at 7 P. M.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

A warm wave this time.
Mud has touched bottom.

Everything is shut down for repairs and amid the changing scenes, the cold wave of affliction sets in. The recent death of Thomas Osborne, and the still more recent death of Mrs. Asel Russell whose funeral was largely attended at the Reformed church, Saturday noon. The death of Robert Foot who has lived in this vicinity the most of the time for the past three or four years. The severe and protracted illness of Mrs. J. W. Osborn whose fate hangs in the balance, and numerous cases of apparent less severity and we hope of less afflicted results, has cast a gloom and touched the sympathetic chord in this community.

Our local telegraph, is a great convenience this muddy weather, in calling physicians, and keeping posted on the condition of the sick and current events.

Lewis Martin of Leslie, attended the auction of James Small Thursday.

Fred Morrell says Bohemian oats make good "sucker bait." But "Yan" Mills says they are sure death to "mullets and bullheads."

BRITTON BUDGET

Cold wave has again struck us.

Misses Adah and Libbie Porter of Tecumseh visited friends here Monday and Tuesday.

Several of our prominent citizens received quite a scare last Saturday from Bible Agents, who have been through this section selling books on the installment plan, taking leases of same. After having taken about 30 orders the sleep started that the leases they had signed was a Lease which could be raised to a large amount. Scare is over and nobody hurt.

The store formerly owned by John Britton has again changed hands, Mr. Joseph Dash being the purchaser.

Mrs. Geo. Gifford who has been sick for the past nine weeks, died Monday morning at 2 o'clock. The funeral was held at the house, on Tuesday, at 1 o'clock.

The literary society are making a success of their undertaking.

Who is the penny dude at Ridgeway who takes the one cent "revenge?" Is that the extent of his pluck? Ah there! we are on to you.

NEWBURG NOTES.

Owing to bad roads the Lyceum last Thursday was not largely attended.

PROGRAM

Meeting called to order by president C. McNeil.

Rec.—Mrs. Adah Conger and little Zella Bowen.

Chip Basket—Oryllie Barnes.

Debate—Jumbo and Barnum—Fred Frost and Charlie Record, wds a success.

Next meeting on Thursday, 18th. Question—Resolved, That machinery is injurious to the working class of people.

Mrs. Dewitt Bowen and Mrs. Chas. Keysor are on the sick list.

Mrs. Beal and daughter Ollie, visited Britton Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. Earnest Hougland visited Newburg last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Chas. Mangus and Richard Furley have joined the wood sawing circles.

We understand Frank Conger has a number cords of wood for sale.

Maurice Nay and Adah Conger are under the weather at this writing.

Mrs. Stacy visited friends in Clinton a few days last week.

Miss Nettie Dove, formerly of Newburg, is now employed by the Clinton woolen mills.

Our sleighing is gone and mud is now in style.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY

Alfred Bartlett has returned from his visit in Ohio.

We were glad to see Alfred Smith at meeting last Sabbath.

Minnie Baker spent last week with her friends at the Seminary.

Jo Temple Kerr, of '81, is keeping house for her father and brothers at Cincinna, Iowa, while her mother visits friends in the east. She has been engaged in teaching most of the time since leaving the Seminary and expects to attend Valparaiso Normal this spring.

Nathan Harkness of '83, who has been teaching this winter spent Sabbath with his parents.

Rilla Binns and Ed Palmer have decided to leave school the remainder of the year on account of ill health.

Shirley Smith, of Hillsdale College spent Sabbath with her friend, Marian Hathaway, at the Seminary.

Will Wilson paid us a visit one day last week. He reports his health to be improving since he stopped teaching.

Levi Deline of '81 wields the birch successfully at Palmyra this winter.

Susie Brown of '85 besides teaching district school has three pupils in instrumental music at the Seminary.

F. R. Hathaway, of '83 has been elected Principal for next year, and Mrs. M. E. Parker Assistant Principal. The third place has not yet been filled.

Friday evening, Feb. 12th, the Seminary literary society gave a public entertainment. The audience room was well filled and all seemed pleased with the program.

Dr. Morden's lecture on "The Human eye" was well attended and listened to with interest. The doctor regularly gives us one lecture a year and his coming is anticipated with much pleasure.

The next neighborhood literary society is held at the home of Mrs. D. Willets. The author for the evening is Tennyson. Essays, declamations, quotations, and a debate upon the question, "Resolved that silver coin ought to be suspended in the United States," make up the program. These gatherings have been growing in attendance and interest let them continue to do so.

TIPTON TOPICS

Last week's letter.

The concert last Tuesday evening given by Professor Wallace's colored singers was quite well attended, and all present seemed to enjoy it.

The people of the German district held a social at the house of Mr. Joseph Lanning last week Wednesday evening.

An oyster supper at Mr. John T. Smith's Friday, February 5th.

Mrs. J. Hunter is reported quite ill. We hope to hear of her recovery soon.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church met at the parsonage last Friday. These meetings are well attended. The members of the society seem very much in earnest in their work and endeavor to make the meetings interesting and instructive to all.

Miss Lena VanNess Sunday school class gave her a pleasant surprise on it a few evenings since.

We regret that we are unable to announce the evening of an entertainment to be given in the near future by the Sunday school of the Congregational church.

Mrs. J. B. Kemp who has been suffering severely with neuralgia for the last few weeks is improving.

Mrs. Esther Stephenson, of Hillsdale, has been visiting her parents of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mangus spent Saturday visiting friends in Saline.

There have been so many "flying visits" to Adrian lately that your correspondent has grown discouraged in trying to report them all. That city seems to have great attractions for some of the people of Franklin.

Mrs. Puckard of Tecumseh, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Kemp.

On Tuesday evening of this week a Methodist cup social was held at Mr. J. Lanning's. The most interesting feature was a solo, by Mr. C. W. Luce with an extemporaneous chorus by Mr. Bert Crittenden.

The west Franklin "Mite Society" have reorganized with the following officers:

President—Dr. Willard Perkins.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. John Pentecost.
Treasurer—Mrs. W. N. Perkins.
Secretary—Mrs. Smith Germain.

The society will give a "cake and coffee" social at the residence of Dr. Perkins on Tuesday evening, February 16th.

Mrs. James A. Smyth and daughter Eva, of Grand Rapids, are visiting relatives and friends in town this week.

FIFTY YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hall of Halloway Corners, Celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of their Wedding.

On Wednesday Oct. 10th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hall a goodly number of friends assembled to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. The numerous guests consisted mostly of relatives and old pioneer friends from their vicinity and the surrounding towns of Tecumseh, Ridgeway, Palmyra and Adrian.

The center of attraction was of course the aged bride and groom who received their congratulations with a placid dignity, altogether becoming the occasion; and if we may be allowed to judge we think their wedding day No. 1 not a more interesting event in many respects than this their fiftieth anniversary, and as the hopes, trials, bereavements and general vicissitudes of life were recalled, the smiles and tears on their faces were often seen to blend. The first exercise after the cordial welcome was the old but ever dear, "Home Sweet Home," finely rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Mrs. Warren Jones and Wm. Doty and daughter Carrie.

Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Clack of Ridgeway, after which followed the welcoming address, very appropriately and impressingly delivered by Mr. Alex. Richart, of Raisin, in which he rehearsed many early and interesting associations of their pioneer life and closed by quoting some lines emblematic of conjugal love and fidelity, "John Anderson, my Jo John." The Rev. Franklin Hall of Newark O., a brother of the groom made an interesting speech, comparing their lives to a web of cloth which now only remained to be cut from the loom. The next was a poem by Mrs. H. E. Wilson, somewhat descriptive of pioneer life. Lines sang by Wm. Doty, originally composed by Isaac Adams of Tecumseh, and revised by Mrs. Hall for this occasion, entitled, "Ease us down gently," after which followed a poem by Hiram Raymond of Dixon [illegible] "A [illegible]" he gives a very descriptive account of their early life voyage very appropriately comparing them to a fair state and crew. The production being very interesting to most of the guests, the having been an almost lifetime resident in their midst, reminding them of similar prototypes in many former occasions. And finally the presentation of a poor rest and two canes to the friends. The Rev. Mr. Clack of Ridgeway making the presentation in a happy manner assuring them of some earth in their non [illegible] [illegible] with their weapons [illegible] exception [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

CLINTON PAGE.

G. K. STANFORD, REPORTER.

CLINTON, MICH., FEB. 13, 1886.

Wm. Righmire visited Jackson last Thursday and Friday.

Will C. Cooley and wife took in the masquerade at the hall, last Friday evening.

Mr. Goodrich the agent for Manufacturer of Excelsior was in town on business last week.

Geo. E. McCollum is adding quite a number of names from this place to the company at Dejardin's store.

William Richmond bought a car load of horses at Jackson and shipped to Walker & Walker of Jackson the first of the week.

Rev. J. M. Kerridge came over from Grass Lake and preached the funeral sermon of Mrs. Samuel Larzelere, last Friday.

Mrs. Abner Clark spent several days in South Bend and the west, last week returning home Thursday afternoon.

L. F. Wheeler did not give a second lecture Wednesday evening, as was advertised, the audience being altogether too thin.

Thomas Hunter, ex-county clerk, of the Adrian Bar, was in town on Friday, on business connected with the arrest of John Stefletowski.

All business was suspended and the stores closed during the time of the funeral obsequies of the late S. B. Rose, Esq., on Thursday afternoon of last week.

In consequence of the absence of the Professor, there is no school in the high-school room this week. The remaining rooms will hold their usual daily sessions.

Mr. C. Keelty, of Florence, N. J., arrived in town Monday, having been called here to attend the last sad rites administered to a mother, being an adoptive son of Mrs. Michael Keelty, deceased.

Mrs. D. Hixon is moving into her house on her place in the northern part of the village—the old homestead—and we understand Mrs. Wm. Keysor is to occupy the house vacated by Mrs. H.

Maggie Everiss, of Adrian, has been making her Clinton friends, Chas. Clark and wife, happy by her presence, for several days, and enjoyed with them the festivities at the hall last Friday evening.

George Bedding and Joe Burroughs, went to Dundee Monday, to testify in a legal case of rooster "done off your perch". As they were obliged to take the train for home just as the jury went out, we were unable to learn how the matter was decided.

Prof. Lathin, has tried hard to keep up and at his post, but has finally been obliged to yield to the call for rest from labor, and has gone to his father's in Ypsilanti to recuperate. We unite with his many friends in wishing him a speedy relief and return to the village, he has so advantageously maintained in our midst.

The sheet and pillow case masquerade at the hall last Friday evening was a success, as had been anticipated. The house was excellent, the costumes more variegated than we had anticipated could have been done and costuming as closely as they did to the dress for the occasion, and taken altogether, it was a unique and novel sight to the spectator as well as continually time of enjoyment to those more closely interested, and was also a success financially. It was to have been the closing dance, but different arrangements have been made as will be seen elsewhere in our columns.

George Marden, our worthy sexton at the cemetery, has served the people in that capacity for upwards of twenty years, not only to the entire satisfaction and gratification of the residents of the village, but has been the recipient of several tokens of regard for his faithful protection and care of the grounds belonging to non-residents who have emigrated from our midst in days gone by. This is certainly a commendable action and worthy of appreciation. The cemetery grounds will compare favorably with any of the cemeteries in this section of country.

The Blue Ribbon Club will hold their regular meeting next Sunday at town hall at 3 o'clock, when the following program will be rendered:

Recitation—Alice Halladay.
Recitation—Howard Pierce.
Duet—Maggie and Kittie Biggins.
Reading—Alma Swift.
Dialogue—Neva Priest and Emma Storm.
Reading—Alice Perry.
Recitation—Emma Staiger.
Recitation—Hattie Conklin.
Recitation—Harry Kiew.
Solo—Frank Parker.
Reading—Ida Fullerton.
Recitation—Mina Murr.
Recitation—Dave Goodrich.
Recitation—Maud Swift.
Quartete—A. F. Kishpaugh, Chas. Keysor, W. Sodling, W. Maloney.

The egg market is quiet at 16 to 18 cents per dozen.

George Freese took a buggy ride to Manchester yesterday.

The mud has took to frightness and the roads are in fine condition for pleasure rides—on good spring seats.

Little Nellie Whittlesey, of Ypsilanti, is spending a few happy childhood days with her grandparents, E. W. Freese and wife.

The funeral social at Mrs. Chas. Clark's last Tuesday evening, was well attended, and all enjoyed it to their utmost, and in fact only always do when they respond to the invitations given out by the ladies of this society.

Gallen Lodge No. 179, F. & A. M., came down to visit Clinton Lodge No. 175, F. & A. M., last Saturday evening, and returning home on the night train carrying with them the well wishes of their brethren, and voting Clinton a good point for entertaining their guests.

We have just delivered to Will H. Wood, a supply of neat linen note heads and wood cuts, and if any of our friends have work they will kindly entrust us with, we will see that it is nicely and promptly executed, and will receive therefor any commodity we can use in our household.

The dancing club have in preparation a regular old style masquerade to take place at town hall, Friday evening, the 26th inst. and every effort will be put forth to make it by far the most delightful party that has ever taken place in Clinton. Hunt's orchestra will furnish the music and every one knows what that means for those that enjoy good execution on the instruments. There will be a costumer here and costumes may be rented at reasonable rates.

The notable John Stefliuowski was liberated from confinement—having served his time last week, and was again arraigned for another offence and brought by officer William Burch to Clinton last Friday, for examination. The trial was fixed for Monday afternoon but was subsequently adjourned to Friday morning, and as we are unable to obtain the particulars in this case for this week's publication, we must ask for time in which to add more laurels to Johnnie's historical life. We learn that charge of stealing the hog is what brings him before the court this time, and that other charges still await their turn for hearing. If Johnnie's life for the past few years does not fit him for better deeds hereafter we cannot take much stock in legal persuasion.

The dance at Semark's hall last Thursday evening, like its predecessors, was an enjoyable affair, and was well attended. The fact is Ed is giving some very pleasant parties and when one can enjoy an "evening" dance and get a good supper for the moderate fee exacted there, it is not a wonder that so many avail themselves of the opportunity to enjoy them. If you are inclined to quite fall in at the next one and see if we are not right in our assertion.

Sidney's mother has a fine voice. One day while she was singing, Sidney watching her for a while, he said, "Mamma, I ain't got such a nice one in my throat."

"Wee Fanny bit her tongue one day and came in crying bitterly. "What is it?" asked her mother. "Oh, mamma," she said, "my teeth jumped on my tongue."

A number of Masons from this place made a visiting trip to Adrian last evening, and enjoyed a sitting in the Adrian Lodge, on the occasion of a visit by the Grand Master, and the evening train was held for the accommodation of their return. They reported a good time.

—Little Paul, five years old, has been looking at the range and burned a hole in his sleeve. His mother says: "You will surely catch afire, and there will be nothing left of you but a little pile of ashes." What will I say then?" "Ah, dear Paul replies, "You will say, 'Kate, shovel up the ashes.'"

DIED.

LARZELERE.—In this village, on Wednesday, February 10th, of consumption, Mrs. Ida Larzelere, aged 23 years.

The deceased was the wife of Sam'l Larzelere to whom she was married Dec. 12, 1874. She has been a resident of this village and vicinity, for many years and had a large circle of warm friends, who join their sympathies with the father and two little ones, in their sad affliction. She was a daughter of Mr. Ransalet R. Mills.

KEELTY.—In the township of Saline, on Friday, February 12, 1886, Mrs. Michael Keelty, in the 70th year of her age.

The deceased was the mother of Mrs. John Sullivan, of this village, and the remains were brought here for interment. The services took place in the Catholic Church, Tuesday, and were conducted by Father Shain of Hillsdale.

WHITTLESEY.—In Ypsilanti, Feb. 16, 1886, to Mr. and Mrs. Will. Whittlesey, a boy.

TRUSTWORTHY TESTIMONY.

A Home Endorsement of the Highest Possible Order.

The following voluntary letters regarding the standing and character of two gentlemen whose names are now prominently before the public, are most unusual:

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 2, '85.

We take pleasure in saying that Mon. Daniel R. Hibbard, of this city, is one of our oldest, wealthiest and most reliable citizens, and his associate Mr. Wellington Hibbard, has during his residence of a year or two in Jackson left a most favorable impression among us. The connection of these two gentlemen with any enterprise is sufficient anywhere in this region to inspire confidence.

EUGENE PERRY, ex-Mayor.
WM. THOMPSON,
Pres. Jackson City Bank.
JOSEPH MABBITT, ex-Mayor.
R. R. SHERBROOKER,
Mgr. Knickerbocker Co.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 5, '85.

We are well acquainted with Hon. Daniel R. Hibbard, one of our oldest and most active business men; a man of large means, sterling integrity, reliable in all his commercial dealings, and one of the largest real estate owners in our city. Mr. Wellington Hibbard is also personally known to us, as an earnest and energetic business man. The well known character of these gentlemen bespeak for any enterprise they may engage in a prosperous future.

ERASTUS FOOT, City Attorney.
GEO. T. SPRING, Bank Pres.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 2, '85.

We are well acquainted with Hon. Daniel R. Hibbard, of this city. He is one of our oldest and best known citizens, of strict business integrity, a large property holder, and one who would not participate in any enterprise that would not, in his opinion, justify him in so doing.

GIDEON & PARKINSON,
Attorneys.

The above statements are made regarding the President and Secretary of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup Co., of Jackson. They show in quite favorable terms the standing and value of this great remedy which is now attracting so much attention and accomplishing so much good. There is no physical trouble which is more painful than rheumatism, and there is none which is more dangerous. It may at any moment go to the heart, when instant death will be the result. Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is a purely vegetable compound, and has been not only tested by time but bears the endorsement of our most honorable citizens.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

Following are the real estate transfers in this county as recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the week ending Feb. 6, 1886:

CAMBRIDGE.

J. W. Russell to Fred. Reed. Land on sec. 21. $300.

HIGHLAND.

Chas. H. O. Haskins to John Johnson. Land in Clayton village. $4,000.

Tom McIntyre to Isaac R. McIntyre. Land on sec. 4. $1,300.

ROME.

W. M. Taylor to Elizabeth Taylor. Land on sec. 5. $2,500.

TECUMSEH.

Ellen McLaughlin to Daniel McLaughlin. Land on sec. 23. $2,500.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—At least four incorporated towns in Colorado are situated [illegible] thousand feet above the sea.

Prof. Landmann, Chief Director of the Norwegian Fisheries, asserts that salmon sometimes jump perpendicularly sixteen feet.

—Scorpions, spiders, and various insects have been observed to remain motionless if any person blows strongly upon them in a vertical direction.

—Canon Farrar came to this country for a rest and took home twenty-five thousand dollars. He will have a rest on his return.—Detroit Free Press.

—A burglar in N. 40, M., was shot by a shotgun held in the hand of his boy, which went off as he pushed it with a sharp shove full length in the stove after the robbery.

—The New Orleans crooks make a thriving business of selling leaves boiled in hot water. The liquid so left is administered in large quantities before going to bed to cure sleeplessness.—N. Y. Times.

—A New York negro pleaded not guilty to a charge of highway robbery with such terror that he might have escaped had he not pulled out the complainant's handkerchief to mop his perspiring brow.—N. Y. Herald.

—To stop a runaway horse the Russians have a light cord with a slip noose in it about the horse's muzzle, with the cord running through the saddle ring and over the dasher, at hand for the driver to pull upon at the horse's first attempt to run. A little choking stops him.

—A miner on the head waters of the Columbia River, in British Columbia, has found, so he alleges, a deserted mining town, where the billiard tables still stand in the saloons and letters are lying in the post-office bearing date of 1856. Not a soul has been near the place for years.—Chicago Times.

—Some twenty colonies have been established in the Santa Fe district, of the Argentine Republic. Their territory occupies ninety-nine square leagues, and the settlers number 1,300 families. During the last thirty years the district has grown through colonization until it has a population of 110,000 souls.

—At Trieste, on the Adriatic, they say the wind is so stable and enduring that you might accept a bill on it, and George Augustus Sala says the breezes of Wellington, New South Wales, have such steady habits and are so strong that he frequently uses them as a desk on which to draw a draft on London.

—Massachusetts registers over six thousand insane persons in her asylums and hospitals during 1885—an increase of two hundred over the previous year. The annual cost to the State of this form of relief exceeds $1,000,000, not reckoning the $350,000 of interest on the value of buildings, etc.—Boston Herald.

—The telegraph system of the British Islands, under control of the post-office, now amounts to one hundred and fifty-six thousand miles, and employs seventeen thousand instruments. The standard rate is twelve words for a sixpence, address included. Press messages alone now average one million words a day.

—"Sir," said the wanderer, as he entered the sanctum, "I come to ask your assistance. I have lost my right leg." "Advertise for it," said the busy editor, without looking up from the paper. "Special rates in lost and wanted column, and, half money refunded if article advertised for is not recovered."—N. Y. Star.

—The blind Mr. Fawcett, late Postmaster-General of Great Britain, was an enthusiastic angler. He performed "anything better than the average," says his biographer, "whether because he wanted more patiently to strike and he felt his fish, or because he was more docile in following the directions of his skilled companions. He had great success in angling salmon and trout, and in trolling for pike in the winter." One of his trophies was a twenty-pound salmon.

—A great deal is being said about hydrophobia that would be better unsaid, and the dog will be charged with the killing much oftener than he should be. The work of old Pasteur, with whose wounds have healed months ago, and the many other producers of tetanus will all be laid at the kennel door of innocent old dog Tray. In all the United States, with its fifty-two millions of people, there have not been in the entire year over twenty-five deaths from hydrophobia by the agency of three million dogs.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

—It was only two months ago, that Mrs. Sharpe's hired girl left her to get married, and yesterday Mrs. Sharpe was much gratified to receive a card from her former lady of the kitchen. "I will come back to work for you again," said the caller, with an air of resignation. "Why, Bridget, what's the matter? I thought you were going to get married?" "An' sure ma'am, so I did. But you see, John he struck luck in the lottery, and we haven't a cook. An' now, please ma'am, I'd like to come back an' be your cook more nor ever."—Boston Post.

—He was only a stray waif of a yellow dog, with no necessity to boast of, for as he sat upon the wooden seat in one of our city parks with a little child's hat, and I know entranced about his ears thick and fast a sweet, cooing voice saying to his ear, "I love you little doggie," he was as proud as any prize setter in the land. "Is that yourdog, little boy?" asked a policeman, as he passed the happy couple. "No, he doesn't belong to me, only I'm acquainted with him," answered the affectionate friend of the little tramp dog.—Buffalo Home Journal.

—Distinctly Philadelphia street cries, collected by a local reporter, contain some melodious calls. Besides the music of the rag man and oyster man, there is heard the negro patriarch singing, "Hommy man, come out to-day, selling 'sweet hommee' hommee." And the watermelon vendor says: "Here's your ripe watermelons. Try 'em before you buy 'em! All red." A curious cry is "Peppery pot, all smoking hot!" and another humorous cry is, "Crabs-a-walkin', crabs a-talkin', crabs a-bitin', crabs a-fightin', fresh crabs, cr-r-r-abs!"—Philadelphia Press.

Dyspepsia.
Sir:—I feel it my duty to say in speaking for Burdock Blood Bitters that it is the best medicine I ever took. I suffered two or three years from stomach troubles and dyspepsia as well as from liver and kidney complaint. I was not able to attend to my business. My wife was afflicted so much the same way. We tired of your papers in the papers and made up our minds that we would try them. The result is my wife and I began to improve at once, and I am now able to do more hard work than I have done in ten years. I relieved my kidney troubles as well. We both wish you, the makers of it, Godspeed.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Works through the blood, [illegible] and invigorating all the functions of the body.

Ringwood, Hudson and Wall Streets,
RAYNHAM, MASS., Aug. 12, 1878.

C. I. Hood & Co., Gentlemen:— I have suffered much pain from dyspepsia and salt rheum, so much so that my face was covered with raw sores, and I was blind at times. I have had the best of doctors in the city of Taunton for years, and have tried every patent medicine they recommended, to no avail. I have taken two bottles of your Sarsaparilla and [illegible] I feel like a new man. I can now eat any food. I have taken three bottles of your Sarsaparilla, and two bottles of your Pills, and I feel as well as any man. My face is free from sores, and I shall take the remainder of the Sarsaparilla, for fear the disease may return. I shall take no other than Hood's Sarsaparilla hereafter, for I know it to be the best blood purifier. I am confident that the use of your Sarsaparilla has saved my life, and I can never say enough in its favor. I will cheerfully answer any inquiries relative to my case. Yours truly,

JEREMIAH WHITMAN.

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen:— I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to my customers, and have sold more of your Sarsaparilla than any other. It is the best blood purifier we can find. We have sold a great deal of your Pills, and they give good satisfaction. We have sold two hundred bottles of your Sarsaparilla and fifty dozen bottles of your Pills in two years. Your Sarsaparilla is the best selling bitters we have. We can recommend your Pills to be the best family pill. We have sold a great deal of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, but your Sarsaparilla has proved to be the best seller we have. We think your Sarsaparilla will cure the worst case of blood disease, if a reasonable quantity be taken. We have sold your Sarsaparilla for the last six years, and it has given more satisfaction than any other blood medicine we have. We can say we have sold more of your Sarsaparilla than all other blood medicines put together. We shall keep your Sarsaparilla and Pills on our shelves, and we think they will sell as well as they have in the past, and we think for the future, as we have had no cause to complain of them for the last six years we have sold them. We shall take no other bitters in our store but Hood's Sarsaparilla. We shall be pleased to see you when you come to Lowell, and then we will be more fully acquainted. We shall take a few bottles of your Pills with us. Yours respectfully,

J. W. SHELDON & CO.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is sold by all druggists. Price $1, or six large bottles for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

DON'T YOU THINK SO?

It is all very well to be gaily
When Fortune smiles upon your path;
When, in summer, skies are always free of
A shadow, the sun shining bright
Wherever you may roam; when birds sing
With more than usual joy, and the air
Is redolent with perfume of the flowers
And the earth is all in bloom.
Then life is sweet, and life is long.
The world is all right and everything
Just as it should be.
But when the storm comes, and the skies
Are black with rolling and tumbling clouds,
When your path is strewn with thorns
And the earth thirsts for the showers
Which bring life and joy to all
Then life is not quite so sweet.
The birds sing no more, the flowers
Droop and die, and life seems long.
The world is not quite right, and everything
Is not just as it should be.
But what matter? Why should we care?
The sun will come out by and by,
The storm will pass away, the birds
Will sing again, the flowers will bloom
Anew, and life be sweet.
The skies will be blue, the world
Will be right, and everything will be
Just as it should be.
Then why worry and grieve?
Why not be happy and cheerful?
Why not sing with the birds and
Rejoice with the flowers?
Why not be happy while we live?
Life is short at the longest, and
Why not make the most of it?
Why not be happy while we live?
Why not be happy when we can?
Why not be happy when we may?
Why not be happy when we must?
Why not be happy when we will?
Why not be happy when we shall?
Why not be happy when we do?
Why not be happy when we are?
Why not be happy when we live?
Why not be happy when we die?
Why not be happy when we love?
Why not be happy when we hate?
Why not be happy when we laugh?
Why not be happy when we cry?
Why not be happy when we sing?
Why not be happy when we pray?
Why not be happy when we work?
Why not be happy when we play?
Why not be happy when we rest?
Why not be happy when we dance had a twelfth son born to them on Jan. 8th. They propose to name the baby Grover Cleveland.

Codfish have appeared in the Gulf of Mexico. With this New England product transported to Southern waters it is safe to say that the warsis over.

The "Old Roman" of Ohio, Allen G. Thurman, will act as senior counsel for the government in the projected suit to test the validity of the Bell telephone patent.

The Clinton Local has nothing more to say about the HERALD'S advertising rates. Bro. Mills evidently considers discretion the better part of valor and wisely concludes to keep "mum."

Three Democratic Presidential candidates since the war have passed through the dark valley during the last four months. Samuel J. Tilden is now the only survivor among the defeated candidates.

The Boston Herald makes the announcement that the mugwumps will vote neither the republican nor democratic tickets in 1888. Have they already settled upon Belva Lockwood and Susan B. Anthony?

Rev. Sam Jones has fallen into the hands of the Philistines. A Chicago firm has stolen a lot of his sermons, compiled them in a book and copyrighted them, and the firm is now making money out of Sam Jones's sermons at Sam Jones's expense.

"Where are Parties Drifting?" is the title of an editorial in a morning contemporary. To the eye of the casual observer it appears that the Republicans are not drifting out of the offices with sufficient rapidity to suit their Democratic brethren.—Saginaw Courier.

The Louisville Courier Journal says: "Andrew Jackson knew exactly how to treat the unconstitutional interference of the Senate." It looks also as if Grover Cleveland is pretty well up in such knowledge himself. Old Hickory is gone, but a good article of Young Hickory will do to tie to.

Within four months Hendricks, McClellan, Hancock and Seymour, a democratic Vice President and three democratic candidates for the Presidency, have followed each other to the tomb. It is seldom that the death Angel's sickle cuts so wide a swath in so brief a time among honored party leaders.

The startling intelligence reaches us through the columns of the New York Sun, that the President has introduced pie at the White house dinners. The report, however, does not state what kind of pie has received the sanction of the White House cook, and tickled the Presidential palate, and until that point is settled we shall reserve our opinion.

Gen. Hancock died poor. His entire life was given to the service of his country, and his official salary was his only source of income. The hospitality required by his position absorbed his yearly stipend. A few devoted friends of the dead soldier have organized a society to raise a fund for the benefit of his family. A handsome fund ought to be easily raised for this purpose. Let the people, whose champion Gen. Hancock was, give their donations promptly. Let the fund be a popular offering, given as a monument to the services of the great soldier, and as a benefit to support his widow in her destitute condition.

The Philadelphia Times pays this noble tribute to Gen. Hancock:

Of all the many public men who have passed to the City of the Silent since the death of Abraham Lincoln, none was so sincerely and widely beloved as was General Hancock. He was known to the nation and the world at the close of the war as one of the most brilliant and heroic of the great Captains of the conflict, but his greatest laurels have been woven for him by the grander victories of peace. His broad, generous statesmanship exhibited in the tempest of reconstruction, attracted the attention and inspired the trust of the people of every faith, and when he was nominated for the Presidency in 1880 by the spontaneous demand of his party, he was the one Presidential candidate of our history upon whose impregnable man of patriotic and blameless action the shafts of partisan malice were not ventured.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12, 1886.

All over the city the flags are at half mast again. They droop this time for Gen. Hancock. Death has made havoc with official receptions of late. Three times within the last month the social program of the administration circle has been thwarted, marriages postponed, and entertainments postponed in consequence of deaths. The Secretary of War had issued cards for a reception to the officers of the Army, Navy and marine corps for the evening that Gen. Hancock's death was announced. Of course the invitations were immediately countermanded.

The House of Representatives adjourned when notified of the death of Gen. Hancock. The Senate, however, unadvisedly proceeded as usual with business. It must be confessed, there is no sense or appropriateness in shutting down on such business under such circumstances. It is a meaningless, pernicious custom for Congress to adjourn in consequence of any death, and a change of rules in this respect will be welcomed by the whole country. No real respect is shown for the deceased in this way. Congressmen enjoy each adjournment of this kind as any other holiday, while the time is wasted and public affairs neglected.

The Senate has continued the silver debate during the week, and has discussed public Education besides. There there has been open debate on the vital question of the Presidential prerogative. While Senator Edmunds was detained at home with a sore throat, President pro tem. Sherman, walked down from the Chair, and quite unexpectedly opened an attack upon the White House, pleading absolute power of the Senate over all information as to the character of appointees. There have also been during the week, some important secret sessions of the Senate in which certain confirmations were opposed by Republican Senators.

The Woman Suffragists are marshalling their forces preparatory to swooping down on Washington again next Wednesday for the eighteenth annual time. Miss Susan B. Anthony has been here for some weeks perfecting arrangements for this convention, which will be attended by distinguished advocates of female suffrage from all parts of the country. Miss Anthony is as energetic as ever in her work, and is as sanguine of the final success of the cause as when she first began to struggle for it fifty years ago.

The principal object of this association from its organization has been to secure to the women of the several states and territories national protection in the citizen's right to vote, through a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution. They say they do not expect to get the amendment this Congress, but they will get the matter discussed, and in a few years they expect to get what they want.

"What we are after now" said Miss Anthony, "is simply a discussion of the subject. The more it is discussed, the more popular it will become."

We know, continued she, who our enemies in Congress are, and how many. We do not expect to convert them, but as they drop out they will be replaced by men of more advanced views on all the great issues of the age including woman suffrage."

She agrees with the opinion recently expressed by Senator Edmunds that a majority of the women of the U. S. do not want to vote. She accounts for this on the ground that it is something new, and that many women of conventional ideas are opposed to anything new until they have studied the question.

The advocates of woman suffrage claim to have made great progress in Senatorial favor. They hold that twenty six Senators are in favor of giving women the ballot. They cite instances to prove that this number have declared themselves openly as their supporters, while they say, they cannot tell how many silent friends they may have in the upper House.

A Senator asked Miss Anthony how the women expected to do anything with Congress until they had carried the school districts. She told him they could not reach the school districts except through the speeches made in the Senate. "What we want," said she, "is to get a vote in the Senate, and to send the speeches all over the country." She thinks the speech made in favor of female enfranchisement last Congress by Senator Palmer did a wonderful amount of good. Senator Palmer of Michigan is called the philosophical millionare. He utters epigrams on life. He lives in one of the most elegant houses in Washington, but he says his greatest difficulty is in keeping up his illusions, and that there is no possible chance for any man to be happy without them.

Edmund Kirke's sketch of the city of Cleveland in the forthcoming March Harper's contains some striking passages in the pioneer history of Northern Ohio, and is an entertaining way describes the city's growth to its present flourishing condition. The anecdotes of C. F. Browne, the inimitable "Artemus Ward" (with his portrait), are refreshing. Nineteen engravings illustrate the article.

A CLERICAL COURT.

The Trial of the Rev. Denias Dawe of Deerfield before the Methodist Quarterly Conference.

Rev. Denias Dawe was for some time pastor of the M. E. church at Deerfield. A charge of lying was preferred against him by some of the Trustees of his church, and a trial was held at Ann Arbor, where he was convicted. An appeal was taken to the annual conference at Pontiac and he was tried, and Walter Webster, Esq., the defendant's attorney, having applied for a change of venue, the case was transferred to the Tecumseh district quarterly conference.

The trial began last Monday afternoon in the session room of the M. E. church. The court opened at two o'clock by P. E. Rev. T. J. Joslin of Adrian, presiding, and the parties appeared in person, assisted by Walter Westerman as counsel. The trustees of the Deerfield church appeared as plaintiffs, assisted by Rev. S. S. Clements of Ann Arbor, and H. A. Lockwood of Monroe as counsel.

The court was duly opened by singing and by prayer offered by the presiding elder. F. W. Gamble was chosen Secretary. The charges against the defendent are, in general terms lying and obtaining his ordination by false representation.

After the opening services the charges were read by Rev. S. S. Clements, to which charge the defendant pleaded, not guilty.

After some objection each jurymen was sworn. The jury consisting of the class leaders and officers of M. E. church of this place the names of whom are as follows: J. R. Temple, E. Williamson, W. B. Hoag, J. W. Ayers, J. L. Remington, J. S. Kinney, Rev. G. D. Perry, S. M. Smith, F. W. Gamble, R. B. House, J. Potter. Rev. T. G. Potter was excluded on account of his familiarity with the case.

The first witness for the plaintiff was Carlton Robertson, of Deerfield, who testified as follows: Was present at prayer meeting on the 6th of Jan., '81. Denias Dawe stated he would have to leave for home, and as his brother Edwin was sick he would get Mr. Aiken to lead the Friday evening prayer meeting. During this interview, two of the jury were called to the bedside of Joseph W. Gray who was reported as dying.

Wm. Armitage: Live in Deerfield; was present on Jan. 6, '81, at the prayer meeting. Denias Dawe told me he must go home, and as the brother was not able to be out he would appoint Mr. Aiken to lead the next evening.

Mrs. Lewis Smith of Deerfield, testified to about the same facts as related by the two witnesses above.

Horace Hill: Live at Petersburg; am acquainted with the Dawe Bros. They both came along by my place in January; called me and asked to have a box at my place. I helped them lift it out. I told them the right way to Ida. Was not present when they took the box away. Afterwards Denias came to Petersburg with the box they left at my place. It must have been between 6 and 7:30 when they left the box. Some time afterwards when Denias called, my wife let him in and disputed in regard to being there on the day the trunk was left. He also told me I must be mistaken about his ever being there, as he had never been on that road. I said I had been harrassed to death, and said they could not catch me. I had learned my testimony by heart.

The court then adjourned until 7:30.

Mrs. Horace Hill, wife of above, told the same story about leaving the box and taking it away. She said: "I know it was after Christmas." Denias Dawe came to the house sometime afterward and denied ever being there. He never accused me of lying. Denias said that he could prove that he was in Deerfield at the time he was reported at their house.

Oliver Bassett said: Live at Petersburg; came along by Horace Hill's place and helped Denias Dawe put a box in the wagon. Asked him what it contained. He declined the answer. I know the day was Jan. 6, '81.

John Brown: Live at Petersburg; also came and helped load the box for some one at the place. I saw Dawe afterward and did not recognize him to be the man that I helped put the box. Do not think he was the man.

TUESDAY MORNING.

The court again opened at 9 o'clock by singing, "Oh! for a thousand tongues to sing."

Prayer.—Rev. T. J. Joslin, Adrian.

C. D. Hardy, a short hand writer of Adrian, was present and relieved the former secretary.

Mr. Russell, of Petersburg, was the first man called and said:—Am acquainted with Edwin Dawe. Saw both of the Dawe's at Ida on the 6th of Jan. '81. They came there with a trunk. The younger drove away, the other took the train. They did not deny afterwards of being there. The trunk was checked to Grand Trunk Junction.

Rev. W. E. Dunning said: Reside at Carleton. Know Denias Dawe; he admitted to me that upon reflection he did ask Aiken to lead the Friday evening prayer meeting, and that he did go to Ida. He said he was ordained before the regular time at the wish of the Presiding Elder. But the Elder denied the above charge. I concluded that he had said some false things.

Rev. John Wesley said: Resided at Palmyra. Presiding Elder told in my presence that the said Denias Dawe was a brother of Edwin Dawe who burned the Deerfield parsonage.

Mrs. John Wesley, wife of the above, testified to the same conversation.

Rev. Wm. J. Campbell said: Was P. E. at the time of the burning of the parsonage at Deerfield. Said he told in the conversation referred to above that the said Denias Dawe was a brother of Edwin Dawe who was charged with burning the Deerfield parsonage. When I spoke about the charge he said he could prove that he was in [illegible] at the time.

At 11:30 an executive session was held apart from the jury, at which certain depositions were sought to be submitted by the defense, but for ten reasons they were withheld from the jury, which reasons were afterwards given to the jury.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 2 o'clock the conference again assembled, and the counsel for Mr. Denias Dawe withdrew the defense, saying that the exclusion of their depositions destroyed their defense.

Mr. Westerman, Denias and Edwin Dawe, then left the room followed by their friends, and the case then proceeded in a one-sided manner until 3 o'clock, when Mr. Clements gave his plea for the plaintiff, and the jury retired. After being out for about 15 minutes they submitted the following

VERDICT OF THE JURY.

After a patient hearing of the testimony, the Conference voted that the specifications under charge 1st. are fully proven, and that the specifications sustain the charge.

And that the specification under the 2nd. charge is fully proven and that the specification sustains the charge.

We therefore find Rev. Denias Dawe guilty of lying and fraudulently obtaining his ordination as deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Therefore, be it resolved, that Rev. Denias Dawe be, and is hereby expelled from the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

There must have been at least fifty residents of Deerfield in town, besides a number of citzens of Petersburg and Adrian, during the trial. Many bitter contests occurred during the progress of the case until the voluntary withdrawal of the defendant, after which the prosecution had things their own way.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMER'S CLUB.

The oyster supper on the evening of Feb. 10 at the residence of James Updyke, Jr. was a success, although the roads were muddy and it looked as if it might be a rainy evening. There was over 100 present to enjoy the supper which was such as farmer's wives understand how to get up for such occasions, so no description is necessary, but will say that all had a good time and wished that the club would do so again.

The committee on program reported the following for the next meeting at the residence of Mr. Chas. Mathews on the evening of Feb. 24.

CASSELL'S NATIONAL LIBRARY.

Cassell & Company, of New York, have commenced the publication of a series of weekly volumes with the above title. It is a literary enterprise unique in the annals of publishing. Each volume will contain about 200 pages, will be printed in good sized clear faced type, about four inches by six in size and will be sold at the remarkably low price of ten cents. How the book can be made for that price, much less sold at a profit, is a mystery. The series will represent all periods and forms of thought, and will embrace history, biography, fiction, plays, poems, natural history and science, art, political economy and whatever else may be worth lasting remembrance. The first three volumes have been issued and these give a good idea of what the series will be. No. one is an Italian sketch entitled "My Ten Year's Imprisonment," translated by Thomas Roscoe. No. two is Lord Byron's well known poem, Childe Harold. No. three is the auto biography of Benjamin Franklin. For choice reading at cheap rates we know of nothing that will compare with these volumes in the domain of modern literature.

A MASONIC PRESENTATION.

At the regular meeting of Tecumseh Lodge No. 69, F. & A. M., on Friday evening, Feb. 12th, after the usual business of the Lodge had been attended to, Dr. E. M. Conklin, who has been the W. M. for several years, arose in his place and informed the brethern that in a few weeks he should move to Kansas, and in so doing would sever his official connection with the Lodge. He spoke feelingly of the support he had received at their hands, and such kindness on their part as could not be forgotton. Under the head of "good of the order" the W. M. of Clinton Lodge, D. Woodward, addressed the brethern of No. 69, and in closing invited them to be present at a meeting of their Lodge to be held on Saturday evening, Feb. 13, when it was expected that the Grand Master would be present to assist in the work.

As the various members of the Masonic fraternity had procured a souvenir, from Messrs. Hough & Hosmer of Tecumseh, for the Doctor, indicating somewhat their love and esteem, consisting of a heavy gold chain and a key stone of the same material, handsomely engraved on the back, by whom given, number of the Lodge and the date, the attendance was large for it had been whispered about that the members had planned something of a surprise on the Master. Rev. Bro. J. M. Getchell was invited by those most interested to present the gift in the name of the donors.

Bro. Getchell's presentation remarks were most appropriate in matter, and delivered in a manner that touched the hearts of all present, and we regret that we cannot reproduce them verbatim.

The Doctor, during the remarks of Bro. Getchell, was deeply moved, and thanking the brethern for the gift which indicated something of their friendship and interest in his behalf, said he was unable to make such a reply in words as his heart inwardly felt.

Then the Lodge closed in due form and the members repaired to the refreshment room, where, when seated, Rev. Bro. Potter offered prayer and grace. The brethern then partook of the refreshments furnished by several of the brothers of No. 69. It was an evening in the Lodge long to be remembered.

As the doctor turned sadly away from the patient whom he found using Dr. Bulls Cough Syrup, he said: "It beats me every time."

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Village caucus on Saturday, Feb. 27th.

Will Ross returned from Dakota, last Friday.

The village election will take place on Monday, March 1st.

Don't fail to hear the music at the opera house to-morrow night.

There is talk of organizing a business men's association at Hudson.

Miss Dora Anthony returned from a visit at Auburn, Ind., last Saturday.

Geo. Smith, of Toledo, was in town last Friday. He is always welcome at the old home.

This is called the "dull season" in trade, but it is the best time to advertise, nevertheless.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Lester, of Lansing, spent Sunday with Mr. Lester's parents in Tecumseh.

An incendiary attempt was made last week to burn down Eaton Bros' old furniture factory at Hudson.

Ed. Cleveland, of Addison, was in town last Monday, having stopped over one train on his way to Adrian.

The Rochester lamp is the next thing to gas light. They give the best light of any oil burner yet introduced.

The mud gets deeper and deeper every day. The farmer's clubs should now tackle the question of graveling the highways.

Six candidates were baptised at the Baptist church, last Sunday evening, the fruits of the late successful revival meetings.

L. F. Wheeler's Rambles, which he presented at Clinton last week, were spoken of in flattering terms by the Clinton Local.

Mrs. E. P. Coder, of Norvell, spent three days last week with her Tecumseh friends. Her stay was much too brief to satisfy them all.

An unusual number of Methodist brethern were in town the first of the week, the occasion being the trial of Rev. Denias Dawe, of Deerfield.

Rev. J. M. Getchell has reason to feel much gratified over his large and growing congregations. The cause is flourishing under his ministrations.

Remember that Hunt's Orchestra furnishes the music for the party at the opera house to morrow night, and 15 cents will admit you to the gallery.

Farmers who are intending to build the wire picket fence, will save money by buying their pickets of J. L. Albaugh & Co. Call at the pump shop on Railroad street and see them.

John Hibbard left on the noon train Monday for Bay City, to attend the State Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows which is in session there this week. He will return probably on Saturday.

The U. S. Express Company's calendar is about the nobbiest one we have seen this year. It is arranged on the "perpetual" plan, is finely lithographed, easily adjusted and gives the rates for express money orders.

The Myrtle Club, lately organized by the young people of the Universalist church, was organized to raise funds to replenish the Sunday School library. A series of entertainments is in contemplation for that purpose.

We are in receipt of a pamphlet giving a brief account of the rise and progress of the Toledo Weekly Blade. It is a racy sketch, and contains much useful as well as interesting matter for both newspaper men and the general reader. The growth of the weekly Blade is one of the marvels of American journalism.

As the freight train on the L. S. & M. S. road was switching at this station last Friday morning one of the cars jumped the track and in trying to get it on again, it accidentally fell across the main track. The wrecking car was called from Adrian, and it was removed in time for the 7:30 passenger which was nearly due at that time.

A Social Party will be given at Exelby's Hall, in Britton, on Friday eve. Feb. 26. Music by Moore's full orchestra of Blissfield, consisting of seven pieces. Bill only $1.00, including oyster supper. The young men who have this party in charge will spare no pains to make it one of the best parties of the season. Give them a benefit.

Editor Smith, of the Record, arrived in town Monday noon, armed with a dozen new lead pencils and a quire of paper, to report the Dawe trial. The array of legal ministers and ministerial lawyers was too much for Smith's delicate nerves, and he left at five P. M., to catch the freight train, fearing that he might lose his overshoes if he staved over night. But the strangest part of this strange tale remains to be told. On Tuesday morning ye editor appeared ready for business again reinforced with a professional stenographer from Adrian, and the fact then leaked out that he failed to catch the freight, and "hung himself up" somewhere in Tecumseh over night. Would that the Salvation army might return to this burg for about forty eight hours.

C. A. Sharp went to Manchester last Tuesday.

Tod Zellars, of Jackson, was in town last Tuesday.

Wm. DeMott went to Lansing last Tuesday on business.

Miss Viola Zeluff spent last Sunday with friends in Hudson.

The village election will take place on Monday, March 1st.

Mrs. B. F. Reynolds is visiting her daughter in Detroit this week.

This Week—Paper Hangings and White Goods Sale commenced, see them.—W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

Edgar Tice represented the Herald at Adrian at the Dawe trial this week.

Miss Libbie Potter, of Devil's Lake, is the guest of Miss Ardell Potter of this place.

Ira J. Hagaman, a prominent citizen of Fairfield, and for several years supervisor of that town, died last Sunday.

Tecumseh feels quite "stuck up" this week. A genuine, gilt edged ecclesiastical trial has been on the program.

On last Tuesday morning a young lady arrived at the house of Mr. C. H. Gainsley, our popular dry goods man. Mother and daughter doing nicely.

Among the Deerfielders who were sojourning in Tecumseh the first of the week, was Willis Hood. He remained over until Wednesday to finish his visit.

D. W. Clark says that the man who visited his coal house back of his store last Tuesday evening, and so hurriedly left his basket, may have the same by calling at his store.

Dave. and Al. Macham are now settled in their new tonsorial rooms on the corner. They have convenient and elegant quarters, and will doubtless enjoy a good patronage.

E. J. Smith, of the Adrian Record, reports the proceedings of a church trial with as much earnestness and relish as he disposed of baked fish and ice cream at the Park Place Hotel last July.

The Dawe trial created quite a stir. Many spectators witnessed the proceedings. In addition to the reporters for the Adrian papers, the Detroit Tribune, Journal and Evening News had representatives here.

This will be the text for the morning sermon at the Universalist church next Sunday, Feb. 21, at 10:30: "A merry heart doeth good like medicine." Proverbs, XVII.22. In the evening at 7 o'clock, by request of the members of Tecumseh Lodge No. 14, I. O. O. F., the pastor will give a discourse on "The Life and Character of Schuyler Colfax." The public invited.

Geo. C. Bates, a former resident of Michigan and a pioneer of this state in the forties, died last week at Denver Col., aged 71 years. He came to Michigan in 1834 and was one of the leaders of the old whig party. He was an intimate personal friend of Clay and Webster, and Gen. Harrison. Many of the old settlers in this section will remember Mr. Bates well, and learn of his death with regret.

On last Saturday evening, the residence of Mr. John W. Dewey, in Cambridge wes the scene of a little valentine party. Brooklyn, Cambridge, Rome, Springville and Tecumseh were represented. It is needless to say that they all had a most enjoyable time, and only wished it was not Saturday night. Our wish is that Miss Anna may yet be able to witness many more valentine days and have as successful ones as the one just finished.

The concert given by the Nashville Students last Thursday evening, was well attended, and musically speaking, the audience was royally entertained. The members of the troupe are all beautiful singers, and the way they recited the old negro dialect songs was peculiarly fascinating. Nearly every selection was encored and some were repeated the second time. We bespeak for the troupe a hearty reception whenever they may visit Tecumseh.

The announcement last Tuesday evening, that Geo. W. Bain would give his great lecture, entitled "Boys and Girls—Nice and Naughty," drew out a full house. Mr. Bain is one of the finest lecturers that ever greeted Tecumseh and was well listened to by 500 people. The audience were held spell bound for one and one half hours. Some were seen in tears and the next moment were in a roar of merriment. The universal opinion after the lecture was that "It was the finest thing I ever heard; wish I could hear him again." The G. A. R. may congratulate themselves on being able to secure such a renowned person. We understand they cleared a neat little sum to help their good work along.

The Michigan Brick Tile and Drainage Association will hold their sixth annual meeting in Flint, on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 9 and 10. Reduced rates on the railroads and in the hotels. An extended program has been prepared for the occasion, but as it is quite lengthy we have not room for it entire. W. S. Comfort, of Tecumseh, is Secretary of the Association, to whom all letters of enquiry can be addressed.

The Three Widows Monday night.

To-day Closing out Blankets—come and see them. W. & S. W. Anderson

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Miller at the Opera House next Monday evening.

Mrs. Wm. H. Palmer, of Manchester, is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. B. F. Reynolds.

Mrs. Wilson's poem, read at Edmund Hall's Golden Wedding is unavoidably postponed till next week.

Go and hear The Three Widows at the Opera House next Monday evening. Popular prices—10, 20 and 30 cts.

Joe Gray was reported dying last Monday afternoon, but he has since rallied. His friends, however, have but little hopes of his recovery.

Twenty three pair of Blankets left—we will not carry them over—have marked down to prices which will close out the lot quick. W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

The members of Beer's Post G. A. R. desire to publicly thank the people of Tecumseh and vicinity for their liberal patronage last Tuesday evening on the occasion of Bain's lecture. The relief fund of the Post was handsomely replenished.

The A. O. Miller troupe will appear next Monday evening in their popular play entitled "The Three Widows, or Leap Year." The plot of the play is to show the troubles of a young man who, in spite of himself, becomes engaged to three young and charming widows. It it full of musical hits, laughable absurdities and situations and is sure to please. It is a first class comedy and it will be well played.

The funeral of Mrs. C. H. Adam was held yesterday afternoon at Adrian, and was conducted by Rev. Dr. Case, of the M. E. church. The remains were deposited in the receiving vault at Oakwood temporarily from whence they will be removed to the family lot of John J. Adam's in the Tecumseh cemetery. Mrs. Blanchard, of Chicago, came out to the funeral and is now at her father's.

Our Britton letter contains the announcement of the death of Mrs. Hattie Gifford. Mrs. Gifford was the proponent in the celebrated Solomon Smith will case, which has been through the Probate and Circuit Courts of this county, and is now pending in the Supreme Court on an appeal. The deceased leaves three children and her legal rights in the contested property will now revert to them.

Mrs. Chas. H. Adam, of Adrian died last Monday of quick consumption. The deceased was the wife of Charles Adam son of John J. Adam, of this village. Mr. Adam is the proprietor of the Sand Lake Hotel, where his family spends the summer, their winters being spent in Adrian where his wife's relatives live. Mrs. Adam was a most estimable woman, beloved by all who knew her. Charley will receive the sympathy of all in this sad affliction.

The Tecumseh progressive euchre club has adjourned for the season sine die. The last trump has been ordered up, and no more will the players "go it alone" with their partner's best. The members will now "pass" along about their usual vocations with an absent far a way look anxiously waiting for the next season. The last meeting was held Tuesday evening at the residence of Mrs. Geo. S. Tiffany where a pleasant time was enjoyed until a late hour, when the young men were treated to a surprise by the ladies who invited them over to "The Patterson" where a neatly printed menu was handed them and they were told to "order up" anything on the card, and the demise of the club was celebrated by numerous toasts and songs. The club has enjoyed a very pleasant and profitable winter and one long to be remembered by its members.

FLASHES BY THE C. T. LINE.

Wm. Thorp of Franklin, has rented his farm to Elijah Allen.

Social at M. D. Alexander's Friday afternoon and evening.

There are murmurs about kindling the fire under the political pot.

Hannibal Osborn of Franklin has sold 80 acres of his farm to his sons James and John and rented the balance. John has been a resident of Rome for the past two years.

The cards containing the list of offices and calls that the HERALD got out for the C. T. are O. K.

Raisin and Franklin are joined by telegraph, but we hear rumors of stronger tie which is soon to be celebrated—who will be manager of the new Co.

Mrs. D. C. Bowen of Newburg, who was quite sick last week is, we are glad to report, some better.

Newburg lyceum is to join with the Clinton lyceum, at Clinton, one week from to-morrow, (Friday) night. Question, Resolved "that Grant was the greatest of all generals." Newburg will champion Grant and Clinton some other general.

The Holloway boys are in a fair way to be connected with C. T. Line, and thereby have communication with Tecumseh. The arrangements have been perfected and the line will be built as soon as the poles can be set. Wake up Ridgeway and Macon.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

The Circuit Court now in session at Adrian is engaged on the civil calendar this week.

There have been four masquerades at Milan this winter and the season has just fairly begun.

F. H. Plunkett and Jesse Chamberlain are the new proprietors of the Central Hotel at Adrian.

Clinton Chapter R. A. M. received a visit from Grand Master Shoemaker of Jackson, last Saturday evening.

Mitchell's paper mill at Monroe is said to be haunted by a veritable ghost, and the workmen are scared about it.

Ex County Clerk Hunter has struck a business bonanza. He has been engaged as counsel for the Stephanoski's of Podunk.

Fadover informs us that Mrs. Fadover says—but hush; some one is listening, and we'll drop the subject till next week.

Prof. Bird, of the Blissfield School treats his class in physiology with practical illustrations with a hog's heart and liver.

Morenci manages to wiggle along with only six secret societies, but it has one of the best newspapers in Southern Michigan.

Adrian is bound to be ahead. The wheelbarrow factory of that city has shipped a large invoice of wheelbarrows to "Hold Hengland."

The editor of the Hudson Post takes straw on subscription. After receiving a few loads he won't care a straw whether school keeps or not.

The Rollin postoffice is still presided over by a Republican. No Democrat can be found in the village whose appetite craves that kind of diet.

The State Horticultural Society which met at Adrian last week was largely attended, and the sessions from first to last were full of interest.

At the state Grand Lodge of the Knights of Honor held at Ann Arbor last week, Henry C. Hall, the popular grocer of Hudson, was elected Grand Dictator.

Hon. J. K. Boies of Hudson, has resigned his office as Indian Commissioner. Mr. Boies has filled the place with much credit to himself and the service since 1881.

Addison is about to organize a fire department. This is a step in the right direction. It is always wiser to lock the barn door before the horse is stolen than afterwards.

The Hudson Post says that an old maid in Hillsdale county keeps a parrot which swears and a monkey which chews tobacco. Between the two she does not miss a husband.

The Gazette prints a list of seventy nine subscribers who have given bonus notes for the new railroad. But how much did they give? The nub of the story lies in this query.

John Thomson—Thomson without a p—was arrested in Adrian for stealing three skunk skins last week. There are a great many mean men in this world but the man who is mean enough to steal skunk skins is entitled to wear the belt.

You ask the proprietor of our knitting factory how he likes spring locks; nor do not blame a man for leaving his keys inside his rooms when he pulls his door shut from the outside and then has to do the ladder and window act to get in where his work is.—Clinton Local.

The Hudson office has received notice that after March 1st the Hudson and Waldron mail route will be increased to six trips a week, instead of three as now. The Waldron office receives more mail than any of the surrounding towns and is entitled to daily service.—Hudson Gazette.

The warm weather of the present week presents quite a contrast to that of the corresponding week in last year. At that time the railroads were at a standstill on account of snow storms, and the mercury wandered below zero every night. On the night of the 15th the thermometer registered 6° below.—Hudson Post.

A Hudson poultry dealer has shipped this season from Hudson 153,21 pounds of poultry, and from Blissfield 85,900 pounds making altogether 237,117 pounds. The above figures point to the slaughter of about 30,000 birds. The Stefanowskis who operate about Clinton, have furnished us with no figures as to the amount of their business, which is known to have been magnificent.—Adrian Record.

Recently Geo. D. Caswell, of Milan township, near Rome, missed a quantity of poultry. At Tecumseh he discovered his lost poultry in possession of a dealer and identified the same by private marks. The dealer informing him that the poultry had been purchased from one Benj. Austin also of Milan. Whereupon Caswell charged that Austin had stolen the poultry. Caswell has been arrested on charge of criminal libel, and the trial is set for next Monday before Justice Covell in this village. It is said that great excitement prevails throughout Egypt over the case.—Toledo Blade Reporter.

About fifty masons from Tecumseh, Clinton and Manchester went to Adrian yesterday afternoon to witness third degree work in the Adrian Lodge. The commodious Lodge room in the Masonic Temple was filled to overflowing and the visiting brethren were royally entertained. Many members of the fraternity were also present from other Lodges about the county.

Card of Thanks.

A sense of obligation and a feeling of deep gratitude impels us to tender our acknowledgements to the generous friends who administered so tenderly to our wants, shared in our grief, and sympathized with us so truly in our great affliction and bereavement, which deprived us of a beloved wife and fond mother.

That this token of gratitude may help to perpetuate in our minds the love and esteem we entertain for our friends is our sincere desire.

THE BEE-EATER.

A Migratory Bird Whose Food Consists of Bees, Wasps and Gnats.

There are several species of this little bird inhabiting most parts of the old world, and all distinguished by brilliant plumage. They are somewhat migratory in their habits, in winter seeking the warmer parts of the globe and in summer the temperate regions in search of food, which they take on the wing like the swallow. The food consists almost entirely of bees, wasps, gnats, etc. They will watch for them singly or in small parties perched upon some pleasant branch of a tree, from which they can see all around them, then fly out in the air in search of prey, returning frequently to the same branch.

The European bee-eater in its varied coloring and shape is not unlike the king fisher, with which it is nearly allied. It annually visits the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, appearing in flocks of twenty or thirty, skimming over the vineyards and olive plantations in pursuit of insects, especially of bees and wasps. And it is remarkable that these birds are never stung by them. As they seize the insect they at once crush it with their strong beak. Under the name of merops, of which family it is, Aristotle mentions it as very destructive to bees. It often watches [illegible] also at the mouths of wasps' nests.

One species is a native of the warmest parts of Europe, particularly among the Islands of the Grecian Archipelago and of many parts of both Asia and Africa, but in the north of Europe it is rarely seen. Next to the kollee and kingfisher, it is considered a beautiful bird. Its varied plumage is of a golden brown and pale yellow, more or less shaded with an admixture of red and bluish green, with sea-green beneath. From the corners of the bill on each side of the head a black streak passes across the eyes, curving downward and nearly meeting the tips of the crescent across the throat, separating the yellow of that part from the sea-green of the under parts. The tail, of a sea-green color, is about three inches long, the two middle feathers projecting in a pointed form some distance from the rest. The legs are short and of a reddish color.

The bee-wolf, or African bee-eater, is of still more brilliant plumage. Its back is of a deep-red color, verging to rose color underneath. The head, throat and portions of the tail are of bluish green, while the same black spot runs from the corners of the head to the ears. The tips of some of the longest feathers are also velvety black. It is about thirteen inches in length, and is an inhabitant of Eastern Africa.

The flesh of the bee-eaters is sufficiently esteemed to be sold in the markets of both Italy and Egypt. The boys of Candia, or Megalo-Kastro, one of the most populous cities of Crete, catch the bird in this manner: They bend a pin into a hook, and tying it by the head to a long thread, they thrust it through a locust, just as boys bait hooks with a fly, holding the other end of the strong light thread in their hand. The locust, so fastened, continues its flight, which the merops perceiving, pursues and catches, at the same time swallowing pin and all, when it is easily captured.

They rear their young in horizontal holes in the sandy banks of rivers. The entrance is usually small, extending to the depth of three or four feet into a cavity in which the parents can easily turn round. The eggs are white, from five to seven, and are laid on the ground or on moss or other soft material. When the young are partly fledged, but not yet able to fly, they crowd to the mouth of their hole, where they seem to enjoy the happy summer light and genial sunshine. But on the least alarm they hasten into their inner chamber, where they lie concealed until all is again quiet.

In the banks of the Don and Volga the excavations made by the flocks of bee-eaters are so numerous that the bank in many places resembles a honeycomb. Livingston describes the banks of the Leeba in South Africa as perforated in a similar manner. At morning and evening they frequently congregate in considerable numbers. Their flight is graceful and sustained, and their cry is loud, consisting though of pleasant whistling notes, mostly heard during the morning and evening.

Here we have another little creature formed by Divine wisdom to do its special work in lessening the vast number of insects which might, in those warm countries, become troublesome.—N. Y. Observer.

CATCHING EELS.

The Ingenious Method Pursued by an Ohio Official.

Eels in the lake, bay and river are assuming mighty proportions each succeeding year. One weighing nine pounds was brought to one of the Toledo fish houses last fall. Many others of smaller size were caught, and were readily purchased by people who come from the Sandusky [illegible] for them. The larger eels are supposed to come from the St. Lawrence. The smaller ones are of those deposited in the river, bay and lake by Mr. D. Y. Howell in June and July, 1882, while superintendent of the Ohio fish hatcheries. This gentleman made a study of the habits, growth, etc., of the eel and concluded that it would thrive well in Western waters. He accordingly started for Troy, N. Y., where millions of young eels make their way up the Hudson. When he reached Troy he found superintendents from Wisconsin, Illinois and several other States endeavoring to get a supply of eels for their respective localities. They found the process of capturing eels quite slow and tedious, and willingly paid boys a cent apiece for each eel furnished them. Mr. Howell saw that to get eels in the way named would not answer. He therefore went down along the bank of the river and sat down under a shade tree. In the river near by was a large willow limb. He carefully watched the small eels as they passed along, and saw that they would stop and cling to the limb to rest, and then shoot away up the stream. The fact that they rested on some object when

Harper's Bazar

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is the only paper in the world that combines the choicest literature and the finest art illustrations with the latest fashions and most useful household information. Its weekly illustrations give the styles of the newest Paris and New York styles, with its useful patterns, supplements and cut patterns, by enabling ladies to be their own dressmakers, save many times the cost of subscription. Its papers on cooking, the management of servants, and housekeeping in its various details are eminently practical. Much attention is given to the interesting topic of social etiquette, and its illustrations of art needlework are acknowledged to be unequalled. Its literary merit is of the highest excellence, and the unique character of its humorous pictures has won for it the name of American Punch.

RAPHAEL'S MASTERPIECES.

England and Germany Contending for the Purchase of a Painting.

The recent purchase of Raphael's miniature painting "The Three Graces" by the Duke of Abercorn for the unprecedented sum of $[illegible], has naturally given a boom to the other works of the famous master. But unfortunately for the wishes of speculators, there are very few of Raphael's paintings in the possession of private individuals. They have been gradually gathered into public museums and galleries, and now even in the rarely possible case of $2,500,000 being offered for one, who would prompt upon possessing to part with them? Prof. Louis Pesch, of Leipzig, at present offers for sale to the Royal Museum of Berlin a Madonna, the authenticity of which is doubtful, however, and which, if it is only discovered at a profit, [illegible] still more recent discovery has brought to light a curious portrait of Raphael, painted by himself, and which has been hitherto unknown. The author was in his sixteenth year when he transmitted his own features to the canvas, and was following the course of Vanucci at Perugia at that time. This curious miniature exhibits the features of Raphael in profile. The head is turned to the right, and on the left side stands a palace in plain style, on the fronton of which is the word Urb, and the number 1497 in Roman figures. Toward the center is a graceful little temple, closely resembling that at the back of the Sposalizio, or "Marriage of the Virgin," so greatly admired by every amateur who visits Milan. This very youthful work is signed: "Io Raph. Sa." The signature is quite plain. The discovery has produced a great sensation in the art circles of Italy, as all the early paintings of the great master have been lost or destroyed, and this is the only one that has escaped the ravages of time and men.

But the most important of all the works of Raphael that has not as yet found its way into public collections is undoubtedly the great picture known as the "Madonna della Regina di Napoli," at present deposited in the National Gallery of London, and which the Prussian Government is making every effort to secure. The negotiations have not thus far been brought to a successful issue, as the sum demanded is exorbitant, and the eyes of the artistic world are turned on this great art treasure, which belonged to the court of Naples. It was purchased at Rome about the close of the last century by the King of the Two Sicilies. It was at that time in the Colonna palace, and it so aroused the King's admiration that he purchased it on the spot. Since then it has graced the Royal palace at Naples, where on one occasion it suffered some damage by fire, and narrowly escaped destruction. The few cracks in the canvas were repaired by the best artists, and few traces of the damage now remain. This Madonna was painted by Raphael in 1505 by order of the religious St. Anthony, of Perugia, who laid down the rules the artist was to follow. The Madonna is seated on a throne and enveloped in a blue flowing mantle, studded with golden stars. The infant Jesus reposes on her bosom, with his tiny hand raised in benediction over the child St. John, who is before him in adoration. Sts. Peter and Paul are standing at the sides of the throng, the former with his keys and the latter with his sword pointing toward the ground. Sts. Catherine and Dorothy, with the martyr palm in their hands, appear at a little distance. The perspective ends in a landscape.

These figures are all, female, and the painting itself is nearly seven feet square. It is one of Raphael's masterpieces, and was executed when the artist was in the full flush of his genius. It exhibits more striking than any of his other works the union of the old style with the new development of art. The disposition of the figures is that of the ancient masters, but the types are not so ascetic and are more human. Sts. Peter and Paul represent the ideal apostle, whose most perfect incarnation is found in the great master's St. Cecilia. The general effect is a trifle somber, notwithstanding the warmth of the tones and the clearness of the skin. The semicircle directly above the group is occupied by the Eternal Father, holding a globe in the left hand, with the right raised in benediction. A number of adoring angels are around him. The fire at Naples injured only the two figures, Sts. Catherine and Dorothy, and the others are as perfect as when in 1505 they received the final touches from the immortal master. The two infants are described as ravishingly beautiful.

This great work, which is the last of Raphael's large paintings that is not already national property, is the subject of eager competition between the Germans and the English. The German press with unanimous insistance calls on the Government to purchase it before the English will have secured it. It is certainly the last chance of its kind that will be offered. The national museums that possess all the great paintings of Raphael will doubtless never dispose of them, and the Madonna now on exhibition at the National Gallery of London is the last work of large dimensions that will ever be offered for sale. Two hundred thousand dollars was the price asked for this chef d'œuvre some time ago, but the enormous sum recently paid for the miniature "The Three Graces" will lessen enormously its value in the eyes of its possessors. If sold at a like proportion, according to space it would be worth nearly $1,500,000. Even the most ardent of Raphael's admirers would probably stagger before such a figure.—Paris Cor. N. Y. World.

CURIOUS NAMES.

A Clergyman's Chat Concerning Remarkable Given Names.

"What a name that young man has," said a clergyman yesterday to a News-gatherer as the person indicated left his presence.

"What is it?"

"P. P. Paxton he writes it. Nothing remarkable about the name, but what sounds of hard thought is concealed in those initials. The man was born on January 8, 1868, and his parents named him Propitiation Propagation Paxton, so that, if the prayers of the Presbyterian church were answered, he would be a good man.

"Yes, but there are other names with which children are christened. One boy I remember, Persevance Jones, I endeavored to dissuade the father from the name, but he said the mother was called patience, and he saw no reason why the boy should not be called Perseverance. The poor fellow went together. Within a few paces of the grave of Benjamin and Deborah Franklin, in the old cemetery at Fifth and Arch streets, there is a headstone bearing the inscription: 'Sacred to the memory of S. L. U. Lloyd.' If the owner of that name were living now his friends would probably call him 'Celoloid.' I had a colored man named Alexander doing some work around here once. I [illegible] him 'Trib' and 'Hole,' and it struck me one day to ask him what his name was.

"'Tribulation Wholesome Alexander, sah,' he replied.

"'It may have been some relative of his who came to me with twins to have baptized.'

"'What name will you call them?' I asked.

"'Cherubim' and 'Seraphim,' replied the mother.

"'Why?' I asked, in astonishment.

"'Because,' she replied, 'de preacher book says 'de cherubim and seraphim continually do cry,' and dese yere chil'en do nothin' else.'"

The News-gatherer edged toward the door, and, when he had got in the lobby, shouted "checkmate," and skipped down stairs.—Philadelphia News.

HARD ON MOSE.

A Commercial Transaction in Which Mr. Schaumburg Is the Loser.

Mose Schaumburg, of Austin, is up to all the tricks of trade, and was in the habit of playing it pretty sharp, not only on his customers but also on the firm of Schwindelmeyer & Co., from whom he purchases his goods in New York.

Schaumburg, on receiving an invoice of goods, was in the habit of deducting several yards from every piece of goods he received. He claimed shortage on every piece of goods, even when the piece contained full measure or even a surplusage.

Schwindelmeyer & Co., of New York, suffered a great deal from this system of stealing, but rather than lose Schaumburg's trade they allowed him the shortage, until it became such a regular thing that they resolved to play for even, even if they did lose his trade.

Schaumburg ordered a big bill of dry goods. The New York firm cut each and every piece of goods in two, kept one-half, sent the bill for the full number of yards ordered, but kept the goods back.

In due time Schaumburg received the bill, and expecting the goods would arrive in a day or so, acknowledge the receipt of the goods and sent on a check for the amount, deducting as usual several yards shortage on each piece. As soon as the New York merchant got this reply he shipped the goods and admitted the deduction for shortage as just and proper.

Imagine the astonishment of Mose on opening the goods to find what each piece lacked half the number of yards it should contain. As he had already claimed several yards shortage on each piece and as the New York firm had allowed it, the only thing for Mose to do was to keep quiet about it.

It is needless to add that he deals no longer with Schwindelmeyer & Co., of New York.—Texas Siftings.

A SOFT THING.

Why a San Francisco Dude Gave the Mitten to One Girl.

Clarence Harris is a San Francisco dude who takes periodical trips into San Joaquin County to visit a rich farmer's daughter. The girl don't care a straw for him, but tolerates his visits because some of the neighbors' girls are envious. Last week Clarence, in all the splendor of a new suit, hied himself to his divinity's home and proceeded to make himself agreeable. They walked about the farm for an hour or so, and returned to the house. Clarence sat down on a bench outside the kitchen door to smoke a cigarette, while the girl went in to ask her mother. He saw the inevitable small brother grinning at him. Now, Clarence don't like to be grinned at, and he angrily asked: "I say, boy, what are you grinning at? Do you see anything green?"

"He, he, he! Anything green! Ha, ha, ha! You be—sittin' on one o' mother's squash pies."

When the girl came out she wondered where Clarence went. She has got a beau inside.—Chicago Mail.

One of the officers of the British forces in Burmah concludes that stomach-ache is a widely prevalent malady in that region. At Kooplah he found an idol which effects a miraculous cure when the sufferer plasters a flake of gold leaf upon the part corresponding to the seat of his own disorder, and the abdomen of the idol has been caused to protrude in a most extraordinary degree by the plastered offerings of health seekers.

—The pecan tree in the United States grows wild in Louisiana, Texas and Indian Territory. The nuts grown in Louisiana rank the first in quality. These nuts are shipped to all parts of the United States and into Canada. There is no European market for them. The trees grow from sixty to seventy feet in height, sometimes higher. They yield a heavy and durable wood.

"THE" DECORATOR AND FURNISHER for FEBRUARY contains a great number of particularly rich and useful designs, in fact, the important value of the designs generally given in this magazine is one of its best features. In this month there is a well written article on the Hayes Mansion, Lexington, Mass., profusely illustrated; there are two pages of Celtic and Russian ornamentation designs for chandelier and brackets suited to a bedroom; a plain and a set of fine dining room furniture; recently made an article upon sanitary insulating and a variety of other matter and illustrations both interesting and instructive. Sent 25 cents for sample copy. It is published at 740 and 742 Broadway, New York.

Mr. Geo. V. Wallace, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters and [illegible] proved that she is able to do her own work. Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. From a Sense of Duty.

Some people shrink from making public the benefit they have received, while others are free to tell it abroad for the good of fellow mortals. Of this kind is Mr. J. H. Coppuck, of Mount Holly, N. J., who writes, "I am one of the many who give their cheerful appreciation of the merits of the efficacy of your valuable Brown's Iron Bitters, from a sense of duty. This bitters is doing much good in our county, for which I can vouch."

A Very Narrow Escape.

"Yes, I had a very narrow escape," said a prominent citizen to a friend. "I was confined to my bed for a year and my friends gave me up for a consumptive's grave, until I began using Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, and here I am, sound and hearty." You will find it for sale by Baker & Hall. Price 50c. and $1.

The Impending Danger.

The recent statistics of the number of deaths show that a large majority die with consumption. The most practical, common-sense talks on sheep husbandry, we ever read, are published in "Notes from the Rural's Western New York Farm" now being published in the Rural New Yorker. And, by the way, that journal is a model in everything, and should be in every farm house in America. It is finely illustrated, fair, fearless and right; and he who reads and follows its teachings, must take high rank in his farming. Have you seen it? If not, send for a copy, which if you mention this paper, will be sent you free of cost.

MINT EMPLOYES.

Suddenly Speaking.

Anna Dickinson was the greatest [illegible] ever employed in the mint of late years, said an old employe of that institution to a reporter. "But," he continued, "there was a dumb girl here before the war who could talk with the nimbleness of a woman's tongue on the face of the earth.

"The old employe was in a reminiscent mood. He said: "The name of the dumb girl was Rebecca Davis. She was a really beautiful brunette and was [illegible] of a [illegible] most pleasing woman. She was employed in the mint in 1859, 60 or 61. Suddenly she was struck down by all [illegible] Her sister, a Mrs. Langhorne, keeper well known [illegible] in those days, on [illegible] Langhorne, where [illegible] Rebecca was not dead. You could talk to her [illegible] she talked back with the heart. A expressive [illegible] on her face. She was [illegible] years of age when she was first employed. [illegible] gradually [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] Washington [illegible] Langhorne [illegible] Rebecca [illegible] around to the girl never to see and exclaimed hastily: 'Oh! I believe I can speak.' Her connection to speak she [illegible] astonishment [illegible] coming [illegible] the other [illegible] left the places and ran to the assistance of the two [illegible] girls. Becky began to scold like a magpie and almost fainted herself. Her speech had come to her so suddenly that she could not control it [illegible] more than for a [illegible] minutes to wait [illegible] and [illegible] years. She remained in the mint some years after that and her case attracted the attention of the [illegible] media [illegible] day. It seems was a Roman Catholic [illegible] region, and in 1866 she entered a convent near this city. I do not know whether she is living yet or not, but she [illegible] astonished the girls on that day."

"Anna Dickinson was employed here during the war. She could talk [illegible] subject and gossip with anybody. Her political discussions with the other employes made [illegible] were numerous and led to frequent reports against her. Somebody went to Director Pollock about her demonstrations. He expostulated with her and finally dismissed her. Some [illegible] afterward, which she became famous as a lecturer, she came here and spoke to a large audience at the Academy of Music. Her friend, Judge Kelley, was to introduce her to the audience, but he had not arrived and the audience was growing impatient. There were several distinguished gentlemen on the stage, one of whom was ex-Governor Pollock. He was [illegible] upon to introduce the lecturer, [illegible] employe in the mint, which he did in an eloquent manner. When he had [illegible] Miss Anna looked daggers at him and did not stir from her seat. Judge Kelley came in a few minutes afterward, and she was again presented to the audience. So you see she got even with Mr. Pollock for dismissing her by publicly mortifying him. She was a great girl, and she [illegible] a whip.

"There goes a person who has been here longer than I have," said the veteran, as he pointed toward a clerk of about 52 years of age, [illegible] Immaculate [illegible] of [illegible] beauty and [illegible] figure was [illegible] only and [illegible] She came here [illegible] as an [illegible] girl. [illegible] During the time of her employment she was married to a gentleman a few moments before he died, who had contracted for her some years. She [illegible] Mint, and knew more about the business than all the [illegible] put together."—Philadelphia Times.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

J. F. Asner is spending a few days at Hudson and Hillsdale.

Alfred Lawton was attending to business again Monday.

John Pattison is staying on the farm for a short time. He wants to let his farm for money rent, a good chance for some one.

Will Barrett has secured the state right of a patent process for reproducing portraits from photographs. He will soon open rooms here and begin business. Some work already done by him is very good indeed.

The next monthly meeting of the W. F. M. Society will be held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson next week Wednesday afternoon. She wants a house full.

Our French student who has been so persevering in his studies in the past, is all broken up and has gone to get sweet counsel from Jackson and take a few lessons from the Martin (&) gal (e).

A certain shoe-maker in an adjoining town clears his chimney of soot by placing powder in the stove pipe hole in the chimney and touching it off, then by holding a board over the hole, blows the soot out of the top of the chimney. His recent, and probably last attempt proved that the board was too slow in getting around for the frisky powder, emptied the chimney in the old man's face making him appear for all the world like a genuine chimney sweep.

At the special school meeting Monday night the building committee reported plans for the new school house which met with almost unanimous approval, there being but two dissenting votes.

The plan is for a one story, two room, brick building, with entrance and halls in front, and will make an attractive building.

A painful accident occurred to Geo. S. Boss last week. While washing, early in the morning, he became dizzy, falling heavily upon the floor in the sitting room, fracturing his left hip so badly that it is not likely he will ever be able to walk again. Eleven years ago he fell from a wagon injuring his right hip in much the same way but not so severely. Much sympathy is expressed on account of his misfortune.

The meeting of the literary society next Friday evening, for the purpose of reorganizing, will open with a debate on the question, "Resolved that steam is more beneficial to mankind than electricity." Regular meetings of the society will now be held for the next three months, they having been suspended lately on account of special meetings at the church.

The HERALD correspondent being away this week there is a general desire among his good friends to get even with him—"while the old cat is away the kittens play." We are asked to mention some of his peculiar traits, such as taking a circuitous route to Hillsdale, via. Riga, always buying a return ticket; preferring to purchase a diamond ring in Ohio rather than Michigan; the chalging of his countenance to a crimson hue when asked to show the picture in his watch charm; so willing to be the only rooster at a hen party; choosing to do his courting in Riga rather than at the county seat, so sure to take observations about the moon, to mention how a young lady got both rubbers on one foot, to report how the undertaker made a mish in the dark, etc., and yet say nothing about how he got left at his new year party. We laugh this week, but what of the future.

Mrs. Louisa and Martha Peabody of Ionia C. T. visited Mrs. Geo. and Susan Clark, last week.

Wm. H. Arter went to Adrian last Wednesday night to assist in a masonic degree.

The little folks gave master Bertie Cadmus a surprise one night last week, and enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

Harper's Magazine for March opens with a graphic description of Krupp's gun making establishment at Essen, by Moncure D. Conway, effectively and amply illustrated. The subject is one of exceptional interest because this is the largest manufacturing establishment under private management in the world, employing over 20,000 men and owning 74 mines, because of the social features connected with Krupp's provision for the comfort of his workmen and for the education of their children, and because the attention of all nations is now especially directed to the manufacture of heavy ordnance.

A New American sewing machine can be bought at a very low figure by calling it this office. It has never been used except for trial.

Mrs. Sotts [illegible] who [illegible] sick, is now up and [illegible]

We noticed the genial face of Joseph Holloway about town this morning.

Byron Bogel is at home again and smiling at the girls from behind the counter, after a sojourn with Prof. Evans of Adrian.

We understand that our blacksmith Wm. Weith, is going to take up his abode in Manchester, and that some party from Tecumseh is to occupy the shop which he vacates.

A valuable young mare belonging to James Lane had the misfortune a short time ago to get an eye knocked out, which causeth James to feel considerably sick. Just how the thing happened is enveloped in a mystery.

Mrs. W. J. Holdridge is staying at Ridgeway taking care of Mr. Boss.

Horace Macham passed the Sabbath with his Bro. A. D. He is attending Evans commercial school this winter.

Geo. Sherman and Chas. O'Dell have bought Joe Westgate's meat market in Blissfield, taking possession last Monday. We hope the boys will succeed in their undertakings. We might suggest that they get our old friend Scotty to give them a few lessons in buying.

There is lots of talk about telegraphic communication with Tecumseh, but we don't see the poles sticking out of the ground yet.

Written upon the Occasion of the Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hall.

Dear relatives and friends
What thoughts crowd in upon
As our minds wander back
Through fifty years of time

To the time when this brave couple
Launched their barge upon the tide
Of the matrimonial sea
Stanch, young, good and happy

No superfluous courtship,
But a well matured course
They each took each for the more
For better or for worse

Through toil and much privation,
They sought a home to make,
In the dense unbroken forest
Of this western frontier state

Here they reared their sons and daughters,
Precious addition to their care,
In a manner so befitting
That much honor they share

TIPTON TOPICS

Under the auspices of the Franklin Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Miss Frank Baker, of Morenci, will deliver a lecture on "Missionary Work" at the Methodist church Wednesday evening, March 3. Miss Baker has a large number of views which add greatly to her interesting lecture. We hope the people will show her by a full house, their appreciation of her efforts. An admittance of five cents will be charged to defray expenses.

Notwithstanding that the roads are almost impassable, canvassing agents seem to have good courage about getting around. Possibly they take advantage of the "rough times" for finding people at home.

Rev. A. B. Storms, preached last Tuesday evening to a large and attentive audience at Evans' Lake school house.

We have been favored with a sight of land show lately. Your correspondent did not attend but heard wonderful reports of people standing in mud, etc. The people of Franklin did not seem to appreciate it enough to give a respectable audience.

The cup social held last week Tuesday night was quite a success. Over one hundred cups were disposed of. We hear rumors of a saucer social for the near future where people having cups can obtain saucers.

The bicycle club of this place, have converted Hayden's warehouse into a hall, and by the aid of lanterns, to guide their wheels, pass many happy evenings. We refrain from mentioning any falls.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

[illegible] the [illegible] that is with us at present, orange blossoms are expected to appear in this immediate vicinity very soon.

Miss Millie Swift of Genawee Junction was visiting friends in Franklin last week.

Clyde Holden will close a very successful term of school this week with appropriate exercises.

The question "Which is the most beneficial, religion or money," was decided in the affirmative at the last meeting of the literary society.

Willie Wright and Mrs. Ellie Stutt are on the sick list.

Mrs. J. W. Stutt and Mrs. Spade and a few especial friends met at R. W. Mills on Saturday evening of last week and gave them a very pleasant surprise, the event being to celebrate the 20th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Mills wedded life. Many beautiful and useful presents were left as tokens of the occasion.

Mrs. Taylor, mother of Mrs. B. B. Hines, died Sunday evening, after a long and painful illness. The funeral was held Tuesday at the North Rome church.

It seems to be a great time for orange blossoms here just now. Report says Fred Morton has been over to Rome and brought back a wife, also that George B. Onsted was married on Monday, to a Miss Lapham, of Rome. Before this appears in print, Dr. G. W. Ross and Miss Etta Stevens will have been married as their cards say Wednesday evening, Feb. 24th. We expect at least one more to report next week.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

While Ransom Mills and family were visiting at his fathers on Saturday the 13th inst., his house was broken into by a party of about forty and ransacked from top to bottom for silver ware, dishes and table linen. When Mr. Mills returned about seven o'clock they were somewhat surprised to find their yard full of vehicles of all sorts and kinds and his house full of their relatives and friends. They were soon decorated with orange blossoms it being their twentieth anniversary. The company had brought an excellent supper and some very nice presents among them being a silver butter dish, pickle castor and sugar spoon. They had arranged a very entertaining program, opening with the song "Twenty Years Ago." After supper the wedding of Ransom and Delia was well rendered by one of the company after which they had a wedding followed by a piece of poetry written by Mrs. J. W. Stutt, followed by more singing. About twelve o'clock the crowd dispersed to the music and many congratulations and good wishes.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

On Wednesday, Feb. 17th, 1886, the twentieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Avery, a number of their neighbors and friends came into their home, including them in a very agreeable pleasant way, that the day of twenty years ago had that long passed.

The following was the program: A beautiful set of dishes by L. H. Hayes and wife, L. A. Hayes and wife, S. Knuth and wife, C. A. Knuth and wife, A. L. Knuth and wife and Mr. Carpenter and wife.

A cake basket and fruit stand by F. E. Morrell and wife, set of cups and saucers, sugar bowl, cream pitcher and spoon by Richard Adams, bread and milk set by H. C. Bancroft and wife, fruit basket by Elick Knuth, water pitcher, sugar bowl and cream pitcher by John Zeed and wife, paper holder by Charles Dutton and wife. Presentations made by the aforementioned Mr. Avery, after which the company partook of a bountiful supper, wishing that the union of life that now exists in this pleasant home may continue until that golden wedding day would dawn upon them, with [illegible] in the [illegible] years to come.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Thomas Gray, of Dundee, Monroe Co. is visiting friends and old neighbors in this vicinity. Mr. Gray was one of the early pioneers of this township. He served the people in the capacity of supervisor, way back in the forties and fifties when Whig and Democrat polled for spoils. He was also elected to the legislature in those days where he pushed a bill through facilitating the assessing of non tax paying capitalists. He is now quite an extensive land owner at Douglas and makes it a point to clear off stump fence and sow to wheat 100 acres yearly. He is also engaged in fruit culture, having in connection therewith a [illegible] peach orchard, which being located near the Southern shore of Lake Michigan is shielded from severe freezing by induction from the large body of water.

John Palmer went to Buffalo with a [illegible] of Be[illegible] last Wednesday.

We shall be [illegible] with the Clinton [illegible] next week.

The election of Manchester [illegible] organized the delegation of Masons to Adrian last week from this place.

The ladies of St. John's Church will give a social entertainment at Town Hall Tuesday evening, March 9th.

A letter from A. W. Spafford states that he is delighted with Wisconsin [illegible] but he is not [illegible] now.

We are glad to learn that E. W. Pease has so far recovered as to be able to be upon the street, but is hardly able yet to attend the store yet.

Mrs. George Hodges of Tecumseh was in town last Friday and Saturday in response to a message from her father, Grace Spafford, that her mother was quite sick.

We understand a party of eight or ten men are at work assisting Mr. Perry to build levees on the John Smith farm, near the south-eastern part of the village.

Richmond, Hogan & Cobb shipped a car load of cattle to Buffalo last Friday, and one of the parties informed us that no less than three cars would accommodate their shipments for this week.

I. Watkins of Watkins station, on the L. H. & L. Railway, was in town last Friday with a car load of valuable horses that he had purchased in Ohio, and was transporting to his home as above.

A general invitation is extended to all to visit E. Olympia in Bridgewater, Wednesday, March 3, and while the happy hours away with the ladies home and foreign missionary society of the M. E. Church.

Our fellow townsman, Eli Van Ness Mark, has been down to view the sights at the capital on the Potomac, and thinks were he appointed street commissioner, he could improve some little places for a drive in Clinton.

Rev. J. A. Barnes will endeavor to give an outline of the lecture delivered at Tecumseh last week by Geo. W. Bain, on the next Sabbath evening at the Congregational Church, and as the lecture was pronounced against effort by those that heard it, we may expect an interesting epitome from the Congregational pulpit next Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. Congdon have left Burton, of Tecumseh, leave for Monday, Feb. 22nd for Wilmella, Kansas. Local. The doctor was up to see us and we had quite a chat with him on that evening at a late hour. Wonder if the loss at the hotel in the Local is liable to get "in motion" when under a full-rock pressure. We are not at all uneasy because of our patronage to markets that are away from the little green shop.

Tuesday evening, March 2, will be noticeable as the approaching time when the citizens of Clinton and vicinity may profitably use of the best lectures on northern China that it has ever been their pleasure to listen to, and at the moderate sum of five cents. The lecturer, Miss Ellen Baker, enjoys a reputation that grades her with the finest speakers in the Wolverine state, and has an outfit of stereopticon views that aids in explaining the sights behold, and makes the entertainment of great interest to both old and young, and it is hoped she may receive the full house that she merely merits. There will also be ice cream and cake served in the lower rooms of the church, at 10 cents.

Everyone should bear in mind the masquerade to take place at Town Hall, next Friday evening, Feb. [illegible] good time and it is supposed that such will be the case, as what the committee undertake they carry out to a letter, as the previous parties have fully attested. The costumer will be at Stamark's Hall, and costumes may be procured at reasonable figures, after 1 o'clock P. M. The supper has been given into the supervision of E. Seamark, and those who have sampled the skill of Ed. at the parties that have been given at the hall, will bear us out in the assertion that all who partake will enjoy a treat of rare occurrence, for Ed. with his corps of assistants can do the matter of a good supper up too soon."

J. L. Kishpaugh returned from the [illegible] last week with premiums on his choice poultry that he had on exhibition there.

It is [illegible] that the ladies of the Baptist society are to have an interesting and [illegible] Relief [illegible] to commence to-morrow [illegible] the attractive [illegible] We have [illegible] through [illegible] the [illegible] are [illegible] and [illegible] there.

[illegible] Saturday, March 6th, [illegible] Clinton [illegible] Hall [illegible] Friday evening, as was anticipated, drew a [illegible] house, [illegible] able to gain admittance notwithstanding a severe north-west wind and snow was the prevailing outdoor greeting. The financial success more than met the expectations, the music [illegible] The [illegible] were all good, and every one was satisfied to the entire satisfaction of the management, and the money donated for refreshments has been so great that the committee have kindly assented to the demand and will give a like entertainment, but with entire change of programme, on the 19th of next month, when the prices will be, adults 15 cents, children, 10 cents. The receipts of this undertaking were a little more than $100, which certainly shows that the effort was appreciated by the moral inclined community, and that they deem the parsonage a benefit to the place, and are willing to help defray the expense attending its erection.

Living Monuments.

The Clinton Local, after taking the space of two weeks to look over the article published in the Herald, in response to a thrust from itself against the first named paper for attending to its own business, has finally through its "enterprising end" belittled itself enough to abjure the kindness bestowed upon those who had always taken pains to befriend them as well, and stoop to the meanness to apply the audacious epithet to those, who have catered to the wants of the people so long in this vicinity—of "old cranks" who ought to live in Tecumseh. This cast off, purely slimy billingsgate, elected for no other reason than to bring upon those who have served the people until the silvery threads of veneration have marked them, its denomination, facetious, is beneath the name let given to the publishers of a journal of such vastness, and we are sorry that the eminent manager of a "publishing house" patronized only by Harpers and possibly one or two others, has so far forgotten himself and his views to the group cause as to have become uncharitable, and adopted the slang words of the present day. It is not the cause of the appellation but because of its entire unaptness. When he named us "cranks" we accepted, and applied ourselves as faithfully as our well-wishes for our neighbors would allow, to the duties properly belonging to this end of a journal that reaches nearly double the readers that the combined Manchester end and Clinton end of the Clinton-Manchester concern do. But when he chooses, after so kindly connecting us by attachment with the Herald, to advise us to still further change our name to "crank" we are obliged to demur, for, as the uneasiness of the Local has plainly shown, we have been of some use, if for nothing more, certainly to call upon the overstocked brain-producing granary of the north-end, to supply some quenching power, to the fever, and did we choose to accept this last mark of cleverly conceived gratitude, we would be of no considerable use to the establishment which we represent coldly, as it has no use for cranks but runs wholly by steam power, has no presses or other machinery to which we could be adapted. It was suggested by one Miles that we come to Clinton, and being of an accommodating make-up we came and we have nothing to regret on that score, and have no desire to return to Tecumseh. If that enterprising town does think we ought to be there. We have a friend in Tecumseh and have two of them here. We would be glad to please the dictators as to where we shall reside, were we not aware that this is a free country, and we are allowed to determine for ourselves, in contradiction to his wish and that of others. The Local is building up in numerable, living monuments when it blows its venom at the "old cranks," that will be a lasting mark of that truthful sheet, long after the demise of its energetic managers, and we wish it the success it merits for we owe our enemies

David Hamilton, of Detroit, was in town yesterday, the guest of C. G. Brownell, president of the Woolen Mill.

Parties from Norvell and Bellevue, were present and took prominent parts in the entertainment at the Hall last Friday evening.

Grace Spafford went to Tecumseh Saturday and Monday to assist at the telephone office. Ella May having sprained her ankle last Friday evening quite badly, but we are glad to learn she was able to be at the office again on Monday.

Our citizens have a high treat in prospect. We are informed that the world famed Jubilee Singers from Fisk University, will visit Clinton March 6th. This is the original company and without doubt the strongest and best company in existence.

The Blue Ribbon meeting on Sunday was the recipient of a very fair audience for the severe weather that prevailed. Those that were to furnish the entertaining portion, with very few exceptions, failed to put in an appearance and the program was but meagerly sustained, but was good as far as rendered. We do not approve of the disappointments upon these occasions. If there is any doubt as to ability to serve in such cases, it should be understood at the outset, that other arrangements may be made, and those who venture out during such weather may be met with disappointment.

Prominent People Who Drop Dead, and What it Means.

Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt while talking with President Garfield suddenly dropped dead. Vice President Hendricks took a severe cold, and in a day's time was no more. General McClellan after his arrive in a cold wind sank in his chair and breathed his last. These are a few of the most prominent cases of sudden death, thousands of which are occurring constantly. Doctor usually shake their heads and say "Heart disease" or "apoplexy." Not one case in ten is so caused. We go back of all this and find the cause, which is invariably—Rheumatism. This disease has usually been considered painful but not dangerous, whereas it is one of the most dangerous of all afflictions. It is caused by morbid humors in the blood, and if it flies to the heart the sufferer dies instantly. Suppose, for example, a person takes cold which becomes painful in the shoulder, limbs or around some joint. And suppose the cold is driven from that locality, where does it go? To some other part of the body, possibly the head, possibly the heart. What is the result? Death. It is dangerous to try and drive rheumatism. It is a blood disease and can only be fought in the blood while its dangerous nature makes it an exceedingly serious subject. Unquestionably the most efficient means for driving these morbid humors, acids and rheums from the body now known to the world is Hubbard's Rheumatic Syrup. It is an original discovery which aims directly for the blood and is taken into the circulation within ten minutes from the time it is used. It dissolves the poisonous acids, counteracts the deadly humors and expels all rheums from the circulation. Mr. George W. Kennedy, Secretary of the Electric Light Co., of Jackson, Mich., after going through a severe experience which greatly afflicted him and endangered his life, was completely restored by the use of this remedy and in speaking of it he said, "I make an external application it seems to remove the disease by purifying the blood, and I can conscientiously recommend it to all."

This is a serious subject which may well concern every reader. Muscular rheumatism is dangerous. Its slightest approach may well insure terror. It should be checked at once and by the means which will most certainly and efficiently do it.

A FRENCH STORY.

The Almost Incredible Devotion of a Modern Parisian Husband.

Not long ago the husband of a lovely little woman in Paris, whom he had married a few weeks before, led to the altar, saw her safe into a carriage in which he was setting out to make some calls. She was the very light of his eyes, and they had spent few hours apart since their wedding day. Imagine his state of mind when late in the afternoon she was brought home strangely and almost unrecognizable. But I must go back a little. The horse that drew the carriage slipped in rounding a corner, the vehicle turned over and the face of its occupant was terribly mutilated with broken glass from the windows. When the crowd which soon surrounded the carriage extricated the poor little prisoner, she was taken inconsiderately into the shop of the nearest chemist to have her injuries examined. The cuts and scratches were dreadful, but the worst was a gash from nearly an ear to which a long piece of torn flesh hung. The poor chemist seemed to have lost his head at the sight, for instead of sewing the piece in place again, he cut it off, and seeing that the patient continued unconscious, he washed his hands of her as quickly as possible, and saw no driven in a cab to the nearest hospital. The doctor, who is called in breathless haste, exclaims at the butchery of the chemist's surgery, and says there is nothing to be done but to take a piece out of the arm of the poor victim to supply the place of that which the chemist had so stupidly cut off. But the half-frantic husband will not consent to it, and taking off his coat and bearing his own arm, offers to supply the place of the lost flesh, and not touch her with a knife. But [illegible] the doctor, long and tried person enough in a family, no, also [illegible] the pain would be too great. However, the fondest young husband [illegible] to the point, and it is said, were it [illegible] operation with a knife on his life, remarking that they had toward [illegible] things in common, pains as well as pleasures of the needle are [illegible] and it says that when the [illegible] ing process is complete there will scarcely be a visible trace of the [illegible] Mr. O. R. [illegible] Dispatch.

During the year [illegible] bodies were received at the New York morgue. These come from the poor-houses, hospitals and other institutions. A notable fact is that there were 500 more dead children received than adults. Of the 2,642 bodies received, 1,756 were subsequently claimed and buried by friends. The remaining 8,997 were either buried in Potter's field or sent to the various medical colleges for dissection. One hundred and forty-eight of the bodies received were unknown. During 1884 the number of bodies received was 5,690.—N. Y. Sun.

THE WONDER

Is becoming universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for Hood's SARSAPARILLA. But, my friend if you could stand behind our counter a week and hear what those say who are using it, the reason would appear as clear as the noon-day sun. The real curative power of Hood's SARSAPARILLA demonstrates itself in every case, when our directions are faithfully regarded. We would that you might question the people a fractional part of the testimony that is spoken of every day in the positive by those who have carefully tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the effect upon the blood and strengthening the whole system, regulation of the functions of the body to the normal healthy standard of health. It's a faithful and satisfactory remedy.

Cold Hands and Feet.

LOWELL, Feb. 8, 1885.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co.: Gentlemen—About one year ago my daughter commenced taking your Sarsaparilla. At that time she was very nervous, sleeping could take no long walks, and her appetite could take no long walks. She was very nervous, sleeping badly, troubled with dizziness, cold feet, her blood seemed to be poor, and she was in a condition which caused us great anxiety. After taking one bottle of your Sarsaparilla she began to improve, and she now has a good appetite and can take much longer walks. Her humor is nothing compared with what it was one year ago. She is in better spirits, is not troubled with cold hands and feet as previously. And I attribute this improvement in her condition largely to your Sarsaparilla. She has taken six bottles, and intends to continue its use. I was inclined to oppose the trial of it at first. I now have great faith in it as a blood purifier. Very truly yours,

A MADMAN'S STORY.

His Mysterious Rival and His Awful Secret.

One afternoon last summer I had occasion to visit the insane asylum at ——. Among the large number of patients confined in that institution I was particularly interested in one who bore about him evidences of having been once a splendid specimen of manhood. Despite the stoop of his shoulders and his air of debility it was easy to trace the outlines of a former magnificent frame. His forehead was broad, his chin prominent and bold, his every feature in a sane man would have indicated strength and an irresistible will. Yet if left in solitude for even a moment his expression became haunted and his manner so would that it completely contradicted the outlines of his face.

When I questioned the warden about this man he could give me no information whatever. The young lady in mourning who had caused him to be left at the asylum had been uncommunicative, and as for the man himself, he had either forgotten the past or did not wish to speak of it. I might question him, though, if I liked. It could do no harm.

The subject of my curiosity was walking stolidly about the gardens attached to the institution, and I lost no time in approaching him. His manner was affable, but when I asked him to tell me the story of his life he cast on me such a look of horror that I beat a precipitate retreat. About half an hour later, as I was about to pass out of the gate, I felt a slight touch on my shoulder. I turned and saw the madman.

"I will write you my history," said he, "although I can not bring myself to tell it. It will be painful to me but may be of use to others. I accepted with thanks and made arrangements with the warden to have his writings sent on to me by mail.

About a month later I received a package from him containing about forty sheets of foolscap covered completely with close writing of exceedingly fine quality. The greater part was in a more or less after much study I managed to construct the following narrative which I give, not in his words, for these would be an enough [illegible] in my own [illegible]

Mr. Grumble—Hush gal, what a silly question. Don't you see I am a man. I've been spending money and spent my money on your education. I've got a new kaiser dress to fix up for a sleigh ride, and it don't do to be—

Daniel Wiggins, of Ridgeway, stepped into the HERALD office the other day to pay his subscription.

[illegible] said the Boss, shaking hands with the man. "Glad to see you in the editorial room."

Mr. Wiggins—"That's the point exactly. I take the Detroit Tribune for politics. What little democracy I have I can find in the HERALD, and I take that for the local news. I have taken the old HERALD ever since I can remember, almost."

The Boss—"I appreciate your good judgment certainly. And right here I wish to ask you one question. You may consider it an impertinence, but my duty as a journalist prompts me to solicit the information. Are you any relation to Wiggins the great prophet?"

Mr. Wiggins—"I am pleased to acknowledge that I am not. The [illegible] in your graveyard."

The HERALD would like to know:

Whether pumpkin pie is permitted at the White House dinners.

Whether Tecumseh is going to have a base ball club this season.

Whether the new Dickens club will revive the dead[illegible] and then die.

Whether postmaster Stearns favors the present site for the Adrian post office.

Whether Ancorman Stearns favors the City Hall site for the Adrian post office.

Whether editor Stearns favors the Lawrence House site for the Adrian post office.

Whether the editor of the Clinton Local has recovered from his attack of the milligrubs.

Whether the Evening Journal will apologize for slandering our progressive euchre club.

Whether the Commercial Telegraph company will spread out this summer to Ridgeway, Clinton and Saint Lake.

Our reporter met a member of the progressive euchre club yesterday and had this set to with him.

Reporter—"Well, George, have you seen the comments of the Detroit Evening Journal on the demise of your club?"

George—"I should remark. The architect of that item deserves a leather medal. Broke up in a wrangle. Why, every member of the club was present with one exception. We passed a delightful evening, winding up with a lunch at The Patterson. Geo. W. Raiff, who arrived at a late hour on the M. & O., shared refreshments with us after his lecture at the Opera House. The quill driver who perpetrated that note in the Journal probably does not know what progressive euchre is. When we resume operations next fall, if the youthful dedicating will call round, we will initiate him."

A distinguished officer of the army who knew our friend the late William Gray, for many years has obliged us with an anecdote of that irrepressible wag which I do not remember having heard or seen in print.

Early in the war, as the story comes to me, Henry D. Terry, the brilliant and famous criminal lawyer, who practiced at the Detroit bar, resolved to enter the service, being impelled thereto by patriotism and the hope of martial glory. In his private affairs generally Terry was not a prudent man but under the circumstances he was considerate enough to insure his life insured. The high war rate of life insurance staggered him, and in a conversation with Gray about it he expressed his opinion that the company seemed determined to rob him.

"I'll tell you, Terry," said Gray, "you don't go at it in the right way. Of course the company naturally regards the risk as extra hazardous, but you should apply to an agent who knows you."

The above is clipped from the Free Press. Many of our earliest settlers will remember Willie Gray, as he was called. He studied law a few months in Tecumseh away back in the thirties and taught school one term in the Newberry district.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19, 1886.

All sorts of people with all sorts of [illegible] Many of them are truly good boys, but most of them are the congressmen's cousins, Maryland Seniors and Representatives [illegible] and begin their [illegible] are [illegible] at hand and [illegible] from the [illegible] of [illegible] But now they are [illegible] disappointed with other features [illegible] and have [illegible]

[illegible] the hottest place in the capital. It keeps two [illegible] busy to serve the people [illegible] interesting to stand in the corridor and hear the demands of importunate visitors, and watch the faces of the people standing around there.

A young man from the way back district comes in. He wants power to meander about a clerkship, but he is modest and stands back fingering his cane and debating whether to push into the crowd or not. Then a veteran office seeker steps up to the door keeper in a business like way and says, "Smith, Rhode Island."

The ante-room is always crowded. There is a wounded from the South with the little rebel against the government for cotton destroyed. Another wants to have her little son appointed a page in the House, and she is waiting to see the Sergeant-at-Arms. There are young women and old women who are trying to get places in the departments and female lobbyists who are to get so many hundred dollars for pushing such and such a bill through. Then just outside in the corridor again are scores of men who want office. Some of them came here last March expecting to get a clerkship and would now be thankful for a nice hundred dollar clerkship.

We thank thee, dear reader, that you are not dependent on the government for support. There has just been a competitive examination here for Post Office Inspectorships. There were only twenty five vacancies to be filled, and eight hundred candidates yearning for the places, presented themselves. Several hundred who passed had no possible chance of getting appointments, so really those who passed were not much better off than those who failed in the examination.

As the week, so far, the Senate has been unbolting and criticising again the Educational bill that passed that body last session, and the House of Representatives has been defending and denouncing Fitz John Porter as it has done biennially in every Congress for twenty years. The same old evidence and arguments are being repeated in both Houses over each measure. Nothing seems to have occurred in the interim to change the views of the friends of either question or to modify the objections of opponents. As to the Educational bill, it cannot be said that the Southern Senators are disposed to give their section the benefit of the doubt on the question. The strongest opposition to the measure comes from that section, notably from Senator Morgan of Ala., although the South would receive the bulk of the proposed appropriation, of $77,000,000.

The woman suffragists are again holding their convention. The representation is fully as large as at any former gathering. In their speeches they tell the same old story. They rant of their wrongs, demand their rights, and declare they will get them yet. They dwell with elation on what they call their victories of the past year, and one of their ablest champions, Mrs. Merriweather proposes to make an address in reply to Senator Vest's letter stating that he is an "uncompromising opponent." The women say this fair orator is going to annihilate this Senator from Mo.

Apropos of this convention which is being held in All Souls' Church, the pastor preached a sermon on woman suffrage. He said the question had narrowed down to a single issue, the right to the ballot. He was still in doubt, but it was hard not to favor it when the appeal came from women. He had drawn near the fence, and was looking over, but this place was one that thoughtful people could not clear at a bound. It was at least a sex question. Speaking of women in Congress he said the wives of congressmen were much better when they brought their wives to Washington with them than when they left them at home. If good women should be elected to Congress, he added, it is to be hoped they will bring their husbands with them. I should be sorry to see them leave their husbands at home to keep house during a two or six years term.

DEATH OF JOHN B. GOUGH.

John B. Gough, the eloquent temperance lecturer died at [illegible] on the afternoon of the 18th, at the residence of R. E. B. Burns in Frankford, Pa. [illegible] was suddenly stricken with paralysis while lecturing at Frankford Presbyterian church. His wife was at his bedside when he died. There were also present Mrs. Bliss, his sister, Mrs. Burns and two nieces, Mrs. Mary and Miss Wellington, Mrs. John Wanamaker, Rev. Thomas Murphy and Mr. [illegible] The body was embalmed and, after services at the house, were taken to Worchester, Mass., for burial.

[illegible] at Sandgate, near Dover, England, a romantic little watering place frequented by many of the aristocracy and gentry. His father was an infantry soldier and served from 1798, when he enlisted, until discharged in 1823 with a pension of £20 a year. He was in the Peninsular War, and obtained a medal with six clasps, for Corunna, Talavera, Salamanca, Badajoz, Bombay and Busaco. Having nothing but his pension, he could not afford to give [illegible] education and at the age of 10 years John finally left school.

In June, 1829, John's father paid a family, who were about to emigrate to America (in guinea's, in consideration of which they agreed to take him with them, teach him a trade and provide for him until he should become 21 years old. After a voyage of fifty-four days the ship on which young Gough was a passenger arrived at New York, where the party remained about two months, previous to setting on a farm in Oneida county, where John remained, learning the duties of a farm hand until December 1830, when he left his protectors and made his way to New York City, where he secured a situation as errand boy and bookbinder's apprentice, in the Methodist Book Concern at a salary of $2.25 a week.

In 1833, having secured employment with N. J. White at higher wages than he was receiving at the book concern, Gough sent to England for his father, mother and sister, but only the last two named came. In July, 1834, his mother died, and as he had no means to prevent, was buried in the potter's field.

Within a year or two after his mother's death Gough became intimate with a set of young men through whose influence he entered upon those convivial habits which ended in making him a drunkard. His habits caused him to lose his situation, though he was a good workman, and he then turned his imitative faculties to account and went upon the stage as a low comedian and singer. He did not succeed at this, obtained work at his trade but lost it, shipped as a hand on a fishing smack, but steadily grew more and more a victim of liquor, though he had in the meantime married. It is needless in this connection to follow his career of partial reformation and constant relapse, which is the history of every drunkard; let it suffice to say that he did not reach the very bottom of the gulf of drunkenness until death had mercifully taken his wife from her life of heart-breaking trials.

In 1842, friendless, poverty stricken, and desparing, cold, hungry and in rags, Gough stood in the lower Town Hall, Worchester, at the invitation of Joel Stratton, told his story and signed the pledge. He attended temperance meetings regularly, and from speaking a few words occasionally when called upon, gradually came to be looked upon as orator, and on the 31st of December, 1842, was for the first time advertised as a temperance advocate. In about five months after he had signed the pledge he broke it in Boston, but repented and again assumed its obligation. From that time until the present he has been continually before the public as a lecturer and author.

November 24th, 1843, Mr. Gough was married, at Worchester, Mass., to Miss Mary Whitcomb, of Boylston, and went to Roxbury to live.

October 27, 1848, Mr. Gough's father, accompanied by a 5 year old boy, the son of a second marriage, came to this country to reside with the now noted orator.

In 1850 Mr. Gough did his first work in Detroit, delivering ten lectures in Dr. Duffield's old church (First Presbyterian), corner Woodward avenue and Larned street.

In 1853 Mr. Gough made his first visit, as a lecturer, to Great Britain, arriving at Liverpool July 30th, and speaking throughout England and Scotland until August '54, when he left for this country, and remained here until July 14, 1857. He then made his second visit to England, and it was during this visit that he won his celebrated libel suit against Frederick R. Lees, who accused him of unfitness, insanity, etc. He embarked for home August 11, 1860, and summarized his work in England as follows: "The first two years in Great Britain I delivered 438 lectures and traveled 21,224 miles; the last three years 365 lectures and 40,217 miles."

For the past twenty five years he has been engaged almost continuously as a temperance lecturer and during all that time he has been recognized as one of the foremost platform orators of America, "Tipo," whom will his gentle dolly.

FREDERICK E. WOOD,
Tecumseh, Feb. 6, 1886. Recorder.

A TRIP TO THE SCHOOLS.

Last Tuesday morning we spent a very pleasant hour in visiting the High School. We first stopped at the chapel exercises, which are conducted in the A High School Department. The scholars of each room are obliged to assemble in this room each morning and listen to the devotional exercises. This room is now filled to overflowing which shows the steady increase in attendance.

Stopping in the A room we listened for a short time to the Geometry class which is conducted by Prof. H. A. Hammond. This class consists of the graduates of '85 with one additional pupil.

The next room visited was that taught by Miss Alice Lyons. A class in Algebra were trying to master square and cube root as our entrance, and they did finely for beginners in that work.

Our next visit was at the Professor's room. Miss Abby Hitchcock was conducting a class in Science of Arithmetic. Time was the subject. Our time being limited we were unable to visit the other departments but will attempt to so in the near figure.

The attendance in the High School is about 79, which shows the excellent condition to which that Department has been brought. We understand this is the best attendance the High School has yet seen. It shows that the teachers are well liked by the scholars. We would suggest that the parents of the scholars and others visit the schools often, as it would encourage both teachers and pupils in their work.

Misses Lyons and Hitchcock spent Sunday in Ann Arbor, remaining over Monday.

Miss Maggie Clarkson is again in her place in the schools.

The graduating class this year consists of two boys and two girls as follows: Will McNair, Walter Burridge, Hettie Laing, and Maggie Clarkson.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. George Moon is on the sick list, and is being cared for by Dr. Geo. Howell.

Joe Sage will tackle the good people of Hudson this week with his patent weather strip.

Mrs. Joe Osborn is suffering with hemorage of the stomach, and is cared for by Dr. Nelson, of Ridgeway.

Mrs. Wilson, formerly Mrs. Collins, is suffering from a sprained ankle received Sunday. Dr. Geo. Howell will soon have her on her phis again.

The scholars of the District school No. 1 are rehearsing for the coming school exhibition, which takes place a week from next Friday evening.

W. P. Cotton made a business trip to Detroit last week. He is going to make a change in his business and is closing out goods at and below cost.

Postmaster Travis is now nicely settled in the new post-office and things look neat and clean in there. Miss Helen Travis, the efficient assistant, dishes out the mail and licks postage stamps with the grace of an old time Republican P. M.

Dr. D. W. Lotte will sell at auction on his farm 2 miles east and 1 mile south of Britton, on the county line of Monroe and Lenawee, on Tuesday, March 2, '86 at 12 o'clock sharp, the following property: Span work horses 8 years old, span work horses 12 years old, 2 mares with foal, 2 colts 2 and 3 years old, 1 calf, 2 lumber wagons, 1 pair trucks, 2 pair bobs, top buggy, single harness, five cows, 3 double harnesses, mower, reaper and mower, 2 fanning mills, corn sheller, corn marker, 2 corn drags, 10 bu. seed corn, shelled, two hay tedders, 5 bu. timothy seed, hay rake, 3 plows, 3 drags, roller drag, two double and 4 single cultivators, horse fork with rope, pulley and porter car, 50 new grain bags, grind stone, household goods, Blissfield scraper, 30 bu. potatoes, large round stove and numerous other articles. All sums of $3 and less cash; all sums over $3, 15 mos. credit with interest at 6 per cent. Abe Hanford, Auctioneer.

Fred Cliverall and F. A. McNeil have rented the paint shop over Kyle & Haynes', the second story of the old Cummins factory. They propose to do painting in all its branches, both carriage and house work, and also paper hanging. They are both experienced workmen and will doubtless succeed. They take possession of their new quarters this week.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

J. P. Slayton has been more than a week being confined at home with [illegible]

The Dickens Club is prospering. It met last Monday evening at Wm. Hayden's.

The front doors of the saloons were locked on Monday last and the front curtains were drawn.

D. A. Turrell, of Somerset, was in town on business last Friday, and gave the HERALD a call.

[illegible] sale cheap cheap. Call and examine at the HERALD office.

H. E. Anderson has a new card this week setting forth the merits of his celebrated Standard Coffee.

Oscar Palmer started for Nashville, Tenn., yesterday, where he expects to dispose of his last year's crop of apples.

Will Baker has accepted a position in James E. Davis' drug house, of Detroit, and started for that city last Tuesday.

Peter Lee, of Lowell, Kent Co., who has been spending the winter at Cambridge and Onsted, was in town yesterday.

Miss Mabel Hayden has gone to Detroit to take a ten week's course of lessons with a professional violin instructor.

The Ladies' Social of the Universalist church meets this afternoon and evening at the residence of Mrs. L. A. Chapman.

We are glad to see that Stephen Whitting has so far recovered from his injuries as to be out again. He is not yet able to work.

Met Conklin got his hanging lamp into position last Monday evening. He had quite an audience to witness the proceedings.

J. O. Maxwell, of Onsted, was in town Tuesday on business, and favored the HERALD with a call. He came down on the M. & O.

Rev. C. E. Conley of Detroit, was shaking hands on our streets one day last week having come out to officiate at the Titus Thompson wedding.

The Free Methodist Society will hold a series of revival meetings at the Friend's meeting house, commencing March 1st. Everybody is invited.

A complete set of Appleton's American Cyclopedia, latest edition, will be sold at half price if taken at once. A rare bargain. The set can be seen at this office.

C. E. Albaugh started for Lansing Monday to attend the Grand Lodge of Royal Templars which convenes there this week. He will return to day or to morrow.

The Baptist church of this village is enjoying a season of unusual prosperity. The new pastor, Rev. F. Adkins, is making friends as fast as he gets acquainted.

Mr. S. G. Mason, of Vicksburg, Kalamazoo Co., is in town a day or two conferring with Conklin & Cairns in regard to the means and methods for pushing the Wood reaper and binder this season.

John R. Clarke, of this village, has become one of the attractions of the Central Lecture and Entertainment Bureau, of New York City, with his season entirely filled with dates.

Although the La Rue brothers did not draw a very large house at the rink Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the performance given by them was first class in every particular, and merited a much larger house.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the Baptist church will give a "Secret Novelty Social" at the chapel parlors, Friday evening Feb. 26. What is the novelty? What is the secret, do you ask? Come and see.

Bates Chatterdon, who is the teacher of penmanship in Lynn Brown's Business College at Adrian honored the HERALD with a call last Saturday. Mr. Chatterdon's fine work with a pen adds much to the reputation of the College.

Harry Hanford, of Detroit, spent last week among his Tecumseh and Franklin friends. The HERALD was remembered among his numerous calls. Harry holds the position he has occupied for the past two or three years and is doing finely.

The masquerade dance at Brauser's Landing, Devil's Lake, on Feb. 19, was a brilliant success. About fifty couple attended of whom forty masked. Music was furnished by L. D. Baker's full band. Everything passed off very pleasantly.

Did you get a valentine?

H. L. Matthews, of Muskegon, was in town Monday.

Geo. Curtis is painting the residence of [illegible]

Preparations have been made for the Cantata of Esther.

Mrs. Will Woodin, of Battle Creek, is visiting friends in Tecumseh.

Miss Crosman has left the employ of the Isley House and is now with by Daniel Angell.

Mrs. Mellie Boyd returned last Monday from a short visit to her sister, near Ann Arbor.

The pupils from the Academy had a jolly time last Saturday and Monday nights, coasting on the toboggan slides.

The Tecumseh Band is now practicing for the Dickens Festival, which is to be held in Adrian on March 3rd. The Band is a good one and will be a great feature.

Lyster Dewey, of Cambridge, spent Sunday in town. Lyster will leave for the Agricultural college about March 13.

Frank Lamkins, of Ann Arbor, came over to attend the party at Mr. McNair's last Friday, and remained over Sunday.

S. W. Beakes, proprietor of the Adrian Record, was in town last Monday and gave us a call. Bro. Beakes is always welcome.

[illegible] Hull, who attended the Agricultural College last fall, again left home on Tuesday noon to resume his studies. We wish him success.

Herbert and Will McNair gave a tea party to their many gentleman friends last Friday evening, at the residence of David McNair. A most enjoyable time was had.

The officers of Tecumseh Lodge No. 65, F. & A. M. will meet the Grand Lecturer of the order at Adrian on the 3d of March, to attend a school of instruction.

The fourth volume of Cassell's National Library is Isaac Walton's Complete Angler. The first four numbers of this series stamp it as a work of much merit. These little books ought to have a very extensive sale.

Oliver Bickford, of Macedon, N. Y., who is stopping with J. E. Ingerson near Adrian, was in town the first of the week. He is looking for a farm in this vicinity. He did not have to look long for a good farm near Tecumseh.

Dr. E. M. Conklin went to Manchester last Saturday evening where he remained till Tuesday, when he started for his new home in Kansas. His friends here regret his departure but they all wish him many years of health and prosperity.

A Committee of young men are making arrangements for a select masquerade at the Opera House next week Monday evening. They are negotiating for some of the best music that can be had in this vicinity and intend to make it a success.

The Lenawee Record is one of the best newspapers ever published in Lenawee County. We call attention to their advertising card in another column. Subscriptions received at this office in connection with the HERALD at club rates.

Miss Elvia Tallman, of Adrian, was calling on her old acquaintances Monday. The scarlet fever having invaded a family living next door to her father's, the children have been sent to Tecumseh and will remain a few days at Mrs. J. L. Tallman's, west of the village.

Miss Sena Hosmer entertained a few of her many lady friends last Monday evening to a tea party. The young ladies say that they had a most enjoyable time, but would like to know how those three boys were smuggled in at the supper table. Nevertheless the boys made it lively.

The Odd Fellows Lodge turned out in a body last Sunday evening to hear Rev. Getchell's sermon on Schuyler Colfax, and the church was filled. The discourse was highly spoken of by those in attendance. At the close of the service a collection was taken for the benefit of the Colfax monument.

Unger's Detective Bureau, located at 841 Broadway, New York City, is acquiring an extended reputation. Mr. J. M. Fuller the manager, is an old Tecumseh boy. Success to him. When we want some one to ferret out the senders of those anonymous letters that have reached this office lately, we will give him a job.

During a short visit to Adrian last week, we called at Brown's Business University, and were somewhat surprised to see the progress which that institution has made since its organization. Mr. Brown has a fine class now in attendance. The numbers have outgrown his limited quarters and he contemplates moving to larger rooms soon.

Major Horace Gray of Grosse Isle, was in town last week, having been called here to attend the funeral of his brother, Jos. W. Gray. The Major was sheriff of Wayne county during the years 1854 and 1855. He afterwards purchased a large tract of land on Grosse Isle in the Detroit river, and for several years that has been his home. The HERALD acknowledges a call from the Major on Monday.

Orin Terry and Harvey Terry of Watertown, N. Y., were in town Monday and Tuesday. They were guests while here of P. F. Williams and Lyster Dewey. They were on their way to the Cantata of Esther.

[illegible]

[illegible] Dewey together.

W. H. H. Hayden has been appointed special agent for the Pope Manufacturing Co's. goods, consisting of bicycles, tricycles, tandems, and bicycle sundries. He has Tecumseh and vicinity. We think that Mr. Pope has made a good selection. If anyone can make a success of it, Will can.

[illegible] dence last Monday night. Mr. Miller is gaining quite a reputation as an actor, and he is well supported by his wife and daughters. The play, "The Three Widows," is a good one, and was well played by Mr. Miller and his company.

A. W. Armstrong has an egg strangulary specimen of hen fruit in his possession. It measures 8¼ inches around and weighs 3½ ounces. It was laid by one of his full bred light Brahma hens. That fowl is worth more than the old hen in the story book that laid two eggs every day and three on Sunday.

P. W. Adams called yesterday to say good-bye before starting for his Delaware home. He gave us a most cordial invitation to visit his peach farm on our wedding tip and we shall take the matter into serious consideration. Mrs. P. R. Adams has painted him for a visit of two or three months.

The dance last Friday evening was a splendid party. Ollie Hoint's music was tiptop of course. It was a fearful evening for ladies to be out, which interfered much with the attendance, especially in the galleries. About thirty couple of dancers participated however, and they pronounced the party a perfect success.

Everybody is invited to attend the Total abstinence League Social to be held at Bidwell's Hall, to morrow evening, Friday, Feb 26th, 1886. A good time is expected, don't fail to come. The thanks of the League are heartily tendered to those who have so generously donated books and other reading matter for the use of the members.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Blanchard of Chicago, were the guests of Mrs. Blanchard's father, John J. Adam, last week. He returned home last Monday morning, but she will remain here a few days longer. Mr. B. has a fine business at Lake View, a suburb of Chicago, being a member of the firm of Blanchard & Hooker, wholesale dealers in flour, feed and hay.

In remitting his subscription to the HERALD for another year, Rev. Henry Shepard of Burr Oak, says: "We are all well. Mary is teaching in the High School here. She has the grade next to the Superintendent. She took the place after a poor disciplinarian and has brought the room to perfect subjection." Mary's old friends here will be glad to hear this good news.

Tecumseh had a progressive euchre club. It was made up of the bon ton best people of the village. At a meeting last week the members indulged in a disgraceful wrangle. The club has disbanded. Detroit Journal.

Go away from home to learn the news. Our progressive euchre club disbanded last week, that is true but the deed was done in the happiest manner imaginable, around the festive board in the dining hall of the Patterson.

Summit City, Grand Traverse county, was virtually only two years old last September, yet has three saw mills, one broom handle factory and one shingle mill; three stores, express, telegraph and post office. It has no saloons, and doesn't want any. Since last fall work has been furnished all who have gone there to locate. Evening News, Feb. 17, 1886.

The above named place is nearly owned and controlled by Tecumseh parties, and we are glad to learn that Tecumseh men are such pioneers in enterprise.

There will be a grand excursion to Toledo next Saturday, Feb. 27th, over the M. & O. road. Bennett Matlack will appear in the plays of A Celebrated Case and Damon and Pythias on that day at the Peoples' Theatre. People can go down on the morning train and attend the after noon matinee. Below is the time schedule with fare for the round trip.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS

[illegible] Monday night.

And now Ridgeway rises up and asks for a grain elevator.

[illegible] birthday by a numerous list Monday.

Clinton will soon have a local weekly. The materials will be shipped from Morenci's firing here.

The Grand Templars of Michigan are now in session at the Opera House in Jackson. The Lake Lodge.

The House of Charity, at the Adrian Home, [illegible] has gone to jail.

The chickens and chickens of Clinton and vicinity are now fast asleep. Jack Frost has gone to jail.

[illegible] a barrel of [illegible] milk, stole [illegible] of a barrel [illegible] the bed.

A movement has been organized to compel mill owners to place fish sheets in the dams on the Raisin river between Monroe and Adrian.

A good respectable widow lady of Adrian, who is tired of living alone, [illegible] for a husband. Address the editor of the Record.

The prohibitionists of Lenawee County are on the war path. They will run tickets in most of the towns in the county at the spring election.

The Britton Eagle failed to secure Wm. Cone, the man who contemplated starting the paper has embarked on a newspaper venture at North Adams.

The Morenci Observer chaws the Adrian Press to task for raising about its limited circulation. The Observer claims to print a larger edition than the Press.

Jasper now boasts a barber. There wasn't a place to put his shop on a first floor, so from "shear" necessity he had to razor to the second story. This made it a close shave for the people to get the tonsorial establishment at all. Adrian Press.

Fair Spring, unbidden, dropped suddenly into the lap of Winter last week, and about paralyzed the old gentleman for a time by her audacious. He recovered in a few days however, and is mighty cross and ugly since his fright.—Hudson Gazette.

The Adrian post-office war has opened with renewed vigor. On Monday morning last an injunction was served on the Common Council to restrain them from using the city hall for a postoffice. Our county seat neighbors are always happy when engaged in some legal turmoil.

On Monday morning the 22d inst. a brand new U. S. flag, fourteen by twenty two feet in size, with a full complement of stars and stripes was unfurled from the dome of the new County Court House. The new Court House is now fully christened. "Plaschas' Castle." Let the eagle scream.

The Record speaks these good words about our local telegraph line: The C. T. line connecting Holloway therewith, will be completed to that town as soon as the poles can be set. This telegraph line, started originally as a little private scheme of three or four individuals for personal convenience and pastime, bids fair to grow into a business concern and pay a dividend to stockholders. It is gradually lengthening out and assuming important porportions.

A large meeting of farmers was held at Morenci last week Thursday, to take counsel together as to whether they should pay their Bohemian notes. The Observer reporter was admitted to the conclave and counted forty noses. A committee was appointed to visit the Prosecutor and ascertain whether the agents could be proceeded against by criminal process. The victims are numerous in the vicinity of Morenci and they have blood in their eye. The end is not yet.

Under Sheriff Bowen is a pretty sharp buyer of pelts, and never expects to let any one give him the hot end of the poker in a bargain for pelts. He saw a trap with a coon skin in the other day, and as he was going by he handed him a dih. What do you take for that coon sayn.

Oh I dunno, what you giving, and the owner swung the pelt to and fro.

Bower saw that he could have a bargain easily enough, so he leaned carelessly against a fence post and said.

It's not very large, and ain't put up in the best style, but I'll allow you a quarter for it.

By gosh, you will have it, and he took the money and tossed it down for the owner.

Bower began doing a jumping act for joy as he thought he had a fine pelt, was tucked up in a way to be a first class Woodchuck skin. Bower is treating yet. Adrian Press.

The Shakespeare Club of Tecumseh, having "exhausted their fund," has changed its name to the Dickens Club and will tackle Pickwick stories. It signifies through life that it is not yet exhausted, beginning at any rate to be would take one with the editor of the Hudson Post into the shades of Shakespeare. Oh, the Dickens. Wonder if any of our work may use the blue Herald. More by and by.

CLOSE SHAVES.

A Superior Judge Bares His Throat to Men Whom He Has Committed.

"No, I do not care to get shaved here."

The remark was addressed to General McCoombs, warden of the Penitentiary, by Superior Judge Murphy, of San Francisco, at the conclusion of a week ago Sunday. The judge was one of a party visiting the prison.

But, to the astonishment of the general, the judge, instead of being shaved in the barber's chair, was seated in a chair in the warden's office, and was being shaved by a barber who was a little rough as now. The general had invited the judge to go to the barber shop conducted for the convicts. The judge took a seat in a chair, and who do you think stepped up to shave him? It was Jake Wilkinson. Sent over for forty-five years for cutting a woman's throat. He was said to have a mania for that sort of business, and proved it a year or two later by cutting a woman's throat at Honolulu, having been pardoned to leave California. As district attorney I had prosecuted him with some vim, and he always claimed that it was done in earnest, and that my argument rather than the evidence procured a verdict, which was not so. Now, I might, my feelings. There was a barber, with throat-cutting mania, who had no more of liberty, who blamed me for it and who could easily take his revenge, as none else was in or near the barber-shop. He recognized me and began to strop a razor, emphasizing each vigorous stroke with words, which summed up, were: "No—judge—I have no—any—grudge against you. O, no. Haven't—any—grudge—at—all. Should I—show the white feather, or brave it out? I felt chilly as the razor sang, but concluded to keep my seat. The fellow pulled my chair back, dashed the steel up and down my face, all the time repeating: "You were very hard on me, judge. But I haven't any grudge against you, oh, no." In a voice that sounded strangely ironical and dynamical. Well, I came away unharmed, but it was not pleasant. I can assure you, though I laugh over it now.

"O, well, that was unpleasant," said the prisoner. "Just I have a nice barber. Show the judge to the barber's room." And the General to a servant, waving his hand in a pleasant, imperious manner.

The judge yielded and followed upstairs to a snug in the back part of the building, where he was ushered into a room, and then the servant departed. When the official looked around to see the barber it proved to be Harry Brown, a colored man, whom Judge Murphy only seven months ago sent to Folsom for fifty-five years for a murder. Here was a coincidence. Having had one thrilling experience the judge did not relish another. "Great heavens! am I doomed to have my throat cut?" was his inward exclamation. Flight or submission to a nerve-trying ordeal was necessary. After a momentary shock had gone and the recollection of the former affair passed before him like a picture, he decided to stay.

"Howdy do, Harry?" said the judge. "I did not know you were here, but am glad to see you in a favorite haunt of the social element. General McCoomb has been telling me how nicely his brother was getting along."

"Howdy do?" said the barber, in a far-away voice that suddenly changed. Hurry turned to the strop and vigorously sharpened the blade, while alternate smiles and frowns were upon his face, as a sound of the razor suggesting an added inch depth, and a wound might be given.

A happy thought of interesting the prisoner and appeasing him entered the judicial mind of the apprehensive official, and it was soon put into effect. "Harry," he said, "I am glad to see you in the shop. It is the first step toward your release." "Yes," was added, when a smile of hopeful inquiry appeared upon the face of the prisoner, "if you can behave yourself here, make yourself agreeable to the warden, get his good will, and will become acquainted with the prison directors, get their sympathy, and, by and by, you know, when the proper time has elapsed, they may help you. Yes, we'll all help you, Harry."

With such talk did the one in the chair entertain the barber, the usual order of things being reversed upon the occasion until the implement was closed and laid upon the shelf. Then the judge relaxed the apprehensive tension and was in a happier frame of mind. But he at once took a vow never to again run the risk of a slave in a State prison, thinking that the third experience might result differently from the others, though the warden, who had not known who sentenced his barber, assured his guest that there had been no danger incurred in the least instance, as the barber is a sensible and hopeful man.—San Quentin (Cal.) Sentinel.

Cocaine for Whooping-Cough.

Dr. Prior, of Bonn, has treated several cases of whooping-cough with cocaine with good results. He [illegible] the drug a specific, not simply in the way of relieving and reducing the violence of the paroxysms. He used fifteen and twenty per cent solutions to paint the fauces, the epiglottis and pharynx, and the vocal cords, with the result of prolonging the interval between the attacks, and lessening the severity of those. The treatment was resorted to twice daily, great stress being laid on the necessity of producing at the time complete anæsthesia of the fauces and upper part of the larynx. Inhalation of a twenty per cent solution four times a day was not so successful in producing [illegible].—N. Y. Med. Rec.

MORNING WRAPPERS.

Some Very Pretty Designs for Old. Middle-[illegible]

The prettiest wrappers for morning wear are [illegible] made in front of paper muslin, with the back in tight [illegible] with the fullness [illegible] from the neck to the foot. The popular shade is a light drab with others, while the back of the waist is adjusted to the figure down to the full gathered skirt breadths. The sides fit smoothly over the hips, and many have silk ends on the left side and a large pocket on the right; but pockets are usually preferred for both sides, and the sash is omitted. All the fullness of the skirt is massed at the back in a very narrow space, usually being confined to the width between the two middle forms, while the adjacent side forms extend quite plain from the armholes to the foot. Sometimes a width of the striped velvet used in front is placed in the middle of the back of the skirt between breadths of the cashmere of the same width as the velvet; velvet, however, is easily defaced, and gowns used when lying down should not have velvet in the back.

The eider-down flannels and the similar jersey flannels with soft short pile are made up in the simplest manner, and are pretty enough of themselves without any trimming when chosen of good shades, such as cream white, poppy red, pale blue or dark cardinal. The close redingote shape with velvet collar, cuff and pocket, and military frogs across the front for fastenings, is the best plan for these gowns. Dark red velvet accessories make a pale blue gown becoming to a brunette, and the same is true of white flanned wrappers. The striped flanned wrappers that are used for comfort rather than beauty are made absolutely plain, with collar and cuffs of the same, and are lined throughout with soft muslin. All the fullness is added in some plaits that are folded to the middle seam of the back.

Young ladies who object to wrappers wear mornings of plush, cashmere or embroidered dimity flannel made with a short sacque, and a short laid in plaits or with gathered flounces. These are also called tea gowns, but they are worn here in the morning instead of in the afternoon, as Parisiennes wear them. The sacque has loose pointed fronts, with a shorter back fitted by wide forms, and a moire ribbon is inserted under the arms to tie in front. A gathered frill of wool lace or of the cashmere or flannel with the edge embroidered in scallops, and sprigs or dots all over it, extends around this sacque and up each front to the neck, where it stands erect. Five wider flounces wrought in the same way cover the skirt. White basket cloth and white crepes are also used for mornings and wrappers, with colored plush or velvet accessories. Breakfast sacques of pink or blue wool with swan-down borders are worn by young ladies in their own homes, but such garments are not now used in hotels or away from home except as dressing sacques, or for negligee in one's own room.—Harper's Bazar.

Glass Flooring.

The substitution of glass flooring for boards continues to increase in Paris, this being especially the case in those business structures in which the cellars are used as offices. At the bank of the Credit Lyonnais the whole of the ground floor is laid with large squares of roughened glass embedded in a strong iron frame, and in the cellars gas burning there is sufficient light, even on dull days, to enable clerks to work without gas. The large central hall of the offices of the Comptoir d'Escompte has also been provided with this kind of flooring, and, although its thickness is considerably greater than that of ordinary glass, it is almost imperceptible to the eye.—Scientific American.

New potatoes. They may now their palm to walnuts or Brazil nuts; the chapped kernels of the latter are very nice. Cocoanut, too, is excellent. Almond jumbles are as good as any. Beat together half a pound of fresh sugar and butter and three eggs; add a quarter pound of ground almonds, and a little lemon juice. Shape into flat lights in, from half to three quarters of an inch. Rose water or orange flower water is often used as a flavoring to these little cakes, and a very superior kind are flavored with a teaspoonful of vanilla essence.—Philadelphia Call.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Bay City is practically out of debt.

A Walking Skeleton.

E. E. Springer, of Meeker, Salisbury, Iowa, writes: "I was afflicted with lung trouble and was [illegible] a walking skeleton. I had tried many remedies without benefit, when I bought a dollar bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me more good than I thought a dollar bottle could do. After using three bottles I found myself once more a man, perfectly restored to health, with a good appetite and a gain in flesh of [illegible] pounds. Call at the Drug Store of Underwood and get a free sample bottle, and convince yourself of its merits. Regular size bottles $1.00."

The mosquito, some scientists say, is the cause of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly purifying it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid. Thousands who have been cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its wonderful blood-purifying qualities. Sold by all druggists.

The diphtheria scare at Springville has abated.

The school at Charlotte has been closed on account of scarlet fever.

Biliousness

is very prevalent at this season, the symptoms being bitter taste, offensive breath, coated tongue, headache, drowsiness, dizziness, loss of appetite. If this condition is allowed to continue, serious consequences may result. By promptly taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, a fever may be avoided or premature death prevented. It is a positive cure for biliousness. Sold by all druggists.

Hal H. Emery's store at Wise Station, was destroyed by fire recently.

Three Reasons

Why every one needs, and should take, Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:

1st.—Because the system is now in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.

2d.—Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.

3d.—Because, from the above facts, [illegible]

The scientist who says that a person could not live over five days with out water is suspected of being a milk man.

The President of the Cambridge, Mass., Fire Dis. Co. says: "I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as a building up and strengthening remedy."

The contract for the construction of a new hotel in Hastings has been let.

It is dangerous to tamper with irritating liquids and exciting snuffs. Use Ely's Cream Balm, which is safe and pleasant and is easily applied. It cures the worst cases of catarrh, cold in head and hay fever, giving relief from the first application. Price 50c.

A woman is cute. She never shows her hand until she gets a handsome ring to go with it.

From Col. C. H. Mackey, 324 Iowa Infantry: I have now been using Ely's Cream Balm for three months and am experiencing no trouble from catarrh whatever. I have been a sufferer for twenty years.—C. H. Mackey, Sigourney, Iowa.

CAN'T SLEEP Nights is the complaint of thousands suffering from Asthma, Consumption, Coughs, etc. Did you ever try Acker's English Remedy? It is the best preparation known for all Lung Troubles, sold on a positive guarantee at 10c., 50c., by C. A. Wright & Co.

Wm. Schneider committed suicide near Harvey, D. T., by cutting his throat from ear to ear.

"Her features are not regular, yet what an attractive face she has! It is her beautiful hair. Once it was thin and grayish and fading. A few bottles of Parker's Hair Balsam wrought the transmutation. It will do as much for any anybody."

A Very Narrow Escape.

"Yes, I had a very narrow escape," said a prominent citizen to a friend, "I was confined to my bed for a year and my friends gave me up for a consumptive's grave, until I began using Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, and here I am, sound and hearty." "You will find it for sale by Baker & Hall. Price 50c. and $1.

The Impending Broke.

The recent statistics of the mortality of deaths show that a large majority die with consumption. This disease may commence with an apparently harmless cough which can be cured instantly by Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, which is guaranteed to cure and relieve all cases. Price 50 cents and $1. Trial size free. For sale by Baker & Hall.

The Excitement Not Over.

The rush at Baker & Hall's drug store in confirmation of the fact that persons affected with Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption procure a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs which is sold on a guarantee and is giving such life satisfaction. It is a standard family remedy. Price 50 cents and $1. Trial size free.

OBITUARY.

[illegible] died at the family homestead in the township of Raisin, Joseph W. Gray crossed over the threshold which separates this life from the mysterious beyond.

The deceased was born in Middlebury, Wyoming, on the 20th of September 1808, and was thus nearly 81 years of age at the date of his death. His youth was passed in Windsor and in Jefferson Co., N. Y. In the spring of 1837 he came to Michigan and located on the eighty acre farm which has been his home from that day until his death. He built a log house and kept "the bitter half" during the dear year of the remarkable frost. In 1838 he married Miss Martha Ann Bingham, daughter of James Bingham, of Windsor. In 1842 he served the month as captain of a company in the Black Hawk war. In 1851 his wife died and in 1853 he married Miss Susan Fox, daughter of John Fox, of Ridgeway.

[illegible] children, the second with four out of whom have grown to manhood and womanhood, and four have gone before.

He filled the position of Justice of the Peace for several years in the town of Raisin. His original purchase of eighty acres was increased from time to time until he finally owned two hundred and eighty acres of land in one body.

"Uncle Joe Gray," as he was familiarly known, has been for many years one of the land marks of this vicinity. He was a kind father, an indulgent husband and a most estimable citizen. During the first years of his settlement here he endured many of the hardships incident to pioneer life, but in recent years he has lived quietly on the old homestead farm, enjoying the fruits of his early toil, at peace with all the world and respected by all who knew him.

He was for many years a member and a regular attendant at the M. E. church of this village. His voice and influence and purse were always given to the cause of religion and morality, and his personal example was one for all young men to follow. He was one of the original trustees of the church at its organization, and remained a trustee until six years ago, when his failing health compelled him to relinquish the trust.

The funeral services were conducted last Sunday afternoon at the M. E. church by the pastor, Rev. T. G. Potter. He selected his text from II Cor. 5, 4, and preached an eloquent discourse, the leading thought of which was the burdens that all must bear here below, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. The pall bearers were chosen from the officers of the church, J. S. Kinney, E. C. Coryell, J. L. Remington, James Potter, E. Williamson and J. W. Ayres. The casket was ornamented with a single floral piece, a ripened sheaf of grain. The large congregation present and the deep interest taken in the ceremonies evinced the high regard which this community entertained for the honest man and sturdy pioneer who lay dead in his coffin.

For nearly sixty years Mr. Gray has moved among us, fulfilling every duty enjoined upon him as a husband, father, citizen, and Christian. As the ripened grain falls beneath the reaper's knife, so the sickle of the Death Angel now gathers him to his fathers in the fulness of his years. He has lived long and well on this earth; he has fought the good fight, he has kept the faith; and crowned with glory and honor, he now enters upon his eternal reward on high.

REMARKABLE RECUPERATION.

D. M. Ferry & Co., the well known Seedsmen, of Detroit, Mich., announce that they are on their feet again and ready and anxious to receive orders for seeds from every one of their old customers, and from as many new ones as feel kindly disposed towards them. They are in condition to promptly execute every order with new seeds of the best quality.

On January 1st their immense warehouse was destroyed by fire. It was filled with probably the largest stock of assorted seeds ever gathered under one roof. Their books and papers were all saved, and every person who had ordered seeds of them will be supplied with his usual stock. They had large quantities of seeds in their warehouse on their seed farms in the hands of their growers and now covered and on the way from Europe which, together with their stock and branch Seed Store in Windsor, Ontario, close at hand, will give them vigorous use of the telegraph and enable them to secure a new stock in a remarkably short time.

Before the fire was subdued they had secured new quarters and were devoting all their energies to their customers' interests. In thirty days from the fire they were in perfect working order again.

When we consider the magnitude of their business, the appalling destruction of property at the most unfortunate season of the year, we doubt if the annals of history furnish such a case of rapid recuperation. Such energy deserves success.

The witching face of Miss Warren looks coyly at us from the first page of the Magazine of Art for March. It is a full length portrait, engraved from Bartolozzi's engraving of Sir Thomas Lawrence's famous portrait. From this charming picture we turn to read an illustrated description of "The Tiber Cities to Bagnorea," by Edgar Barclay, which is followed by a brightly written account of "The Institute," in which the writer has some pertinent remarks on the present course of art in England. This paper is illustrated with two engravings from notable pictures, one being a full page reproduction of Mr. F. D. Millet's "The Grandaughter," a most pleasing idea, worked out with perhaps more sentiment than is usual in Mr. Millet's work. There is a paper on art in Persia and there are plenty of notes, keeping the reader au courant with the art news of both hemispheres. Cassell & Company, 35 cents a number, $3.50 a year in advance.

WHAT WILL convince you of the wonderful curative properties combined in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, if the remarkable cures that have been effected by its use fail to impress upon your mind this repeatedly proven fact? Thousands are using it, and all unanimous in the testimony that it is a medicine possess WILL unlike all others, and even more than we claim for it. My friend, if you are sick or in that condition that you cannot call yourself either sick or well, go and get a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and realize yourself how this medicine puts the vital spark, and restores all the machinery of your body into working order.

CONVINCE

From the Registrar of Deeds for Middlesex County, Northern District.

LOWELL, MASS.

C. I. Hood & Co.: Gentlemen—It gives me pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that hit my wants as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours,

J. P. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a ravenous appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

UNHEALTHY MINDS.

Killed by Worry. One of Woman's Greatest Enemies.

The tendency of the times is to mental overwork.

Among men political ambition and the desire to accumulate property are the stimulants. The question "How shall we keep from starving?" and "Who is to be the next President?" are ever before them. But women are the principal sufferers from the effects of this mental strain. Social ambition and obligations, including church and charity work, contribute the chief. These are usually larger than the physical strength. Therefore the exquisite in the kitchen and laundry, in the parlor and outside is the result, and a state of nervousness and mobilness arises that is undesirable. What shall we do? [illegible]

"Where shall we go when we die?" are the principal questions which engross the minds of women, and in which are involved many minor perplexities.

A thoroughly healthy mind has become one of the rarest of possessions. Among women it is seldom seen, but this is not to be wondered at when we remember how modern life has widened their sphere of activity, quickened their sense of individual responsibility. Some women become morbid by thinking constantly of what they are expected to be. Never was there such high demand upon womanhood as now. They say that they are expected to come up to a lofty standard and that society depends upon them for its highest pleasures. To be an ideal and yet to be severely real is the task set before them. The result is that many women undertake too much. The mind is overstrained to meet unreasonable expectation, and this modern tyranny of ideal women works havoc among those who, most sensitive to duty and impulsive aims, are sure to be most completely sacrificed.

Women are also led into morbidness by what they supposed themselves expected to do. Of late years the church, benevolent institutions and practical organizations for usefulness have laid heavy duties upon them. Nor can it be doubted that in these spheres of action they have rendered immense service to various enterprises. No one would hinder them in good works, and especially in those that belong by nature to womanly sympathy, yet it must be confessed that philanthropy has its temptations to dissipation and overwork as well as the most superficial state of society. Women fall easily into the excitement of these schemes, and sometimes lose sight of the spirit of benevolence, in its broadest sense, in the work engaging their present attention. Sharp trial and disappointment oftentimes follow such labors. The strongest men have to be on the watch against the corroding influence of philanthropic effort. Women if disappointed in such endeavors are apt to grow more intense and less amiable. It surprises a woman not to attain her object, and failure strikes deeply into her heart and reveals itself in injuries to her character. And when the evil in the world is suddenly disclosed to her in all its hideousness it is very likely to produce bitterness and rebellion against the confused and jarring economy of things under which we are living.

The political question alone is sufficient to drive us all—men, women and children—to distraction. Think of the thousands of our citizens whose existence depends, nearly or remotely, on the victory or failure of political parties, and who work all their life on the slippery edges of precipices! Add to this the petty wranglings between neighbors and in families during a campaign, and the concentrated agony of half our population on the morning after an election, or worse still the suspense of weeks that follow when the contest is close.

The morbidness that so often accompanies worry and disappointment is one of woman's greatest foes. It soon becomes a disease, a fierce and formidable assumption that destroys the strength and beauty of her life. If she has a work to do let her do it for love of the work, and not for the popularity or fame or thanks that it may bring, nor disgusted from a sense of duty, for her highest duty is to herself and family. Let woman work, by all means, but let her work be unselfishly and self-forgetful. For in all others she can she have sowing against an evil that does her fearful harm. Let us remember that the most desirable thing we can possess, both for ourselves and for the sake of those with whom we come in contact, is a healthy mind. Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

JEWISH FARMERS.

Account of the Jewish Agricultural Colonies in Russia.

An interesting account is given in a German paper of the Jewish agricultural colonies in Russia. These colonies owe their existence to the initiative of the Jews themselves, who during the reign of Alexander I. displayed a strong desire to devote themselves to agricultural pursuits. In 1858 the total number of agriculturists in Poland was 28,901. Two years later there were in New Russia thirty-five colonies, with a population of 26,356. The governments of Kiev, Volhynia and Podolia contained in 1870 [illegible] fifty-six colonies in which 20,762 Jews were employed. The entire number of Jewish agriculturists does not fall far short of 100,000. The sweet prosperity did not shine upon them before dark periods of persecution came, and it would not have been surprising had they not altogether turned their backs upon agriculture. As it is their wages are not sufficient to maintain them and their families, and they are obliged, when the day's work is over, to add to their earnings by hawking small articles of merchandise. Exchange.

—A gentleman in New Orleans was agreeably surprised to find a plump turkey served up for his dinner, and inquired of his servant how it was obtained. "Why, sah," replied Sambo, "dat turkey war roostin' on our fence five nights so dis mornin' I seize him by de neck ob de fence." N. O. Picayune.

TRICKS IN DRUGS.

A Druggist Reveals Some of the Trade Secrets.

"Do you know that lady who just left the store?" said the proprietor of one of our elegant drug stores last evening as a reporter lit his cigar.

"I have seen her, but I do not know her name."

"Although she has money enough to dress herself her mind and mine. No, sir, my clerks know as she has been prompt in paying her bills for some years. She came from New York and has opened over a place in one of our leading hotels. Pretty to look at, is she? Well, I should not wonder. And during all these years she has purchased her goods in French perfumery from my store. All her [illegible] week, as her hair grows out, she paints removes the application.

"I suppose your customers for that line of goods are not as numerous as they were some years ago."

"I think they are more so."

"What class of ladies purchase their hair preparations?"

"Single ladies mostly. Shop girls and copyists are our chief customers."

"But is it not expensive?"

"It sells for about two dollars and fifty cents per bottle of four ounces. It requires from one to four bottles to convert a head of black or brown hair into a blonde, depending on the depth of black. After this a weekly application is made."

"The original transformation, then, costs from three to ten dollars?"

"Yes, and the girls who use it most must frequently starve themselves in order to save enough money to purchase the preparations. It takes about two weeks to make the change in the first place."

"Is the use of it injurious?"

"It is injurious to the hair and scalp alike."

"Why do the girls use the preparation?"

"I can answer that by asking you why you like blondes better than brunettes."

"Because I don't."

"Most people do. At any rate, the ladies think men like blondes better. They think they look prettier with blonde hair than with black. I do not mean that all ladies have that freak."

"You call this a French preparation. Are there no American goods of this character?"

"We never undertook to sell but one brand of American goods. It was a failure, and was afterwards discovered to be good for sore throat. It is now used for that disease."

"But, say! I want to tell you something. I learned a secret to-day about opium. There is one man in this city who grinds opium for all the wholesale druggists of the city. He told me to-day that nearly half his customers adulterate the drug. One man takes seven pounds of lebrice with every ten pounds of opium. Others make a mixture of four pounds of lebrice and ten of opium. Then, you know, there are many grades of opium, anyway. One brand costs sixteen dollars per pound, while others cost four dollars per pound. It is unnecessary to say that many druggists use the four dollar goods.

"Well, have you any more drug revelations to make?"

"Yes, I could talk all night if you would listen, and you would find out that our trade has secrets as well as others. We don't often tell each other times, though. Nearly every prescription contains 'Squibb's ergot.' Everybody thinks he gets first manufacture. I can tell you that no two druggists in the city write Squibbs ergot. They have other makes that are just about half as much. It is a matter of great importance, very often, too. Of course, cheap manufactures have not the strength and consequently not the effect."

"Anything else?"

"When a prescription is sent to a druggist calling for a four per cent solution of cocaine it generally gets but two per cent. A prescription containing quinine often gets euphonia instead. The latter is much cheaper and is a different drug. There is another drug used by a class of people. Oil of sandalwood is purchased much in all large cities. A genuine article costs eighteen dollars per pound. I am positive there is not a store in the city that has a half pound of pure oil. That commonly used is about twenty per cent. pure. The balance is olive oil. Oh, yes, there is much trickery in the drug business." Chicago Sun.

The Fleet Chamois.

The senses of sight, hearing and smell of the chamois are developed to a maximum, and this fact, taken in association with the animal's sure-footedness among the lofty, snow-covered Alps, in which it has its home, makes hunting it a task of no mean difficulty and danger. Dogs are of no service on the rocky eminences, to which the chamois will retreat when it is pursued, and the sportsman has to rely upon his own sure-footedness and courage in climbing the steep and [illegible] tempted by the sight of game. If too hard pressed that it is driven to the height beyond which it can not go, it is said that it will precipitate itself upon its pursuer, sending him down into the depths below. Besides man, the eagle is an enemy, whose constant endeavor is to obtain the kids from their watchful mothers. Its skin is much valued for its toughness combined with its pliability. Its flesh is also greatly esteemed. N. Y. Post.

HOW TO GROW SMALL.

A Colored Man Tells How He Lost Three Pounds Daily.

A well-patronized barber in a down-town shop, is frequently remarked because of his diminutive stature. A boy in size and appearance, he is yet twenty-seven years old. His weight varies from ninety on both sides of a hundred pounds, but never exceeds one hundred and ten. His face is bright and a good specimen of his racy mind.

"The curious thing about this colored boy is not that he is undersized or unnaturally intelligent, but that he is the embodiment of a singular physical history. His brothers are stepping off the scale and his father, his uncles and cousins, and even his aunts, are larger and heavier than the average of their race. 'Tom' (for in using his real name his identity is concealed as [illegible]) in early life gave promise of a thrifty growth, but this was interfered with by a method that leads to the conviction that one, "by taking thought," can take a cubit from his stature, though he may not add one.

While "in his cups"—latter cups—"Tom" told his story:

"Riding is the life for me. If I was worth a million, I wouldn't be satisfied only when I's astride a hoss, and that's what got me into trouble. I'd have been as big as Bill—you know my brother Bill?—if it hadn't been for hoss racing. I've been riding ever since I was twelve years old, and have made more money in a day at that than in six months of barbering. I won the first race ever run on the State fair grounds. I rode Limbertwig, and, man! but we flew. I'd be riding yet if I hadn't been thrown and hurt two years ago. That's when I got this crooked leg."

"But how about your size? You said you once expected to be as big as Bill."

"Fleshing me in preparing for race, stunted my growth. I've had to lose as high as seven pounds in two days. It's easy enough to gain weight, but maybe you didn't know that we jockeys can lose flesh. How? Well, suppose the riding weight is to be ninety-seven pounds, and me weighing one hundred and five pounds three days before the race. I'd get up early in the morning, strip naked and run around the race-track as hard and as long as I could until the sweat poured off at every pore. I'd then run to a manure pile and be buried in it up to my chin. Then I'd lay exhausted and sweating for hours. Sometimes I'd go to sleep in the manure. After awhile they'd take me out and put me to bed, where I'd stay for six hours, in sweating and sleeping this way I've lost three pounds in a half day, and the next day as much more. I kept on eating just the same as usual, and after a long sleep would feel brisk and well, but mighty lean-like. But no man can grow who is fighting to fall off in flesh this way, and at the close of the racing season I always found myself smaller than at the beginning. By keeping it up for years during my growing year, I made a runt of myself, as you see me now. But I wouldn't give up riding as long as I had two legs and a pair of hands."—Indianapolis News.

PASILINGUA.

Another Universal Language Beside Which "Volapuck" Is Outlandish.

The advocates of a universal language will soon have more than enough systems to choose from. The German papers speak of a new language—"Pasilingua"—which claims especial merits. It is based on living languages, in that all that it contains either now exists or has lived, and down to to-day has remained an active element. The system of the philologist Stelbar is, on account of its close relationship to modern tongues, regarded as superior to the earlier "Volapuck" of Scleyer, which in comparison is said to be outlandish. The "Pasilingua" is a mixture of Teutonic and Romance elements—the mixing, however, being done on scientific principles—yet that it is esoteric is not disputed. It is claimed to be a language for adults, and is especially commended to travelers, commercial men, conductors of hotels and all who are thrown into contact with persons of a nationality different from their own. It is proposed at an early date to issue a French edition of the Pasilingua grammar from Paris, and later an English edition is to be printed at New York. The simplicity of the dictionary is shown by the fact that it is only necessary to give the root forms for the nouns and a part of the adjectives, and all words derived therefrom as verbs, etc., are then formed after definite grammatical rules. The following is an example:

Ta haus a, the house. haus a, to dwell.
ta haus-sa, the large house. haus-ra, the second house. part of the house.
ta hausi-a, the small house. ta hausch-a, a hatched house.
ta haus-ai, the wife of the house. ta haus-ar, the owner of the house.
ta haus-la, house house. haus-o, house.
ta haus-ia, domestic animals. haus-ia, domestic.
ta haus-u, domestic animals. haus-ia, domestic.
ta haus-n, household economy. haus-ado, proceeding from the house.
ta haus-n, household affairs. haus-ado, proceeding from the house.

The Steiner system may not on closer examination justify expectation, but it is at any rate another attempt to solve a difficult problem, the solution of which would be of universal benefit.—Chicago Tribune.

The Congo River.

Stanley says that the length of the Congo river is twenty-one hundred miles, and that the Mississippi and the Nile together would scarcely equal its tribute of water to the ocean. From the mouth of the river a steamer drawing fifteen feet can steam up one hundred and ten miles, at which point a land journey of fifty two miles is taken on account of the rapids. Then another steaming or rowing voyage of eighty-eight miles occurs which is succeeded by a land journey of ninety-five miles. After that it is possible to steam up another ten hundred and sixty miles. Along this route thirteen stations have been constructed among peaceful tribes. Brooklyn Eagle.

CATARRH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 500 patients treated during the past six months, fifty ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is alone the 1884 starting when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally observed by the most intelligent men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon has long adapted his cure to destroy extermination. The accomplished results claim the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is demonstrated, as cases treated by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure. The number of cases being cured, in the treatment, Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street, west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

THURMAN AT THE CAPITOL.

Ex-Senator Thurman of Ohio since his return to Washington is one of the big lions there. A correspondent at the capital gives this pen picture of him.

Ex-Senator Thurman is a frequently seen on the streets of Washington. He has attended some of the receptions, especially at the President's with Mrs. Thurman on his arm.

Never was there such another old fashioned looking couple as these two. Mrs. Thurman is a handsome old lady with gray curls of the style of twenty years ago festooning her pleasant features. She is a good soul, perfectly unpretending but nobody knows better than she does that when Mr. Thurman is considerable of a man. As for the ex Senator, he has lit aged a day since he left the Senate, and has added a wrinkle to the large number he has had for a good many years. He carries his historic face handsomely. As long ago as the first Farmers' Institute in Dundee, under the auspices of the Grange, President Angell said to me that they only wanted a little more help and in [illegible] fifty in four or five years at the most. I would be self-sustaining. Last winter the Legislature was asked for one of their biggest appropriations, and of course they got about what they asked for. Now I can see but very little benefit that the farmers have received for the number of times they have been called upon to reach down in their pockets to help them set up this workshop concern. For I consider any institution that is reared for a particular purpose and fails in that purpose as worthless. I know a great many feel proud of these State institutions and think they show the greatness of the State, but we are too apt to only look on the one side and not take into consideration the actual benefits they are to the people at large and the cost we must pay for their maintenance.

Another great cause of our high taxes can be found in the way our criminal trials are conducted, when a trial is run along for weeks and weeks, and even sometimes running months for no earthly reason, only to please and feed the lawyers, thus costing the county thousands of dollars. As for instance the Holcomb Church case in Jackson, and innumerable other cases which might have been shortened with a far better prospect of the ends of justice being reached. If the people would give our Judges to understand that such cases must be proceeded with without so much idle play of the lawyers, there might be an immense amount of money saved to the people, besides a large amount of precious time saved to those who are obliged to attend those trials.

Now gentlemen, is not it about time that the axe was laid at the root of the tree that bears the fruit for these trials? Is it not about time that we went to work with a will and exterminated this monster that has been so long sapping our subsistence, and filling out poor houses with paupers and our prisons with criminals? Let us banish at once and forever, the saloon and grog shops from the face of our beautiful State. Let us do away with this business that we know produces three fourths of our pauperism and crime.

SCHOOL ITEMS.

Last Wednesday afternoon, we received an invitation from Supt. Hammond to witness some experiments with the new apparatus which were purchased by the late appropriation of the school board.

One of the principal ones is the bichromate of potash battery. With this battery a number of experiments were shown, such as producing electricity by induction, magnetic electricity, showing the art of firing the mine and many others.

The school has also some other new apparatus, such as the induction coils, the Leyden jar, electric magnets, apparatus for showing Archimedes principle, the concave and convex mirror, etc.

Prof. Hammond is now well equipped to give instruction in the natural sciences. The studies of chemistry and natural philosophy are made doubly interesting and useful by the introduction of practical experiments together with the theoretical lessons.

Miss Grace Parkhurst, teacher in the East Branch schools, has had to leave school on account of sickness. Miss Metta Adams has been secured to take her place the remainder of the term.

Miss Lillian Berkey, of Grand Rapids, was a visitor at the schools Wednesday.

ROLL OF HONOR.

A LAST WORD TO THE LOCAL.

The Clinton Local of last week renews its attack on the HERALD. We do not wish to be drawn into a quarrel with the Local. Perhaps we owe our readers an apology for having taken any notice of an attack from such a source. We believe that the HERALD's friendly relations with the business men of Clinton will continue, notwithstanding, and we shall visit Clinton for business purposes, whenever we feel so inclined, the same as Bro. Miles visits Tecumseh. The HERALD is not united in Clinton, that is (that [illegible] the Local. Mr. Miles relations [illegible] the Local are similar to C. K. [illegible]ol's to the HERALD. Our territory is Northern Lenawee County and we shall continue to cultivate it.

The Local, although claiming to be a Clinton paper, is published outside of that county. The HERALD is now running a legal notice which would have gone to the Local, had that paper been printed in Lenawee County.

In regard to the statement that we charged a Clinton business man a quarter column ad. one year for $11.00 or three months for $2.50, we repeat that we never made any such offer, or one that could possibly be so construed, to any Clinton man. The Local claims to be able to prove its assertion by the affidavit of this "Clinton business man." Very well, let the affidavit be produced.

If there is any "Clinton business man" who will swear to a falsehood for the purpose of injuring a neighbor, we shall not hesitate to meet the accusation in another tribunal and in a manner which will test the legal responsibility of both the Local and the "Clinton business man." Until that promised affidavit shall be published this controversy on our part will be closed.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD,

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Queen Esther is coming.

Matinee of Esther next morning [illegible]

[illegible]

Tally sheets are hung in the wood [illegible]

Rev. L. Barnes of Ann Arbor was here Tuesday.

[illegible] are coming for the cantata of Esther.

Mrs. M. S. Smith is recovering from her severe illness.

[illegible]

[illegible] at Hudson.

Geo. Naftzger has sold his farm here and moved to Logan street.

Will Wooden of Battle Creek spent Sunday in Tecumseh.

James McCowan is said to be improving quite rapidly.

New Goods in every department.—W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

$50.00 Buys a good Second-hand piano. Enquire of Hough & Hosmer.

Will Geo. Knapp go to Kansas? We hear a rumor to that effect but hope it will not prove true.

John Schwarz of Macon has taken the Tecumseh HERALD ever since it was edited by B. L. Baxter.

Tecumseh has a promising artist in the person of Frank Swick. He is executing some fine work in his line.

D. M. Ferry & Co's. seed annual for 1880 has arrived. The firm is now in shape to fill all orders that may come.

Remember that the Cantata of Esther will be presented for the benefit of the Library Association. Give them a rousing house.

All friends indebted to us would confer a favor by settling before April 1st, and oblige.

W. & S. W. ANDERSON & Co.

M. B. Rice, of Adrian, is in town this week taking charge of the rehearsals for the cantata of Esther. He drops around to see the HERALD occasionally.

Daniel E. Soper, the present postmaster at Newaygo, and an old Tecumseh boy, was one of the secretaries at the big postmaster's convention held at Chicago last week.

The excursion on the M. & O. last Saturday was well patronized. The morning train East was made up of five coaches all filled, and the regular afternoon train was crowded.

"The worth of suffering" will be the subject of the sermon Sunday morning at 10:30, at the Universalist church. In the evening, by request, a discourse upon "Recognition in Heaven."

Fred H. Hillman, who is teaching near South Lyons, Mich., was home over Sunday. Fred will enter the Agricultural College at Lansing, in about three weeks, at which time his school will close.

The catalogue of the Michigan Military Academy is at hand. The institution is in a flourishing condition and the attendance is increasing every year. The class of 1880 contained fourteen graduates.

Our old friend, Ezra F. Blood was in town last Saturday and called to square his account. He has not been in the village for some time, owing to the severe weather of late. He is enjoying excellent health, however, for a man of his years, and we hope he may continue to do so for many years more.

A grand masquerade ball will be given at the Opera House on Tuesday evening next, March 9th inst. Music by Hunt's full orchestra of nine pieces. Dance tickets $1.00. A first class costumer will be on hand, and prizes will be given. The invitation committee consists of Bert Garlinghouse, W. T. Eccles, Geo. S. Field and Bert Temple.

F. J. Hendershot closes his winter term of school at Macon Corner's with an exhibition at the F. W. Baptist church, Friday evening, March 5th. All who enjoy a good laugh, should not fail to attend. The proceeds to be used in the purchase of an organ for the school. Music by the Macon band. Come boys and bring the girls.

Merit Tells.—The "White" sewing machine commands a higher retail price than does any sewing machine and is sold more easily and in a larger way than the cheap and inferior machines so numerously scattered around. The half million homes containing "White" sewing machines are what pushes it above all others.

The Total Abstinence League held a reception and literary at their room last Friday evening. The hall was crowded, and a very interesting program was presented, which is given below.

Rec.—Miss Julia Wyrill.
Song—Messrs. VanAntwerp and Beebe.
Address—Rev. J. M. Gatchell.
Song—Robert Moir.
Rec.—Miss Grace McNeil.
Readings—Friend McNeil.
Song—Robert Moir.

Mrs. N. R. Brown visited friends at Weston the first of the week.

Miss Cora Inman is visiting at Niles.

Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Kimball were [illegible] Stacy's last Friday.

[illegible] went to Cleveland, O., last Monday, returning the next day.

[illegible] is reported very sick [illegible]

[illegible] home [illegible] visit very [illegible]

[illegible] Wilson ship[illegible] from Holloway [illegible]

[illegible] of B. B. Morey found in another column.

Prof. M. Ballou is one of the very [illegible] Tecumseh.

L. E. Praef of Onsted has moved his family here and gone to work for Joe Wilson.

L. R. Gainsley has a new double column announcement on the fourth page this week.

Miss Minnie Rogers of Springville, is spending a few days at her sister's, Mrs. Joe Smith's.

Lyman Forrestall of Chicago, is spending a few weeks at his mother's, Mrs. Helen Forrestall.

Some of our young people contemplate organizing a young folk's literary and scientific club. This is a move in the right direction.

Adrian has a new musical organization called the Kazoo band. If there is anything in a poetical name, the Kazoo ought to thrive.

Miss L. M. Berkey of Grand Rapids, a former teacher in the High School, is spending a few days in town as the guest of Minnie Keeney.

Our stock of Embroideries and White Goods is very large and attractive. We take pleasure in showing them. W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

On account of the many good singers in the Dickens club, the club was postponed one week to allow them to practice for the Cantata of Queen Esther.

A platform has been laid over the gutter in front of Conklin & Cairnes' which will enable them to make a good display of their agricultural implements.

Our New Carpets are now in; styles are very handsome and prices low—we shall be glad to show them.

W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

T. G. Potter received this morning a telegram announcing the death of Rev. E. R. Hascall, of Detroit. His funeral will be held at the M. E. church in this village, to-morrow at one o'clock.

A palace stock car attracted considerable attention at the L. S. & M. S. depot last Thursday. It contained stalls for 19 horses and was fitted up with all the most modern appliances for that purpose.

Walter Heck has again launched into business for himself, having purchased the photograph gallery formerly occupied by F. D. Brooks. He will open for business next Monday.

Will Smith has left the employ of James Lowry and is now traveling for John J. Freeman, selling cigars. Mr. Freeman has secured a good man to introduce his stock, and we wish Will success in his new undertaking.

Dr. Geo. Howell of Macon, has purchased the house now occupied by Prof. Hammond and will move into the village soon. We shall be glad to see the Doctor's name on the register as a voter in Tecumseh.

The Gardener's Monthly for March is on hand in good time, and from the first page to the last it is filled with interesting matter for horticulturists and gardeners. Send for a sample copy to Chas. H. Marot, 814 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

A large audience filled the Baptist church to overflowing last Sunday evening. At the close of the regular service, three candidates received the rite of baptism. The baptismal service was very impressively rendered by Rev. Mr. Adkins.

The big lock out at the McCormick Binder Works is at an end. The men have gone to work again and the company have made arrangements with C. A. Shayron to handle their mowers and binders here. He has received and set up a sample of the light steel Binder at his Warehouse and would be pleased to have the farmers come in and examine the machine and witness its effectiveness.

The Rev. Mr. Phelps, for the last fifteen years rector of St. Peter's church in this village, having received a very favorable appointment from his Bishop to take charge of the Episcopal parishes in Howell and Brighton, in this State, visited those places last week, and determined to accept the appointment, to take effect April first, proximo. But the feeling of the parishioners in St. Peter's was so averse to the change that a delegation from the parish left for Detroit Wednesday morning to see the Bishop and have the arrangement annulled. What the result will be depends upon the decision of Bishop Harris.

THE VILLAGE ELECTION.

The corporation election passed off very quietly last Monday, as there was but one ticket in the field and hence no chance for a contest. The members of the Council whose terms expired were O. P. Bills, Rufus Adams and George Marsden. They were chosen certain for some years in all their places. They probably did not crave political honors any longer. The council of last year carried three heavy water improvements and left the finances of the village in a flourishing condition. The new council is composed of excellent men and we [illegible] good [illegible] prudence.

Below are the officers elected:

President—Rufus Adams.
Recorder—Frederick B. Wood.
Treasurer—James N. Boyd.
[illegible]
Assessor—Jehiel Davidson, Edgar A. Tribon.

Dr. House was President of the Council last year and the efficient manner in which he discharged his duties entitled him to the compliment of a re-election. Mr. Ames has served on the Council before and hence is not without experience. Mr. James has served the village in various official capacities and always with the utmost credit. Mr. Heck will make a good alderman if he manages public business as well as he does his private affairs. Fred Wood will continue to keep the records and James A. Boyd will carry the home-box ballot for another year. Jehiel Davidson and Edgar A. Tribon are just the men for assessors. We predict that it will prove to be a diligent, honest and efficient council.

WEDDING BELLS.

Another of Tecumseh's fairest daughters has been won, and this time the lucky groom is a Jackson man. On Wednesday the 24th ult., Mr. L. M. Robison of Jackson was united in marriage to Miss Hessie Cupples of this village at the residence of John J. Orr. Nearly one hundred guests were present, among whom were friends from Toledo, Jackson, Hillsdale, Manchester, and Clinton. The bridal gifts were numerous and elegant and fitly symbolized the esteem entertained for the newly married pair. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Babbitt in his happiest manner. The guests were most hospitably entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Orr, and the evening was passed as merry as a marriage bell. The bride has resided in this village from her childhood, and has always been held in high esteem by all. We have no acquaintance with the groom, but sincerely congratulate him upon the wisdom of his choice and extend our best wishes to both for a prosperous journey through life.

Esther the beautiful Queen, will be presented at the Tecumseh Opera House, on Monday, March 8th, '80, conducted by Prof. M. B. Rice of Adrian.

PERSONATIONS.

King Ashasuerus—Mr. M. B. Rice.
Queen—Mrs. L. I. Bidwell.
Haman—Oscar P. Bills.
Zerish—Grace DeWolf.
Zerish's maid of honor—Miss Minnie Keeney.
Mordecai—Mr. J. S. Strong.
Mordecai's sister—Mrs. C. Gridley.

The old folks of Clinton know how to run a paying show. They netted $300 from their concert last week.

Well, gentlemen of the Board of Supervisors, how do you like the township system of caring for the poor as far as you have gone?

Does Adrian want the State Fair? asks an Adrian paper. Well, very likely she does want it, but is she willing to plank down the hard cash to get it? That is the question.

The Record says: "Look around you. Do you not see that it is spring?" Well we have looked around, and we regret to say that the beautiful goddess is not visible in this latitude.

The Adrian Record contained a historical sketch of Tecumseh last week. It was well got up, both the ancient and modern portions of it. Several hundred sample copies of last weeks issue were sent to the Tecumseh postoffice.

One of Michael Hendershot's neighbors in Macon, borrowed four bushels of cloverseed of him the other night while he was asleep. Michael is anxiously trying to find out the name of the borrower.

Fuller's detective bureau, No. 841 Broadway, N. Y., which is acquiring a reputation, is managed by J. M. Fuller, an old Tecumseh boy. He can make a fortune by hunting down the sender of anonymous letters and spring poems to the Tecumseh Herald.

Thank you. Addison has water works of her own—the big pond that separates the sheep from the goats.

The committee whom the Bohemian oat or note "kickers" last week selected to consult Prosecutor Salsbury have not yet performed that duty but will do so next Monday. The anti-Bohemians will hear the result of this legal interview at their adjourned meeting on the following Thursday.—Morenci Observer.

A German farmer of Blissfield is deeply worried in consequence of a note for $200 which he gave for twenty bushels of Bohemian oats. "I no care so much about mineself," remarked the [illegible] fellow in a tone of agitation, but I veels sorry for de man vot buys my note, for they don't can gollect something out me."

The poles are now on the ground for about six miles more of wire, connecting Holloway village with Tecumseh and the C. T. line. Also a mile or more of wire is being put up south of Tipton to the M. & O. depot making about 3½ miles of wire and connecting five towns. Now for Clinton next on. There are at least two who would, if the line was extended to Clinton, put in instruments and the expense would be comparatively slight.—Clinton Local.

FISHING FOR CONGERS.

A Rare Sport for Fearless Fishermen—The Wolf of the Waves.

For those who are hardy enough not to dread a night's exposure in an open boat there are few finer sports than conger-fishing off the coast of Devonshire and Cornwall and all along the edges of the English Channel. There are many "old salts" scattered along the coasts of the Mediterranean and even in these "sober and uninteresting" times there exist "to this day" men who are always ready to aver that a big conger, when hauled up from the rocky bed of the ocean and thrust into a boat, is in the habit of opening his gigantic mouth, gnashing his teeth, and making a desperate onslaught upon the first man that he spies, and, of barking like a dog. It has, indeed, [illegible] and weighing about twenty or thirty pounds, is a truly awkward customer to face when he is drawn into a boat. Alone of fishes, he and his congeners of the eel tribe have as much power of locomotion upon land as they have in the water, and no sooner do they see a human being near them on the element to which they are foreigners than they make up their minds to "go for him" without delay. It is probable that the captured conger is prompted by nervousness rather than by ferocity when he glides towards the enemy, and the noise which issues from his open jaws is attributable to the escape of air from his swimming bladders and not to his possession of barking powers, such as dogs are endowed with.

The best way to pursue is to set forth about five in the evening of a still, soft October day, and to row out to sea for a distance of two or three miles, until the boat reaches the spot where experienced guides know that seven or eight fathoms below lie the reefs and rocks in which the congers reside. The first step is to set the night-lines, which are attached to corks floating on the surface. The line is about the third of an inch in thickness and has strands fastened to it which are wrapped round with waxed twine or cotton from the hooks upward for two or three feet. It has been found by experience that wrappings of this kind are preferable to gimp as protection against the powerful jaws and sharp cutting teeth of the sea-eel.

Having set the night-lines, the fishermen next try their luck with hand-lines, and for the first hour or two after darkness has fallen the fun is at its best. Under these circumstances it is not unusual for a huge conger to get the hook firmly fixed in his jaw, and a desperate struggle between him and his captor then takes place. The hooked fish gets his tail twined round anything firm and solid that is within reach, and snaps vigorously with his jaws at the line, which is drawn tight by the fisherman's strong arm. If the tackle holds, which is not always the case, the tussle ends in the capture of the fish. Although he is by no means so formidable in reality as he seems in appearance, no wise fisherman allows him to wriggle about at the bottom of the boat without instantly taking measures to stun him.

Occasionally an inexperienced boy will allow his wrist to get within reach of the conger's gaping jaws, in which case the bite inflicted upon the arm will leave marks never to be effaced. With what purpose, however, it will be asked, do amateurs quit their comfortable beds and devote the nights to catching a fish which resembles a marsnake and is almost worthless for human food? The answer is that, as poetry is, according to Coleridge, "its own exceeding great reward," so the fun of tugging a big conger up from the ocean's depths is sufficient compensation for a night's exposure at sea. Nothing is more inexplicable and mysterious in the mockery of the ancient Romans than their extraordinary partiality for the "murena," or sea eel. In the days of the Roman Empire enormous sums were expended by wealthy gourmets in keeping up the artificial fish ponds where this dainty fish—as they regarded it—was inclosed. There is a well-known story that among the Romans the "murena" was considered to be most delicate of flavor if it had been fed upon human food. A rich freedman named Pollion was said to be in the habit of giving orders that such of his slaves as he thought deserving of death should be thrown into the stews of fish ponds where his eels were kept. On one occasion a slave belonging to Pollion had the misfortune to break a valuable vase, upon which this cruel man ordered him to be flung to the eels. It is charged, however, that the Emperor Augustus was one of Pollion's guests, and he not only reversed the master's order, but commanded the slaves to break every vessel in the host's mansion. It is impossible for good anglers of the conger to protend that it is palatable. Despite the vague rumor that the cherubs and saints favored flesh of the species as large as the substitute of fairy food, those who occasionally place it in a stewing pan would do well to follow all attempts to dress him for the table.—London Telegraph.

—On a steamer that sailed recently from New York for Liverpool there was a drunken steerage passenger in the uniform of a United States soldier. During the entire passage he subsisted on whisky, and on the arrival of the ship at her destination he disappeared. A month later the same steamer was preparing to leave port. Just as the gang-plank was to be withdrawn, the military passenger reeled on to the ship, flourishing a prepaid steerage certificate. On the homeward passage he admitted that he had not been sober for a moment. He had no money whatever, but obtained all the liquor he wanted by going into saloons and posing as the military representative of a great and free people.

—The largest dog in the country is said to be a St. Bernard owned at Glen Cove, Long Island. He measures seven feet eleven inches from the end of his nose to the tip of his tail, stands twenty-five inches high, and weighs one hundred and ninety-two pounds.

COURT-ROOM APPLAUSE.

Interesting Decision upon a Rather General Abuse.

Many persons who frequent courts in this city seem to regard the proceedings, however important, as a sort of entertainment, and feel at liberty to greet any odd or humorous saying of a witness with laughter, or the expression of any sentiment that pleases them with applause, more or less pronounced. But of late demonstrations of applause, owing to the stern exercise of the judicial power of punishment for contempt in a number of instances, are rare, and are confined as a rule to the moment when the verdict in a case that has excited much attention is rendered. They are quickly cut short with sharp raps of the judicial gavel and an impressive admonition. Laughter, however, [illegible] unintentionally humorous witness, who says no end of bright things in rapid succession, is on the witness stand. When the Judge's gavel falls, some unthinking spectators look as though they thought that the Judge was a "Dry-as-dust," with no appreciation of humor. They do not apparently bear in mind that their expression of feeling may have an undefinable influence upon the minds of the jury, who, after all, are men, with sympathies that may be affected by the atmosphere of the prevailing sentiment in the court room. To the credit of the Judges of the courts in this city, almost without exception, it may be said that they are very watchful of the tempers of their audience, and promptly reprove or check unseemly demonstrations of feeling. A recent decision of the Supreme Court of the State of Texas has an interesting bearing upon this subject. In the case of Owen against the State, an election case recently decided, the highest court of the Lone Star State delivered itself as follows:

It was shown that a large number of persons attended the trial during the whole time that it was in progress. Whenever anything favorable to the relator occurred they greeted it with bursts of applause. The court checked these demonstrations from time to time, but they were renewed as often as similar occasions called them forth, and they do not seem to have been effectually and finally quelled until the trial was over. It is a sad if not a humiliating thought that such unbecoming conduct in a court of justice could not have been effectually and permanently stopped upon its first demonstration. The District Courts are armed with full power to punish contempts. This was a contempt of court of a most serious character—calculated as it was to control the verdict of the jury by outside influences. The court would have been justified in using the strong arm of the law to suppress this conduct, or, if that failed, in stopping the trial on the case until it was finally assured there would be no further demonstration.

As this was not done there was nothing left for us but to apply the rule universally enforced by this court when the jury may have been influenced in giving an incorrect verdict by passion or prejudice, caused by the misconduct of others. We have, in such cases, constantly reversed the judgment and ordered a new trial. This is a proper case for the enforcement of that rule.

The applause may not have influenced the jury, and perhaps did not, but as it had tendency so to do, and the jury had admitted one ballot-box and excluded others upon substantially the same testimony, there is a probability that their finding may have been affected, in some measure, by the applause, however conscientiously they have may attempted to act in making up their verdict.

A new trial was granted.—N. Y. Sun.

AUBER'S MODESTY.

A Great Composer Who Would Not Listen to His Own Music.

Everybody has heard the story of Mozart writing the overture to "Don Juan" at the very last moment, and rehearsing it while the ink was not dry with which it was written. When Auber wrote "La Sirene," he rehearsed everything except the overture, which he left for the dress rehearsal the night before the performance. It was played, and displeased not only the performers, but, more than any one, Auber himself. It was nine o'clock in the evening. He said: "Go on rehearsing. I have something to do, but I will be back as soon as I can." At midnight he returned and brought back the full manuscript of a new overture. He gave it at once to the copyist, and said to him: "It would be fine fun if this should be worse than the other one." "Impossible," said the copyist, who meant to be very courteous. The next evening the parts were all written out on the desks, and the overture was uproariously encored. Auber would never attend a performance of any of his operas. "If I did," he said, "I could never write another note." The delight he took in Rossini's music made him one evening go to hear "William Tell," and he sat quietly waiting for the charming violoncello trio, which begins the overture. The conductor arrived and gave the sign. Oh, horror! Instead of the low E on the cello a smashing diminished seventh [illegible] Through a prima donna's indisposition "William Tell" could not be given, and unknown to Auber the spectacle had been changed and his "Masaniello" was put in the place of "Tell." So he jumped up as quickly as his green eight-seven years would allow and ran away from his new work.—Temple Bar.

—A New York merchant advertised for a cashier. A well-dressed gentleman applied for the position. The merchant looked over his references and said: "Your credentials are excellent, but I would like to ask you a question." "Certainly, sir." "Have you been vaccinated?" "Yes, sir." "That will do. We have no use for your services. The only cashier who can be relied on to any extent whatever is the one who is afraid of the Canadian small-pox."—N. Y. Sun.

—Cross-ties are estimated to cost the railroads of this country six million dollars a year.

BEAUTIFUL CLOCKS.

A New Orleans Judge [illegible] the Blooming of Flowers.

The Judge's house was over, in the French quarter of New Orleans, unattractive outside but as soon as you got inside broad hall and a cool breeze struck you, fresh, without exaggeration, with the balm of a thousand flowers. The hall led right through the house and opened into a secular fairy-land of flowers. A garden the like of which I had never dreamed of. It was surrounded by a high wall and rods of iron in a front covered under the rim. The white jasmine and green ivy, and a growth of grape-fruit in hanging baskets rose in about and the first flower we stopped at was a large oval plot set out with the small plants around the edge. "This," said the Judge, "is my clock. When mine is in bloom [illegible] around the plot and it was four o'clock, and so it was. The four o'clock was in bloom. "In fact," said the story teller, "the clock was made up of flowers." In the center was a pair of hands, of wood, covered with some beautiful vine, but they had nothing, however, to do with the time telling.

The plan was this: The Judge had noticed that at almost every hour in the day some plant in bloom. Acting on this principle, he had selected plants of different hours and placed them in a circle, twenty-four in number, one for every hour. For example, at the top of the earthen clock, at twelve o'clock, was planted the portulacca, and he told me it would bloom at 11.50 and rarely miss. At the hours of one, two and three he had different varieties of this same plant, all of which bloomed at the hour opposite to which it was planted. At four o'clock he had our common plant of that name, and you all know how you can depend on that. At five the garden niotago came out, at six the germanium triste and at seven the evening primrose. Opposite eight o'clock he had the bona nox, and at nine the silent nocthora—all these blooming at or near the time given. At ten o'clock, if I remember rightly, he had a cactus, at eleven another kind, and at twelve the night blooming cereus.

Half of the year some of the plants don't bloom at all. The plants opposite one and two in the morning were cacti that bloomed about that time, and at three was planted the common salsify, and at four the chicory, at five the sow thistle and at six the dandelion.—San Francisco Call.

TUBS OF RUBIES.

The Magnificent Gem Which Was Stolen by a Burmese Maid of Honor.

Concerning King Thebaw's rubies, a well-informed correspondent writes: "It is certainly curious that we have heard nothing of the Mandalay Palace gems. The value of the objects discovered there we have been told is not great. Yet the capital has been undisturbed by war for over thirty years, if we omit the rebellion of 1866, when there was no plundering. During all that time the previous stores of the Ruby Mines and of the Noble Serpentine has been steadily added to. Many is the poor wretch who has been crucified for chipping down a gem that, from its size, ought to have been handed over to the Arbiter of Existence. Gentlemen who, in the time of Thebaw's father, the Convener of the Fifth Great Synod, were much about the palace, have spoken of silver bowls the size of washing-tubs filled to the lip with uncut rubies, and at least one spoke enthusiastically of the occasion on which he was allowed to thrust his bare arms nearly up to the shoulder in a huge châlice full of these gems. There was in particular one great stone, called the Nan-zin Buddamyá, which, by its magnificence, was supposed to typify the dynasty. It was unmounted, and, therefore, can not be the gem in his ring concerning which the dethroned King was so plaintive, and it was guarded with the most sedulous care. Nevertheless, in 1880 a maid of honor managed to purloin it, and actually succeeded in getting it out of the palace concealed on her person in a very extraordinary way. She was, however, captured before she got rid of the stone. It was restored to its place and more jealously guarded than ever, and the hapless damsel was put to death with the fiendish ingenuities in which Soopayah-lat, the Queen, was a past master." One of the newspaper dispatches tells us (continues the same correspondent) that the palace had been very much looted by the royal body-guard. No doubt these gentry made for the store of rubies first of all. There was not much else that was really valuable, except the royal utensils, the gold spittoon and betel-box, the model of the Hentha, the carrying-bird of Vishnu, the jewelled cups and trays and what-not, besides the hundreds of silver bowls kept for domestic uses and for presents to visitors.—St. James' Gazette.

—Snow varies greatly in weight, according to the condition of the atmosphere. When very dry and "feathery," scarcely anything is lighter than a handful of snow. On an average it is found that a cubic yard weighs about [illegible] or about one-twelfth of the weight of an equal bulk of water. Ice is lighter than water, but in nothing like the same proportion, and a certain quantity of snow would, on the average, weigh only about one-eleventh of the same volume of ice. The reason of course lies in the greater compactness of the ice.—Boston Budget.

"THE PERIL and THE RESCUE"

We have chosen as our Trade-Mark, because it so aptly illustrates a woman sinking under the pain and weakness, which, when all else failed, is finally rescued by Zoa-Phora, a remedy so kindly for all complaints peculiar to the sex.

Would a drowning person think to drift weed and overgrown the [illegible]

Many a woman realizes that [illegible] year by year, month by month, [illegible] unfortunate [illegible] distressing [illegible] pick-ked, will finally [illegible] power [illegible]. She [illegible] Zoa-Phora is the [illegible] remedy [illegible] of the [illegible] that never has failed, [illegible] never will. Many have [illegible] otherwise, and [illegible] such testimony.

Colonia, Mich., Dec. [illegible], 1885. Gentlemen: One of your circulars came to my notice to-day and it reminds me of an old and very valuable friend, one that saved my life 12 years ago and because I had not needed its help since I had almost forgotten it. I was 16 years old, I coughed continually, and had chills every day; I was as miserable as any one could be and live. A lady who knew the cause of my illness persuaded my mother to have me use Zoa-Phora—it was called Woman's Friend then—before it had used one bottle my cough and chills ceased. I kept on and used two bottles and they brought me out all right. I afterwards married and now the mother of three nice, hearty children. I feel that I owe a great deal to Zoa-Phora. I hope it will become well known and that every woman and girl who needs it will use it. If you will send me some circulars I will give them to accountantes and do all I can to help you. Yours truly, MRS. LAURA FURMAN.

To the Zoa-Phora Medicine Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Colonia, Dec. [illegible], 1885. Yes, use my letter, name and all, in any way that it will help you, and refer to me freely. LAURA FURMAN.

Uniontville, O., April 7, 1882. I have suffered five long years with female weakness. I spent nearly one hundred dollars per year for medicine and doctors, receiving but little benefit. I was finally persuaded to try Zoa-Phora. I have used four bottles, and now consider myself cured. But I keep it on hand, and a dose now and then keeps me in splendid health. Any woman who needs such a remedy, will find Zoa-Phora worth its weight in gold. Mrs. L. R. F.

Fort Gratiot, Mich., Jan. [illegible], 1885. R. Pengel & Co., Kalamazoo, Mich. Gentlemen: I had one customer, not long ago, who shortened a great deal, and could not be cured. As she had taken so many different kinds of patent medicines, I would try no more. I wanted to know whether there was any merit in Zoa-Phora or not, so I gave her a bottle on the condition that if it did not help her I would not charge her for it. The second bottle cured her. I have a number of customers using Zoa-Phora with good satisfaction. Respectfully, R. G. BURWELL, Druggist.

Independence, Iowa, Feb. 12, 1885. Zoa-Phora Medicine Co.—Gentlemen: I write you this letter about my wife being sickly, you probably will be interested in what I have to say.

I procured of our druggist two bottles of Zoa-Phora my wife used the bottles and it worked wonders. I would willingly have given $50 for the benefit it has done her. If I could not have your Zoa-Phora in the house, I could not rest at ease. Yours truly, W. H. S.

Burgettstown, O., March 9, 1885. I have been suffering from female weakness for the past three years. I have been using Zoa-Phora and have found great relief. Miss I. [illegible]

Meadon, Mich., Jan. 15, 1885. I cannot express my gratitude for the Benefit which I have received from your Woman's Friend. It has cured me of a distressing disease of 20 years' standing. I have had all other treatments that could be mentioned and all to no benefit. For two years I could not stand on my feet. I have taken three bottles of your medicine and am cured. It is surprising to my family and to my physician. Yours with respect, Mrs. C. P.

Detroit, Mich., [illegible], 1885. Dr. Pengel & Co.—Gentlemen: I have just been talking with one of my customers about your medicine, and think you would like to know what she says. Mrs. [illegible] has tried every thing she could hear of with the greatest success. Her health is the best of many standing. She has faithfully tried other celebrated remedies, and pronounces Zoa-Phora superior to any other. It is with pleasure that she makes this statement, and has no objection to its publication as a means of having others try it.

I have sold it to other ladies, who have used it with most flattering results. All give it high and such positive merit. Yours respectfully, ROBERT FULLER, Pharmacist, 375 Baker St., Detroit.

Pomeroy, Wis., Dec. [illegible], 1884. Dr. Pengel & Co.—My daughter is all right now, and would say many thanks. After doctoring four years with the best physicians we could procure, she was so reduced that she weighed only 70 lbs., was not able to do a single part of the work, and her cure by your medicine is almost a miracle. She looks at her well, healthy, blooming self, weighs 121 lbs., and is strong and well. Very respectfully, Mrs. B. F. [illegible]

THE FULL NAMES of these witnesses and of scores more, just as good, we will furnish privately to any lady who may wish to write to them.

Sometimes a woman fears that she has Female Weakness, when her trouble is of an entirely different nature. A careful study of our book, "Facts for Women," (which we send to ladies only, in sealed envelopes, on receipt of 10 cents,) would either show her that she has no such complaint, or teach her what to do if she has.

The price of Zoa-Phora is, one bottle for $1, or six bottles for $5. Where druggists do not keep it, on an order for $5 worth we will prepay the express. The dose is small. It is therefore inexpensive.

ADMONITION TO MOTHERS.

Do not let your daughters say, as so many have said to us again and again, almost in the same words:

"If my mother had known and had taught me the facts contained in your book, instead of leaving me to learn them by bitter experience, how much better it would have been for me."

"If my mother had known of Zoa-Phora, and had used it to correct my ailments when they first began, how much of suffering I should have escaped."

For Books or confidential testimonials, Address, Private Secretary of Zoa-Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Wm. B. Knapp has removed to Tecumseh. He came from Tecumseh here several years ago.

Peter Lee, of Howell, Mich., who has been spending the winter with friends here, will return home this week.

On Tuesday last while Mr. Leigh Ir. accompanied by his grandson, Mr. L. Shart, was driving along the east of the ginger bee horse suddenly darted from the road capsizing the carriage. Fortunately neither of the ladies were seriously hurt. The carriage however was all smashed. Monday evening while J. Hopkins family were quietly resting at home their house was set back and nearly the latter warning was given by about thirty in flames. The fire commenced to pour in the house from front and rear. John and Amanda were somewhat frightened but soon got steady nerved enough to remember that it was not far from their youth wooden gum cursary. After all had been fed from the bountifully laden table the boys and aunties were enticed into the front room for a few moments while the table was again loaded, this time with a new spread a new set of linen, handsome silk handkerchiefs, etc., etc. The company was then invited to the kitchen again and the Hon. M. Hand made a neat presentation speech which was responded to in a pleasant way by Mr. Hand.

FARMER'S NOTE CLUB

[illegible] Mr. Everhart opened the discussion. The question [illegible] for many years and as yet [illegible] but at the present time. Some argue that high license would remedy the evil, but it has not succeeded and the only way is to stop the manufacture, but the issue will have to be a political one, and no other way, for it has to be struck at the very root. The people must say "liquor must go," and when they do, it will be done. There is no question that our taxes are high and greatly augmented by the sale of liquor.

Mr. Kellogg. I am not prepared to say it is not right, for I suppose the state statutes regular that, but our taxes are undoubtedly made burdensome by the sale of liquor. There is no way to remedy this only to go in masses to the polls and show that the people are in earnest and determined that liquor shall not be manufactured, and thus lighten our taxes. We must send only those men to the legislature that are pledged to use their influence for the right.

Mr. Griswold. I am sure there is no just right to license any person to do wrong, and I contend no man or legislature has a right to license a wrong. Thirty years our taxes are nearly trebled by the sale of liquor, for the wrong makes paupers and criminals, and they have to be taken care of, and it calls for large appropriations. The state should take care of its criminals [illegible] but it is a good [illegible] for this case and jails are [illegible] the saloons. I think the agitations have just begun in this state. We keep on licensing saloons. He then cited the last [illegible] and legislation [illegible] by Iona township. I think no one [illegible] a just right to license saloons, but it is a legal right and our villages [illegible] are benefited thereby [illegible]

THE FORSAKEN FARM-HOUSE.

Against the wooded hills it struggle.
Ghost of a dead home, staring through
Its broken lights on wasted fields
Where old-time harvests grew.

Unroofed, dismantled by storm and flood,
The poor forsaken farm-house lie,
Once rich and rife with golden corn
And ring alone breathing rye.

Of beautiful herb and flower yearly
The garden plot no trace keeps;
Thistles and nettles only thrive
The snake, the lizard, creeps.

Of the apiary once thickly peopled
Not one remains to tell the story
Of the busy hives that thrilled the air
With the joy of their glory.

His track in the dewy grass and flower
Of bee and butterfly the sole
And all the music a chimney's moan
He sings to the deaf ears.

The barns, once chock full of plenty
Are now but a ruin and a
Neighbourhood gleaners in vain
Seek the grain they once knew.

No house-dogs bark his advent
No children run to Welcome the stranger with
Or with

So sad, so drear! It seems almost
Some haunting presence must haunt its
That down you shadowy lane some ghost
Might drive his spectral kine!

THE ROMANCE OF A MINER.

There was quite a numerous gathering around the small mahogany tables of a New York cafe the other night as I entered. It was a brilliant though not an unusual picture, as one stood in the doorway and watched this curious gathering of young bloods and listened to their gay talk. Right in the midst of this throng sat one whose appearance made him seem out of place in such surroundings.

He was an oldish-looking man, but still in the full vigor of health, a big, strapping, uncouth fellow, of almost giant proportions. A rough diamond, and one that no polishing can alter, would be the comment of a person who would watch this singular character a short while, and it would be the truest estimate of the man that could be made.

As I sat watching him, and wondering what curious train of circumstances had brought him among the present company, I learned something of his history. His name is Ely—"Jim" Ely, as I remember—and not twenty years ago he struck a silver mine out in Nevada that made him a millionaire thrice over and the biggest man in the territory. He dragged the woman whom he loved from ignorance and poverty to education and wealth, gave her his name and fortune, and from that rich sowing has harvested a life of wrecked hopes and disappointed ambitions.

"Jim" Ely lived in Missouri until along somewhere in the early '50s, when he left his home and made for the Pacific Slope. The gold craze of '49 was still rampant through the country, and he had set his mind on joining the sturdy army of fortune seekers who were then steadily wending their way West to the land of promise. But there was no gilt edge to the life he led out there for many years. He moved from one mining camp to another with even less than ordinary run of luck and a great deal worse than the ordinary run of hardships, even in that desolate country. It was a rather long and narrow lane that battered until the mental lie was came in the Winter of 1860-61, when he finally woke up one morning to find that the wealth he had dreamed of was actually his. The "find" was in Pioche, Lincoln County, Nevada, and it has since been known to the world as the Raymond & Ely mine, for both men had worked together on the claim and had a full partnership in it. Over $10,000,000 in dividends alone have since been taken out of this property, and its yield is almost as rich now as it ever was. The two men, whose spades first uncovered its riches retained their interest in it but a few years. However, when each returned to San Francisco Raymond took his million and lived out a life of ease and plenty. Ely, however, was of a different turn of mind. He promptly fell into the extravagant and reckless ways of life which made Virginia City and the "Gulch" in the days of the bonanza kings. But he was still young in the good ride of fortune, and the speculations he plunged into more than doubled the million he took out of this mine. For a time—a time, though—he was the central figure in the wild round of gay dissipation which men of his mould made the business of the Western life at that time. He gave himself a palatial home, made lots of friends, and then began to look around him for a partner for life.

What fate or caprice brought him into Salt Lake City in the Spring of 1871 no one knows; but he went there and saw a pretty face, and—long, brawny, uncultured fellow as he was—it fascinated him. It was the face of a young Mormon girl—a handsome flaxen-haired little thing, whose beauty was all the more resplendent in his eyes—because it shone out from the coarse surroundings in which she lived. Like himself, she was a girl of fine manners and education, for she had neither. She was a product of the rude, unfurnished life which prevailed out there then, and, like himself, had little use for books or learning.

The story goes that she was dazzled and almost cowed when Jim Ely first met her—that she saw in her the making of a queen for his palace—that she had a few years of training and education in a more cultured sphere. So he boldly met her, San Francisco, and told the news that he was going to marry. When she became of age. All these years he lived in the way of thing he for he possessed a very grumpy manner. He was rough, and to the day he made her his wife [illegible] who were present at the [illegible] that she seemed every inch a queen and the handsomest woman on the slope. This was in the spring of 1875. On the same day he gave her a gift of what was then about half his fortune—$1,500,000. Not satisfied with what she had learned in San Francisco, she proposed a trip for educational purposes through Europe and thither the happy couple departed on their honeymoon.

The metamorphosis in the husband at the end of [illegible] was too much for the poor girl. She lost all interest in her native [illegible] and pleasures and became [illegible]. Not so with Jim Ely, though. He had no use for the [illegible] and dropped them [illegible] one day to take up the [illegible] ways he had dropped a few years before in the building of his fortune. The tide of fortune turned the wheel against him, however. Things that had before turned to gold almost at his touch now [illegible]. His wealth vanished, and speculation [illegible] made heavy inroads on his fortune.

With his reckless habits of life, his confidence in his own luck and the knowledge that his wife still kept intact the million that he had given her on their wedding day, he went on going forward in fortune until almost the last penny was gone. His circle of friends grew narrower as his bank account became smaller, until at last he was compelled to appeal to them for some of her fortune.

He made a trip to Paris, where she was living. He found her living in surroundings even more gorgeous than those he had thought her in years ago, and [illegible] in San Francisco, so unlike the [illegible] of the careless and [illegible] of the Western capital.

A queen, indeed, she was in her own right, for the [illegible] of a [illegible] had [illegible] her half [illegible] on Dr. [illegible] and [illegible] to divide with him the [illegible] given her. They got [illegible] of his [illegible] fortune [illegible] his have [illegible] school. He took the next steamer for this country, and has not crossed the Atlantic again. He also brought his two children to America with him and placed them in a school on Staten Island, where they are getting the education which made their mother what she is.

Ely's mode of living has not been changed much by his misfortunes. He still has a little money—enough to eke out a scant existence, and I am told that he is trying to induce some people to give him money for the development of a property which he has discovered in Colorado. He says that there is five million dollars in a little hole in the cells it, out there, and he wants to make it with the man who will give him the means to get at it. In the meantime he will be making the most of life out of the fortune that he gave her, and has probably blotted out of her mind whatever recollections she may have had of people and conditions on this side of the Atlantic. Reports from Paris say that she is sharing there with a Frenchman of broken fortune. As I heard the last incident of this romantic story and glanced at the rough-looking man who is its hero and who was within a few feet of me, I began to think that truth was really stranger than fiction after all.

Origin of Cheap Journalism.

It is not generally known that Horace Greeley edited the first one-cent daily newspaper ever published in this or any country. It was not sold for one cent until near the close of its brief career, though its owner, Dr. Horatio D. Shepard, was very desirous it should be put at that price from the start. Shepard got his idea from the rapidity with which he had noticed that anything and everything that cost only a cent was sold in Chatham street fifty odd years ago. He had very little money, but so was so confident of success, if the thing were once begun, that he went to the Spirit of the Times office, where Greeley was then a young compositor, and asked him to be its editor. The clever type-setter declared that two cents was the lowest rate that would sustain a daily, and he supported his statement with so many solid reasons that the New York Morning Post appeared January 1, 1834, at the figure named. The [illegible] had a deal of luck, but still sold several hundred copies daily. On the third day of the third week it received its quietus, having been put out by several days for [illegible]. The demand was so much larger [illegible] owner believed it, and if it had been [illegible] the price from the beginning it would have prospered. Francis W. Story, who was Greeley's partner, read the [illegible] a severe lecture on the madness of his scheme. Indeed, everybody made [illegible] told you so" [illegible] who tried to [illegible] regard, relic, [illegible] to mind what Story had said [illegible] months after the [illegible] issued for one cent, and, as everybody knows, made a fortune. The fortunes of [illegible] trust. He had explained his plan to a [illegible] who responded to the proposition of the new undertaking with a [illegible] roseate.

Where the Newspaper Goes.

Dr. Anderson, of Wilmington, Conn., recently preached a sermon on Modern Journalism, in which he said: "You enter one of the simple rural homes of Connecticut, at some distance it may be, from any railroad station or busy manufacturing center. It is a lonely looking place, for the children of the house have grown up and gone away, and the father and his wife are growing old. The routine of their lives is narrow, and they go through it day by day as if nothing else in the world were quite so important as that. You fancy then this elderly couple will be found sojourning still in the Middle Ages. Just look about you, my friend, and you will see that once or twice a week it brings to these persons tidings from the ends of the earth, you will find that they have more time to read it and to keep the run of affairs than you or your busy city are, and when you sit down to talk with them you will learn that they are not fossilized well informed and perhaps intuitive people. The affairs of the state not only of the nation and of foreign nations, are familiar to them. They know something not only of agriculture, but also of manufacturing, commerce and art, from social life in other places and other times. And so while they [illegible] the old news-sheet [illegible] shut in for the long winter nights the thoughts of their lives are [illegible] their own [illegible] world [illegible] through which they look [illegible] the mirror in which they see [illegible] the newspaper."

Miss Minnie Conklin, whose death is noticed elsewhere, was a highly esteemed young lady of this city. The blow is a severe one to the family of Mr Conklin. The young girl was brought home from Norwalk week before last having gone thither on a visit. She was a favorite with the young people of the city and proved to be an acquaintance.

Miss Conklin is quite well known among the youthful people of this place, having worked for some time with J. L. Daly in the boot and shoe store. She was here a week ago Saturday on a visit and from here went to Norwalk where she was taken sick. She will be sorely missed in her circle of friends. Peace to her memory.

Eastern farmers thus have a great advantage over Western farmers whose creameries are mostly proprietary. Many of the western creamery proprietors have not paid the farmers the past season more than eight or ten cents for cream enough to make one pound of butter, the proprietors have made all the money there was to be made. Of course the eastern creameries have a little advantage in being nearer markets, but not as much as appears. Though freight rates on butter are almost as low as dead freights to the same markets from points in the East. The greatest difference is the difference in management.

Clearly, therefore, the creamery should be managed on the co-operative plan. By the Cooley cream gathering system the milk is set in the well known Cooley creameries. The milk is strained into these cans as soon as drawn from the udder, the cover is put on, and the can submerged at once in the water within the creamery. The cream of every patron is thus raised under exactly the same conditions, as much so as if the milk were all set at the factory without the cream raising quantities of the milk being injured by transportation. The cream gathering system thus possesses the only alleged advantages of the milk system, none of its disadvantages and many other points. The great advantage of the cream-gathering system is that the patron living near the creamery possesses no advantage over the patron living at a distance, the gatherer collects the cream of each and the expense is borne equally by all. The patrons do not have to spend valuable time delivering their cream to the factory, it is taken at their own doors. The expense of this method is reduced to a minimum, because of the decreased bulk of cream compared with milk. Those who used the butcher of daily or milk factories on railroad stations twice daily during the busy summer season will appreciate this point.

Among the other features of cream gathering is the very important fact that the skim milk is left on the farm. If nearby market prices will take it at the farmer's door for three fourths of a cent to one and one fourth cents per quart the patrons of several connected creameries sell all their skim milk at one cent per quart the year round. It not only [illegible] the farmer [illegible]

[illegible] and thus [illegible] where income of the farm. Now [illegible] material shrinkage of cream in handling owing to its smaller bulk compared with the loss on a large quantity of milk. The skim milk being kept sweet and fresh commands a high price in market. The element of injustice is reduced to the minimum. Milk varies enormously in the quantity of butter it will produce in cream the variation is comparatively slight. The same quantity of Jersey milk will produce more pounds of cream than an equal quantity of native cows milk. Thus the owner of the Jerseys or good cows gets the benefit of their superior product, instead of having to pay them an equality with poor milk. There is, therefore, every inducement to improve our stock and breed cows that will give the greatest amount of cream. The result is seen in the better [illegible] of [illegible] gathering creameries.

Wm. Deuroff is now giving his entire attention to his Life Insurance business, and he is taking many new risks in the old Northwestern Mutual. He has written several policies lately on Hudson people. He spends most of his time now on the road.

Ira Ladd, of Adrian township, has left at this office three mammoth hens eggs. One measures nine inches in circumference, and the other two, seven inches each. His imbred light Brahma hens did the business. He sells these eggs at $1 00 per setting.

Mrs. H. G. Woodward and little daughter of Adrian, and Mrs. Young, of Monroe, who have been spending a few days here, the guests of J. C. O'Neil, returned to Adrian to-day, where Mrs. Young will make a short visit before returning to her home.

The interior of Lilley, Bidwell & Co's banking house has been lately renovated and papered. The wall and ceiling decorations are of beautiful design and finish and harmonize exactly with the furniture in the bank. The work reflects much credit upon both the merchant and paper hangers, and the entire room presents a most artistic appearance. C. A. Wright & Co. furnished the paper, Chiverall & McNeil did the work.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD,

Blankett & Chamberlain, the new proprietors of the Central Hotel in Adrian, seem to be the right men in the right place. The patronage of the house has enjoyed a healthy increase since they assumed control. A good table, with some to bring and attentive waiters, make a combination that is sure to succeed in running a hotel.

An old friend of ours in Franklin indulges in the following kind words in a private letter to the HERALD, which we take the liberty of publishing. Letters of this character always make an editor feel good:

We have taken your paper for many years, indeed for almost all the years of its existence; and unless something unforeseen happens to prevent, shall unquestionably continue to take it until time ends, the chapter either for it or us. We look for it and welcome it as an old friend, and would as soon think of going to bed without supper as without reading the HERALD on the evening of its arrival, and the spicy articles of the editor are not even the least of its attractions.

Mrs. A. D. Lawrence returned from New Orleans yesterday.

Col. L. Saviers of St. Louis, Mich. is in town on a short visit.

Don't forget the race at the rink next Saturday evening.

Rev. Lemuel Barnes has moved into his residence on Pottawatomie St.

Lyn Hunt Bidwell, who has been laid up with rheumatism, is about again.

Emma Aveline left for Hudson last week where she will spend a few months visiting.

Mr. D. J. Wallwood and Miss Hattie Rushton, of Macon, were in town last Tuesday.

There was an old fashioned crowd, was on the ground yesterday.

Mr. & Mrs. C. A. Blackmar of Cambridge, were in town Monday, and attended the Cantata on that evening.

The LaRue Bros. gave another of of their unique entertainments consisting of fancy skating, at the rink last Saturday evening.

John J. Neeley arrived in town last Saturday, and expects to remain here about two weeks. He is doing well up at Kalkaska.

Our stock of Embroideries and White Goods is very large and attractive. We take pleasure in showing them. W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

A three mile race between Claude VanTyne and Nelson Aten is the attraction at the rink next Saturday evening. Good music will be in attendance.

C. A. Sharp and wife took their little boy to Detroit, Tuesday, to consult Dr. T. A. McGraw, who says he has hip disease in the right hip. Dr. House accompanied them.

The W. H. M. Society of the M. E. church, will hold a social at the residence of Jehiel Davidson, to morrow Friday evening. A good time is anticipated, and everyone invited.

The Johnston Eye Echo, is the title of a new trade journal issued by the Johnston Optical Co. of Detroit. It is a neat four page paper and contains much matter of interest to opticians.

The young people's Society connected with the Baptist church, will hold a maple sugar festival at the chapel, Tuesday March 16. Syrup served at 6 P. M. and during the evening. Come one, Come all.

There are now three boys from the Tecumseh High School about to enter the Agricultural College, and we understand one more contemplates so doing. This is quite a showing for the High School.

Scove Walker, a former employe of the HERALD office, who now works in the Courier office at East Saginaw, has been taking a week's respite from duty, among his friends in Brooklyn, Norvell and Tecumseh.

"Uncle Chuck" is what we call A. E. Kennedy now, and all because Jim Kennedy, of Raisin, is the father of a fine girl. Congratulations are in order. Our friend, J. B., is keeping up the reputation of the family.

About a dozen members of the Tecumseh Odd Fellows' Lodge paid the Adrian Lodge, I. O. O. F. a visit last Monday evening. They were most hospitably entertained by their Adrian brethern and report a grand time.

"Cultivate the poetical side of your nature," says the editor of the Sunday School Times. If the good man will accept a position in the HERALD sanctum and read our mail for three months, his ambition will be fully satisfied.

Elliott Gray received 70 bushels of Irish seed oats the first of the week, direct from the "ould sod." They were shipped via. the Anchor Line. The ocean freight was $5 15, while the duty, custom house fees, etc., made the total freight bill at New York, $11.45.

The next regular meeting of the Myrtle Club will be held at the residence of Mrs. L. A. Chapman, Thursday evening, March 18th, when a literary program will be carried out after which a Box Social. Each lady who attends will please bring a box containing lunch for two, which will be sold at auction, the buyer to share lunch with the lady who brought it. All are cordially invited.

The masquerade party last Tuesday evening was an enjoyable affair, but it was some like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet expunged. Hunt's orchestra [illegible] the galleries were well filled with spectators, but the maskers did not materialize in overwhelming numbers. Only six couple came to time. The dancers of the village seemed to be seized simultaneously with an unquenchable thirst to ornament the reserved seats in the gallery. Besides, we are informed by Bert Carlinghouse and W. T. Eccles, that their names were used on the invitation committee without their knowledge or consent. This act created dissatisfaction and hence the maskers remained at home or enrolled themselves among the spectators. After the removal of the masks the dancers in the gallery went down upon the floor and enjoyed three hours trippingly to the tunes of superb music.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

The Clinton village election was held last Monday.

Miss Sadie Taylor of Franklin will teach a term of school in Ridgeway.

Mumps and matrimony seem to couple down in the vicinity of Hudson.

J. B. Cooper of Blissfield is serving as a grand juror at the current term of court.

Morenci is booming. The report is that over one hundred stores will be in the city by the first of May.

Chas. R. Keeler, the new postmaster at Palmyra, is said to be a worthy Republican.

A [illegible] has been organized comprising the principal cities of the State.

Clinton will have an old folks kitchen and costume concert on the 29th. Now clear the kitchen.

Hon. J. R. Bennett of Adrian is engaged in raising a mustache. Our advice to Joseph is: Don't.

The March session of the Board of Supervisors will begin on Monday the 22d inst. Get your bills ready.

Who will fill the vacant cadetship at West Point? Some Lenawee county boy should be found who will fill the bill.

Prof. Payne of Ann Arbor, lectured at Raisin Valley Seminary last Friday evening. Subject: Education among the Jews.

A movement is on foot at Blissfield to compel the saloons to observe the Sunday law by keeping their back doors shut.

The County Grange had an interesting meeting last Wednesday evening when the newly elected officers were publicly installed.

The Knights of Labor have an organization in Adrian, which is growing rapidly. They claim that they will soon have 500 members.

Mrs. Drake, of Morenci, has just received a pension on account of the death of a son in the army, and the arrears aggregate $1,900.

The startling intelligence reaches us from Washington that the Adrian post office will remain where it is. Yes, it will doubtless remain where it is until it shall be moved.

Adrian is agitating the project of a free public library, to be domiciled in the new city hall. The lower floor of the city hall would make admirable quarters for such a library.

The Morenci High School commencement exercises will be held on April 2d, this year. This early day is fixed to accommodate one of the graduates, Miss Nellie McFarlane, who wishes to go to Dakota.

Mrs. Mary Tarsney, the mother of Congressman Tarsney, who died at East Saginaw last week, formerly resided at Hudson in this county. John C., another son, is now a prominent lawyer at Kansas City.

The Hudson Baptists have received a large number of converts and they expect more soon. We hope to be able to announce at an early day that the Hudson editors have seen the error of their ways and been dipped.

Two boys at the Hillsdale county house were sent to cut wood a few days ago. They did not like the work and skipped out with the axes, which they have since been arrested for stealing, and are now in jail awaiting trial.—Hudson Post.

We had just put the last stick of wood in the stove and had commenced wondering if we were really going to freeze to death, when a Springville subscriber drove up with a load of wood. We hope when the roads get smoother other subscribers will do likewise.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The religious interest still continues at the Baptist church. About fifty have already made a profession of "Faith in Christ," some thirty two having already been baptized and others are waiting to follow in this ordinance.—Hudson Gazette.

A petition is in circulation for the establishment of a postoffice at Clarksville station in this township, to be called Rea, and for the appointment of Edward Moore as postmaster.—Dundee Reporter.

The Chonaguen band are endeavoring to secure a position at a summer resort. If they go, they will be accompanied by two or three of the Chonaguen band of Ann Arbor, who will join in rendering the orchestra and brass band. They propose to carry nine men.—Saline Observer.

If they succeed in carrying their names without tumbling down, that is all any reasonable man ought to expect.

The house of Elisha Eddy, situated about a mile south of the village, was discovered to be in flames about eleven o'clock Tuesday morning, but the fire had already obtained such headway that, notwithstanding prompt assistance, the structure was entirely consumed. The house was an old one. All of the furniture was saved. The fire originated from a pipe in the stove-pipe in the kitchen. There was an insurance on both house and furniture in the Farmers' mutual. THE GRAB BAG.

The Clinton town[illegible] is in truth is far too small. When ever they have a ball Or anything else that's tall, A team can hardly crawl Into the room, without a brawl. Next day the people yell And the local press howl While young and old and all Roll like rolling ball. Let Clinton the township incorporate.

Prof. Field.—Why, Steve, you look as rocky as a drop in the bucket. What's the matter?

Steve Stacy.—Well, the fact is, I'm disgusted. There was only one surprise for the surprise on election, and hence one office was chaffed out of a job. Had it we better get fire bright to run at least four tickets on the first Monday in April. Don't you think so?

Fred.—That's my notion exactly. Sail in.

Thos. Kyle is a good paymaster for he pays promptly, and square up to the mark, even to the half cent, said the HERALD clerk as he credited Mr. Kyle with 37½ cents on the book last Saturday.

"How so?" queried the Boss.

"I'll tell you how. I dropped into Kyle & Haynes' shop this forenoon and Tommy proposed to pay the balance on his account which happened to be 37½ cents. As we could not make the exact change he took a one cent piece from his pocket, filed it in two and paid me the half cent—If every man was as precise as he is, the government would have to coin a new half cent copper to accommodate the people.

Sam and Jim are two faithful employees in the Lake Shore depot at Tecumseh. Jim handles "Baggage," Sam is "Clerk." Last Monday morning Jim was overheard giving Sam a little private advice.

"Now, Sam, I don't like to remonstrate with you. This little episode of yesterday may reach the ears of the officials and then Good-bye to your cake. If you must go fishing on the Brownville pond on Sunday, if you must drop into an air hole and come home with nary a fish, for Heaven's sake go to Sunday School first. In the event of trouble, you would then stand a fair show of proving an alibi. Take my advice, Sam, and attend Sunday School regularly every Sabbath hereafter."

The HERALD would like to know Whether next summer's peach crop is blasted.

Whether the author of Newberg Notes is a man or a woman.

Whether Wiggins, the weather prophet, has gone to purgatory.

Whether the mud will ever dry up between Britton and Ridgeway.

Whether this sugar weather is likely to continue.

Whether the Prohibitionists will run a ticket in our town this spring.

Whether Mrs. Fadover has recovered from her indisposition.

Whether the rural spring poet will ever get knocked on the head or die a natural death.

Whether it is not about time for last year's new maple sugar to appear in this market.

Whether the gentleman who was to lead the discussion at the last meeting of the Tecumseh & Franklin Club has yet found his manuscript.

The month of February was an extra good one in this office for anonymous communications and contributions of spring poetry. The following letter is so unique in character, so elegant in diction and such a model of beautiful chirography and good grammar that we depart from our usual custom and print it entire.—Scientific Illustrator.

H. E. Anderson has a new card this week containing useful information. Read it carefully.

We learn this morning that the net proceeds of the Cantata will be about $50. The committee in charge in behalf of the Library Association desire to extend their thanks to all who took part, and especially to the best class, for their valuable services.

From the appearance of the crowd in the White Sewing Machine company's last evening, one would suppose the "White" was all the machine manufactured. It was almost impossible to look in any direction without seeing a poster, lithograph or something telling of that popular machine. The "White" speaks for itself in its excellence. Tecumseh is no exception as the "White" is just as thoroughly advertised, sold and known from Maine to California as it is here. The square dealing of G. P. Sparks has been a great benefit to the "White" around Tecumseh. No Sewing machine ever had such a sale as has the "White," now numbering over a half million.

The Monkeys and the Boa.

An officer stationed at Kalladgee, in India, was once climbing a rocky hill when he and a native who accompanied him witnessed the following episode. A poor monkey was being slowly enwrapped, in the voluminous folds of an enormous boa, its bones breaking like pipe stems by the pressure (crushing) the reptile incloses itself, leaving a crushed, unrecognizable mass. The numerous monkeys on the trees were in the greatest state of excitement, running wildly about, gesticulating, chattering, and moaning piteously, evidently powerless to help their comrade. While the snake was putting the finishing touches to its victim, the officer and native were [illegible] of a strong, [illegible] shot, which [illegible] to make it run away, [illegible] as it should be dislodged. Spurred [illegible] they reached the scene of action, [illegible] thoroughly aroused, beheaded a [illegible] of stiff, looking more like a log than anything more lively. On the summit above, a group of monkeys were assembled and three or four of the largest and strongest were occupied in [illegible] the trees from the precipice edge. By enormous exertion made, [illegible] with a science quite unusual to monkeys—they at length succeeded in pushing the rock until it trembled just over the boa's head, then, uttering a yell of triumph, they dropped it over the miscreant's prey. It struck the boa on the head, mashing it to a jelly. As its great head fished about ineffectually in its last struggle, there was a general chorus of exultation—man pounding his near relative. If we believe some of our instructors, over this well-accomplished act of vengeance.

Napoleon Called a Donkey.

Mrs Grundy, writing to the Boston Courier from Washington, says: It is pleasant to know that there is no chance this year in Maine Bonaparte's family to keep her off of society, for she is one of the most favorable agreeable ladies one meets in Washington. Those who knew her grandfather, Daniel Webster, and even those who knew him only by his portraits, think Mme. Bonaparte's head and some of her features remarkably like his. She has a fine portrait of him in her house here and has many pieces of the furniture of the Bonaparte family all in the best of style. The patents of the first Napoleon are among these. Mme Bonaparte tells an amusing joke in connection with the portraits. When her house in Washington was first completed, a painter who had never seen the inside of it wrote for a New York magazine, which published the article, a description of the residence and its furniture, and said that the most prominent place, that above the mantel, in the spacious living-room, was occupied by a full length, life-size portrait of the first Napoleon, instead of which there happened to be only a small picture of animals, [illegible] a donkey. Madame Bonaparte says that her husband deserved, when he read that she supposed that he had been as valuable as a good many paid names, but he had never before heard of a donkey being mistaken for him.

Tobogganing.

The toboggan is a sled with a single runner, which spreads clear across the bottom of the sled. The top of the toboggan is just like the bottom. It is somewhat thicker than a sheet of writing paper and about as long as an after-dinner speech. Its seating capacity is limited only by the number of people who can get on it. The urbane and gentlemanly coachdriver sits aft and uses one of his lithe and willowy legs for a steering apparatus, by which he guides the toboggan some way or other. It is easy to slide down hill on a toboggan. In fact, first you start slowly, you can't do anything else. Then you could fall off. That is easily done. The trouble is you hold on, so [illegible] you slide. Still, if you have to fall, you'd better fall off the toboggan half way down the slide, for the fall, down at the bottom, slows you up a little. Anyhow, the sides keep you [illegible] the slide every time. It is a sickening sort of a sensation. The prince and I wasted up the slide when for the purpose of sliding down the banister on a [illegible]. The presidential chair [illegible] the place all somebody could do to get [illegible] the top of the slide. I got my breath [illegible] and we had to go up and get it. There it was, a great gasp three and one half inches long, sticking in the air like an icicle, just where I had gasped it when we started. I took it down, stuck it into my left lung and began to breathe again with great freedom. The toboggan is to any other way of getting down hill what flying is to going to sleep. It is mad hurry, and it was down hill all the way. I would rather have a toboggan than a pair of wings any day.

P. S.—There is usually an angel on the toboggan, if the young man has a tendency to confirm the impression that you are going down with wings.

N. B.—A young Canadian of broad experience assures me that Toronto angels really have wings, as some bright one on the hill has to do with a hand, in the other arm to hold the angel from flying away.

Adelaide—I have known the same thing to happen in the United States.

A Once Famous Car.

A party of young gentlemen of Albany, N. Y., somewhat [illegible] bought [illegible] and being desirous of relieving the monotony of a long ride, repaired to the smoking car. It was an odd-looking vehicle, and despite its age and palpable wear and tear, it still retained some evidence of former grandeur. The young men noted this, and one of them remarked to the conductor that he was a [illegible] of a [illegible] for a smoking car. "Why, I'm right," returned the ticket gatherer, "I'm sorry to see the old car come to such a pass as this. It was upon this car that the body of President Lincoln was carried from Albany to Buffalo, upon the occasion of that memorable funeral in 1865. But [illegible] the association of that sad event vividly impressed upon our memories. In one end of the car we have a large photograph of Washington, and in the other one of Lincoln. Both are entwined in flags, and the upper parts of the car are appropriately decorated." "What's the number of the car?" queried one of the excursionists. "No. 100," and [illegible] conductor, every inch a [illegible] local to Coughnawaga.

ACTORS IN BURNT CORK.

Two Noted Minstrels Speak on Different Styles of Fun.

The famous burnt-cork minstrels, Billy Birch and Hughey Dougherty, are coining money on the Pacific coast. An Alta reporter says that in San Francisco one night last week Birch and Dougherty rehearsed old times after the play. A crowd of listeners good-natured enough to them said a word to the effect mentioned. They started Billy Birch off.

"There ain't any such thing. If you imitate a nigger you've got to talk slang, tell a kind of jokes that people are fond of, and you can put everything you think in their mouths. It won't go. You've got to mix with them, and handle them up to it like a [illegible] [illegible] away from Mobile then we want to get off the ship."

I suppose the different people in different parts of the country want different styles of fun, though, don't they, Billy?

"Of course. [illegible] Why, [illegible] over. With minstrels and vaudevilles, of course, it's [illegible] They don't [illegible] in one city and starve to death in another on account of the taste of the people, but as for requiring a different style of minstrel joke for different localities, that is all nonsense. The Bostonians are just the same as the Pittsburgians, or the Chicagoers, or the Chinese, for that matter; their culture hasn't anything to do with it, and they will howl over an old mule story just as they would over a joke sold in four-story words."

"You're right about that, William," broke in Mr. Dougherty, who is the worst singer in the world, "but there is a great difference in audiences. One night you can pump stuff into 'em through a straw and they'll be wild. Next night a Gatling gun wouldn't raise a smile. It's great to find 'em when they feel like ball players and just catch everything on the fly; but when they're cold I do feel so depressed that I want to join the church. Member the night, William, when you got tired at a crowd that wouldn't laugh, and suggested prayer?"

"I do for a fact. That was in New York, wasn't it? Oh, that audience was a paralyzer. We just pounded 'em with gags and couldn't win a smile. Finally I said, sort of solemn like, 'Let us pray,' and you bet that fetched 'em. They didn't catch on for a minute, then they yelled, and for the balance of the evening they were the most appreciative audience I ever had. It's a good scheme when you've got a dull crowd to pick out some man that looks like a keynote, and just play at him until you bring him down, then you'll catch the others sure."

Mr. Froude in a Sleeping Car.

The following sleeping car incident, which occurred during Froude's last visit to this country, is taken from his published work, "Oceana." "Among the friends who had come with us from Auckland was an English gentleman, Colonel——, Highland refined, perhaps extra refined—whom the mince-meat game played a trick upon. Happily with his other good qualities he had a fair share of humor, and sense of what he could and what he could not do. As some [illegible] we stopped late one night, [illegible] had been put into the sleeping car with [illegible] We were going to bed and paid no attention to them. UNDER-NUTRITION.

A State of the System Frequently Produced by Over-Eating.

It should be carefully borne in mind that no food can possibly nourish the body which is not digested, turned to blood, then to the tissues of the body. The digestive powers, like any organ or the body as a whole, may become debilitated, their vitality so exhausted so crippled, as noted in the preceding [illegible] being [illegible] by pertinent, often not more than one meal a day. If such a case of necessity the system can be but one-fourth nourished, as a legitimate result. Under such circumstances the relish, or the urgent desire in small matters, resort to various devices to [illegible] appetite, and for a season [illegible] of which may rouse, stimulate, whip the powers into a seeming activity, producing a false, apparent appetite, the gratification of which adds no real nourishment to the system, but exhausts its vitality, to be followed by debility, aggravated dyspepsia, or, in popular parlance, "nervous prostration," another name for the "piggishness" of an eccentric author. Such victims of the quacks are told that they are starving—practically true—and that while taking their nostrums they "may eat what they please," well knowing that there are many who demand just this license, those to whom eating is the great business of life, their most important enjoyment. (Some affect to believe that there is no body, no physical laws, with no digestive powers to be outraged by gluttony. A very pleasing doctrine to this class, favoring sensualism, but they will find that there is a stomach to assert its rights, soon to torture them with the pangs of dyspepsia.) Such will learn, in due time, that the stomach demands rest, that it can not, will not, toil all of the time, will not long attempt to dispose of the most indigestible foods, will not allow itself to be forced by excitants and "appetizers" at will, but, that it will cease to perform its required toils, compelling its oppressor to subsist on a very small allowance, on the little which can be digested under such circumstances, the rest fermenting, decaying in the stomach, causing no little disturbance and suffering. Such will be compelled to learn that the stomach has a given capacity, that it is subject to the general laws of the body, and that to be long nourished the most successfully a moderate amount of food must be taken, that adapted to the circumstances. They must learn that a small amount of food, thoroughly digested, will better sustain the body than five times the quantity but one-fifth digested, the putrifying mass, unappropriated, causing "blood-poisoning."

It is indeed fortunate that dyspeptics and general invalids can be nourished by the extracts of food, such as do not demand digestion, do not tax the stomach, still affording all needed nourishment, at least for this class. Instead of the fruits, the juices may be expressed, containing their nutrition. The same is true of the grains, the clear part of a thin gruel, such as is made of oatmeal, etc., containing a good share of nourishment, yet demanding no more labor of the stomach than the disposition of the same quantity of water, the same principle applying to most forms of food, the solids, such articles as milk being an exception, except that must be first changed to a solid, to curd, as a preparatory step in the digestive process. A part of the nourishment of the day, or all of it, may be taken in this pure liquid state, containing no solids, and in this way so resting the stomach that it may be able to resume its usual duties in due time, waiting till it has a fair share of vitality. One need not fear starvation while thus nourished by liquids, though it is not best too long to suspend the digestive process.—Dr. Trall, in Golden Rule.

SHE TAKES THEM IN.

New York City Absorbing the Big Pick Men of the Country.

New York goes on swallowing up millionaires in its capacious maw year after year. The same great strength of territory from which the millionaires already have drawn supplies of the luxuries of living furnishes an annual new supply of millionaires themselves. New York gets salmon and fruit from the Golden Gate, and the cables of her rich mine team with arrivals of food from every state and Territory in the intervening space. So too, she has millionaires for all these States. I was reminded of this by a recent chat with Rand Stone, of Cleveland, a large carpet dealer and wealthy citizen of the Forest City. As soon as one of our citizens becomes wealthy he comes to New York [illegible] and [illegible] recently Colonel Oliver H. Payne decided to make this city his home, and only a short time ago John Rockafeller came on here and bought himself a mansion. They are both of the Standard Oil Company, which has already contributed one of the Rockafellers and John M. Flagler to the list of your millionaires. Colonel Payne is the wealthiest man of the lot, though he has the least reputation for wealth. He had a large fortune left him by his grandfather, John Rockafellow was President of the Standard. He had the reputation of being rich. But I can understand how it came about that he had this reputation while Colonel Payne did not. He would go out driving on the Lake roads. When he drove up to a tavern the hostler was called for to take his horses and was tipped well for it. The word was passed around that the elegant gentleman was Mr. Rockafeller, President of the Standard Oil Company, and very wealthy. Colonel Payne, with twice as much wealth, driving out to the same place, would put his own horses out and see himself that they were cared for before he went in to his own dinner. It wasn't meanness in the matter of tips, for he spent just as much money that way as the other man, but pure love of his animals. Yet he got none of that reputation which the other man's ways carried with him. It was only when he bought a half million property in New York and presented it to his sister that Cleveland woke up to the fact that he must be enormously wealthy. His property in Cleveland alone is valued at about eight or ten million dollars."—Gath, in Cincinnati Enquirer.

WAGNER AS A BOY.

The Earliest Works of the Author and Composer of "Lohengrin."

Wilhelm Richard Wagner was born at Leipzig, March 22, 1813. When he was nine, he went to school, where he was the despair of the teacher who instructed him in music; he paid no attention to his practicing, but seized every opportunity of repeating the melodies that he heard, especially those of "Der Freischutz," which had already kindled his powerful imagination. Ancient history, mythology, Greek and Latin were his favorite studies, but his heart was really in none of these, for he had a secret aim which absorbed all his thoughts and feelings—he was a poet! In his eleventh year, he won a prize for the best poem on a dead school-mate, and, soon after this he translated the first twelve books of the Odyssey. He taught himself English, and immediately became so absorbed in Shakespeare that he decided to write a tragedy. For two long years he toiled, and during this period he contrived to kill off forty-two people in his drama. He was forced to relent, however, and to recall them as ghosts in the last act in order to have performers enough to play the parts. Meanwhile he had left Dresden, where he had been living, and entered a school at Leipzig, but he had so neglected his studies for musical composition that he was put back a class; this so discouraged him that he gave himself entirely to his tragedy. When he had nearly finished it, he first heard Beethoven's music. This had so strong an influence over him that he determined to set his tragedy to music, and purchased a book on thorough-bass to prepare himself for his task. So fascinated did he become with the study that he determined to be a poet no longer, but that music should have the devotion of his life. When his family learned of his tragedy, they were much troubled, for they felt it was the cause of his backwardness at school; but when they found him to be writing music, they were in despair, for they believed it to be nothing more than a fancy, and that it might do the boy great harm. He was not to be discouraged, however, and composed in secret. But at last he was placed under the instruction of Theodore Weinlig, a man steeped in the spirit of "Father Bach," who put him through a six months' study of counterpoint. Now he married and loved Mozart.—Lippott's Tribune, in St. Nicholas.

WASHINGTON'S MOTHER.

A Woman Born to Command and to Inspire Respect.

"She was a woman born to command, and since she was left alone with a large and an estate to care for, she took the reins into her own hands, and [illegible] She used to drive about in an old-fashioned open chaise, visiting the various farms on her farm, just as a planter would do on horseback. The story is told that she had given an aged day-laborer how to do a piece of work, and he had seen fit to do it differently, because he thought his way a better one. He showed her the improvement.

"And pray," said the lady, who gave not the exercise of judgment in the matter, "I command you, sir, there is nothing left for you but to obey."

I think that George Washington owed the strong traits in his character, the strong spirit and a spirit of order and method, to his mother. She taught him many lessons and gave him many rules, but, after all, it was her character shaping his which was most powerful. She taught him self-reliance, but her lessons were not half so forcible as her own independence. Hezekiah Butterworth, in St. Nicholas.

DEFECTIVE HEARING.

Various Causes by Which the Sense of Hearing is Affected.

The ear consists of the outward, middle and internal ear. The first ends at the drum (tympanum or membrane). The middle begins at the other side of the drum, and is a cavity containing the singular shaped little bones (malleus, anvil and stirrup) which cover the ear-vibrations, communicating by the drum to the vesicle in the wall of the internal ear. The latter contains a wonderful mechanism, by which the vibrations are transformed into sensations of sound through the medium of countless delicate nerves, and are thence conveyed to the proper auditory center in the brain. The middle cavity is filled with air, which is fed by a tube (eustachian), to keep up the necessary connection between the air within and the air without. The middle ear and tube are lined with mucous membrane, which also covers the little bones (ossicles). The membrane of the internal ear secretes a limpid fluid (serum). The nerves are kept bathed in this fluid (endolymph).

Defective hearing may have its source in either division of the ear. It is quite frequent from an accumulation of hardened wax in the internal passage, but the physician can readily detect the obstruction, and remove it. The drum and adjacent parts may become inflamed by insects crawling into the passages, by small objects introduced within them, by sharp particles of salt crystals of sea water, by oil, used as a remedy. The middle ear may be inflamed from scarlet fever and some other diseases, and the drum thus perforated, and the whole cavity and the ossicles be so affected by adhesions and otherwise as to destroy or impair their use. Even a slight form of inflammation may thicken and stiffen the membrane which covers the ossicles and the drum externally, and thus impede their action and blunt the hearing. A similar inflammation may cause an obstruction of the eustachian tube, with a like result. The delicate nerves of the internal ear may come to have a peculiar irritability, giving rise to the strange symptoms that mark "Meniere's disease"—staggering, a sense of whirling, nausea, etc. Or they may be temporarily exhausted and paralyzed, through mental strain, causing a sudden loss of hearing, with a sense of numbness in the ear. This can be relieved by medicine, or it may cease spontaneously, and return again from the same cause.

There is also, according to a high authority in the London Lancet, a deafness, more or less pronounced, due to a deficiency in the blood-supply of the ear, from the arteries having become roughened and narrowed by a long continued, unrecognized inflammation of the coats of the blood-vessels. In such cases, other arteries of the body are in a similar condition, which the stethoscope can readily detect. This defect is not incurable, though difficult of cure.—Tomlin's Composition.

LIQUIFIED AIR.

Two Air Liquids, Different in Appearance and in Composition.

In a recent communication to the Comptes Rendus on the liquefaction of air, Herr S. Wroblewski states that he has obtained from two air liquids, different in appearance and in composition, which can exist together as separate layers with a perfectly visible meniscus between them. To obtain this result, Herr Wroblewski liquefied at −142° C. a certain quantity of air in the tube of the apparatus which he employs for using permanent gases as cooling mixtures. He then allowed a quantity of gaseous air to enter the tube, so that the pressure of the gas having become equal to forty centimeters, and its optical density the same as that of the liquid, the meniscus entirely disappeared. He then slowly lessened the pressure, and at the moment when the gauge indicated a pressure of about 37.6 atmospheres, he saw a new meniscus. A few minutes afterward the first meniscus reappeared at the place it was seen to disappear, and at the same moment two liquids, different in character, were distinctly seen, one on top of the other. The liquids remained separated for several seconds. Afterward a current of very small bubbles formed and ascended, detaching themselves from the meniscus separating the two liquids.

In consequence of this phenomenon, the upper liquid became a little cloudy, the meniscus, gradually destroyed by the current, ultimately disappeared altogether, and the last result was a single liquid homogeneous in appearance. In this experiment, air (which is a completely colorless liquid) presents an enigmatical optical phenomenon, which immediately precedes the appearance of the upper meniscus. This part of the tube assumes a fine orange color, which vanishes immediately upon the formation of the meniscus. Nothing like this ever precedes the formation of the lower meniscus. In consequence of a small modification introduced into the apparatus, Herr Wroblewski has succeeded in taking at will sufficient quantity of either the upper or the lower liquid. The lower liquid contained 21.8 to 21.9 parts of oxygen, the upper one only contained 17.5 to 18.7 of the single element.—Nature, London.

The Rank of Farmers.

It is said that in Japan the farmers have since ancient times ranked next to the statesmen or military class. With a little more humanity with American methods and machinery they will probably aspire to the first rank in the nation. This pride of calling should extend to the farmers of all countries, and especially those of our great Republic. For who can be, change, progress, improvement, independent? No one should be compelled by the stubborness of his own dotage, or by his wife who wants to sell, to cultivate, or intelligently direct the cultivation of, from twenty-five to one hundred or more acres of land in a country like ours.—Christian Advocate.

March April May

When the weather grows warmer, that extreme tired feeling, want of appetite, dullness, languor, and lassitude, affect almost the entire human family, and scrofula and other diseases caused by humors manifest themselves with many. It is now seasonable to throw off this debility and expel humors from the blood with tonic and alterative medicines, like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

I could not sleep, and would get up in the morning with hardly the strength to get out of bed. I had no appetite, and my face was all broken out with pimples. I thought I would try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and some other medicine, I found I could sleep well, my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, O.

"I had been much troubled by general debility. Last spring Hood's Sarsaparilla proved just the thing needed. I derived an immense amount of benefit. I never felt better." H. F. MILLET, Boston, Mass.

At this season the system is more liable to the baneful effects of impure, unhealthy food and unwholesome. The impurities of the blood, the deranged digestion and the weak condition of the body, caused by the long, trying winter, call for the prompt, thorough and decisive action of a reliable medicine, such as we believe Hood's Sarsaparilla to be. I was very much run down, I had no particular appetite, was tired out from overwork, and it did me up." MRS. C. E. SIMMONS, Lowell, Mass.

"For seven years, spring and fall, I was for two weeks was not free from pimples at all. I suffered very much. Last May I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken two bottles, the sores healed and the humor left me." C. A. ARNOLD, Arnold, Me.

"There is no blood purifier equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E. S. PHELPS, Rochester, N. Y.

ABOUT ARSON.

Some Interesting Facts About Incendiarism

"A strange thing about the crime of arson is that incendiaries seem to be [illegible] ignorant of the nature [illegible] of their crime," said Fire Inspector Shay. "Take and observe the common [illegible] in Brooklyn fires. I remember one case where a man tore off a piece of lath and plaster, [illegible] his [illegible] piled up a lot of pine kindling against the hole, and set fire to it. [illegible] the fire burned a [illegible] the carpets saturated with kerosene and cans of oil near the point [illegible]

[illegible] is that it is almost impossible to convict a person of [illegible] arson. In the first case [illegible] nearly all the furniture had been removed to the man's little cheap [illegible] had been taken to the house of a relative, and he himself had gone to the [illegible] shortly before the fire was discovered. He proved an alibi, and was acquitted. It always takes considerable time for the fire to make its appearance, and in the meantime the incendiary is getting as far away from the scene as possible. We have to rely on circumstantial evidence, and sometimes the juries nearly always let the guilty man go.

[illegible] fires are most frequent in [illegible] months. Right after New Year's, when trade is dull, they increase in number. The time of the moon has no influence on their frequency.

Most of the incendiary fires are committed by men who are in failing circumstances. They burn their property for the insurance that is on it. Such business properties are regarded as legitimate prey in financial straits.

There is a large number of persons who seem to have no motive for committing arson, who are [illegible] on the suspicion of incendiarism. I recollect one well-to-do [illegible] who four times set fire to the house he owned and in which he lived. He was not heavily insured, in fact his insurance was light. He made a [illegible] his mahogany, then in a closet, again in a chair between his knees, and so forth, and [illegible] he had been among the [illegible]. His family was not at home, and he sent the girl over from home each time to prevent accidents.

Another man saturated a lot of linen clothes with kerosene, rolled them up tightly, and stored them away in a pine box [illegible] of combustible [illegible]. He had no use for the oil when the fire was [illegible], and it had evidently consisted of a spontaneous combustion [illegible] the work. A lip started in the [illegible] and the charred remains of clothes were discovered afterward. No motive could be discovered for the crime. The [illegible] sometimes burn what people [illegible] property as well as their own.

I should say that from [illegible] of fires. Yesterday [illegible] young [illegible] makes [illegible] the arrest of them. There are [illegible] number of [illegible] in the [illegible] of them. [illegible]

MARRIAGE IN BOKHARA.

The Peculiar Customs, Practised Among the Uzbeckians

[illegible] the parents [illegible] in making the contract [illegible] sometimes happens that the girl refuses and runs away, but she is [illegible] compelled in such cases [illegible] said. According to custom a bride groom is not supposed to see his bride before the marriage, but the matron often presents one of the female attendants who has [illegible] of the bridegroom, in place of the intended bride to her house, and so arranges for the meeting to meet. When the match has been made and the wedding day fixed, a money security is set down by the bridegroom, in case of his wishing hereafter to divorce his wife. After this point is settled the mullah or priest reads a prayer [illegible] bride through a closed door where she consents to marry such a one, and on her assuming the [illegible] the bridegroom [illegible] the bride. The remaining water is then drunk by [illegible] At the close of the ceremony the [illegible] and [illegible] in which [illegible] the Dignitaries of the State. WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, March 5, 1886

The grand enterprise has been nipped out in detail and encouragement comes from every side. The main question now is how to get Congress. Senator Gorman of Maryland, has introduced a [illegible] for this celebration in the Senate, and he says he has every reason to believe that the bill which appropriates $[illegible] to defray expenses will be adopted. Editor Stacy of the HERALD, was in the village on Saturday. We wonder if it was in the interest of the mud between here and Britton, or some feminine scheme.

Mrs. Dove of Raisin, spent a week with her son, Charles, returning home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson went to Adrian Thursday of last week to attend the funeral of their cousin, Miss Minnie Conklin, that took place Friday afternoon.

Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Wilson and Miss Katy Willitt of Blissfield spent Saturday and Sunday at the Prof's old home, W. R. Wilson's.

The attendance at the literary was very large and the exercises passed off nicely. Those who took part in the dialogue took their parts in a manner that was a credit to themselves and with interest to the society. The next meeting will be held March 26, when a program will be presented with some new features.

Mrs. Minnie Cadieux, during the year commencing March 10th, 1885, to March 10th, 1886, did the following baking for a family of six: Cookies, 4,905; pies, 592; cakes, 283; fried cakes, 837; loaves of bread, 698; besides numberless Johnny cakes, short cakes, pan cakes and puddings.

Friday morning, about one o'clock, our citizens were aroused from their slumbers by the cry fire, and found the east barn of Mrs. M. A. Barrett to be in flames. The loss is not very heavy as it was empty. It is supposed to have caught fire from the east bound freight train.

Mrs. Rhoda Dowling from Sand Lake, visited friends here last week.

Miss Fannie Cone of Hudson, visited relatives and called on friends in the village and vicinity last week, returning home Saturday.

Martin Palmer returned to Hillsdale Wednesday and will pursue his course of studies at the College.

Miss May Boding of Manchester, was the guest of Miss Lou Arner for the past week, leaving for home Wednesday noon.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

Base ball and boxing gloves begin to make their appearance.

Several students attended the teacher's examination in Tecumseh last Saturday.

There is still considerable sickness among students. Some have been obliged to leave school on account of poor health.

Singing school closed last week. Visitors from Raisin were present.

Meetings are being held at the Valley meeting house during the present week.

Bert Ashley and Geo. Sherman visited at the Seminary last Sunday. They were on their way home from teacher's examination.

The Seminary library society adjourned at its last meeting, subject to the call of the President the first of next term.

Prof. Payne's lecture was well attended. His audience felt that they were well paid for their attention. We understand that the professor thinks there has been some progress in the school during the past year.

A large audience gathered Wednesday evening, March 10th, to listen to Rev. E. B. Sutton lecture upon the subject of prohibition at the Seminary.

Carlisle Simonds and wife write that they safely reached their new home and hope to get moved into their house in a few days.

The next neighborhood literary society will meet at the home of Joshua Taylor. Thackary is the author for the evening. A biographical sketch, reviews, essays, declamations and a debate make up the program.

FLASHES BY THE C. T. LINE.

Ask Beg Leighthorn how he intends to pay dunnages by Telegram.

Pay Day is the interest on the ground for an addition to his house.

The inhabitants of the Harry District, Franklin are troubled with the big head—antique.

Joe Gray and we understand that Jim intends moving west. We hope he will conclude to remain in Tecumseh.

Miss Stewart, of Eaton Rapids is visiting at her sister's, Mrs. D. C. Bowen, of Newberg.

Mrs. John Pentecost, of Franklin, received a telegram last Tuesday via. C. T. Line informing her of the serious sickness of a sister living at Norvel, Mich., and has gone to her assistance.

Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Gillet, Mrs. Ellsworth, Myron Bowen and Loren Bowen were entertained at the residence of N. K. Bowen one day last week. The reunion was complete with the exception of Mrs. Allen, of Chicago, who was detained at home by the sickness of her husband. The combined ages of the brothers and sisters was 400 years and their weight was 904 pounds.

W. B. Keyser is making his last round as school inspector, his term of office expires April 1st.

TIPTON TOPICS.

The Old Folks' Concert, which was announced for March 19, has been postponed for one week, to March 26, at M. E. Church.

The Magic Pyramid of forty children, brought out at the Congregational Church last Tuesday evening, will be repeated on Friday evening, Mar. 19.

Mr. Beri VanNess has moved on to a farm four miles south-east of Tecumseh. Mr. Vedder has taken his place here, and Z. Stout is moving on to a farm near Adrian.

Mr. and Mrs. Randell were somewhat injured in the accident on the M. & O. near Marshall. Mrs. R's. sister, Mrs. Cooper, of Cambridge, was quite seriously hurt.

The Congregational society, of this place have secured the services for the coming year, of Rev. Mr. Putman of Hillsdale. We understand that Mr. Putman will be here the first of April.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Coughing and blowing the nose, we think may be considered an occupation in this vicinity.

Uncle Henry Smith has been very low of late, but is in a fair state of recovery.

Fred Groger has been confined to his bed for the past week but is, we are happy to learn, convalescing.

W. J. Monagin is at home at present, but thinks of going to Ohio to canvass for a book soon.

C. D. Smith is working in Tecumseh this week.

Ezra Lewis will till J. C. Kinney's farm the coming season.

Mr. M. F. Turrell, who has taught our school to the satisfaction of all, closed the same last Friday, and Miss Cynthia Monaghan has been engaged for the spring term. We predict a good school and sincerely hope our predictions may prove true.

RIDGEWAY ECHOS

HILLSDALE, MAR. 13, '86.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

I have often heard it said by those who have once lived in the vicinity of Tecumseh, that the HERALD was an indispensible thing with them on account of its home news. I too have learned to appreciate it, as it is as good as a long letter from home to me, and there is a strife in the family every week to see who will read the HERALD first. I have watched it the last week or two to see if the Ridgeway correspondent or his substitute, in giving each other away, would not yet own who draped the church organ about a year ago. I think if the "regular" should absent himself once more the old cat would play as well as the kittens, then the bag would be empty, as it is Waring out with Arner to follow it. What is sauce for the kittens is also sauce for the old cat, and long let them pur, but don't stop my paper.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Farmers are sowing clover seed.

The saw mill is running.

A house was burned last week.

School closed week before last.

Robert Johnston, of Canada, is visiting his son here.

A. F. Gordon commenced his third week Monday.

Cap Cook is moving onto the Rose Vescelius farm.

Parties from Monroe are contemplating the starting of a general store here. There is also talk of a blacksmith shop—"then will come our turn at a poem."

There was a Rink racket at the Lake Ridge House, Friday night. The masquerade, week before, was immense—106 couple.

Joe Sage is doing this section with his weather strips. He says he has put on about 1000 set during the winter, and hasn't told a lie since he commenced.

Scarlet fever at C. Deslier's and Ed. Auten's. Diptheria in fractional school district, No. 1.

We came very near having a scandulous law-suit. By the way, excuse us while saying, that those who are engaged in fabulating a sensation over the remains of I. D. Miller be[illegible] sold at the [illegible] members of the family to students of the university, had better be engaged in the Bohemian oats business. We assisted in placing Isaac's remains in their final resting place in Lake Ridge cemetery, and besides, under the new law the State furnishes more subjects for the medical department of the university than they really use.

SONG-BIRDS.

TOWN OF RIDGEWAY.

Two birds of song have perched to shine
And make the town with music ring.
Like two cock-robin boys,
And each one tries to do his best,
And make the other hide his crest,
And stop his hateful noise.

THE BRITTON BIRD.

At Britton first the song began,
In notes so wild, no rules could scan;
But wit was in the lay;
The verse ran not with measured tread,
Nor best of rhythm, be it said,
Still they had some play.

OBERLIN OR SONG.

Young rising Britton took his eye,
Its grand hotel and school near by,
And village lots for sale;
He saw the ville to city rise,
By men of sterling enterprise,
With Ridgeway in the trail.

RIDGEWAY BIRD.

That lady's sketch was all too strong
For Ridgeway's sort of rhyming song,
And hence no voice we hear;
It chides and wails, and says hard things,
And serious accusation brings
To stir bad blood, I fear.

APOLOGY.

No harm of ladies had been spoke,
But mentioned simply as a joke,
That visits are cried down;
Can not the ladies bear the ville,
Without reporter's fire and quill
To mark their steps and shows?

THE MEDIATOR.

And now good HERALD, let me plead
For these sweet birds, before they bleed;
I would not choke their voice;
But gently sooth, their spirit tame;
And bind them close in friendship's name,
And then we'll all be joice.

NEWBERG NOTES.

The Lyceum last Thursday night was very lively. A good time is expected next Thursday. The debate will be conducted by Miss Ettie Stacy and Robbie Hicks. Come one, come all.

Mr. Geo. Stacy of Buffalo, N. Y. called and staid a few days at the homestead last week.

Mr. Mattison, father of Norman Mattison, is visiting at the Mattison farm now.

Miss Dena Wissing of Clinton, called on friends and attended the Lyceum last Thursday night.

Mrs. Corlette Brown, who has been very sick for two weeks, is improving slowly.

Frank Cain is no more one of the Newburgers.

The HERALD wants to know whether the author of the notes is a man or woman, neither, it is either a lady of a gent, made of female.

Although it snows now we have had very pleasant weather.

EATON POST NO. 222.

Just as we had closed our meeting, the out post was driven in and our Post captured by the ladies. They took possession of our coffee pot, and spread a table to overflowing with good things. As they had us prisoners, they ordered us to fall in for supper. After enjoying the good supper and a very sociable time, good nights were told. All felt it was good to have been an old soldier. Fourteen military and naval organizations were represented at the table.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, March 15, 1886.

Washington society has gone into mourning for forty days, to reserve or to appear to observe Lent. [illegible] railway union proceedings. One young lady who has been going the round of routs, receptions and dancing attendance upon the German, has thrown aside her decollete satin robe and arrayed herself in a high-cut suit of sack-cloth, metaphorically speaking, while she cries mea culpa, and contents herself with afternoon teas, drives and theater parties.

Every day crowds of people go to the Capitol and make their way to the Senate galleries where they listen to the long looked for debate on the Presidental prerogative. Although all the discussion that could be crowded into a year would not remove the question at issue from the category of vexed political problems, the people will be glad to have the subject thoroughly exhausted. Then both parties to the controversy may settle down to the real work of the session. There will be general approval, however, if the debate shall produce as one of its [illegible] executive business to the scrutiny of the public.

The new Administration is now but little more than one year old. It may interest Civil Service reformers to read what changes have been made in the personnel of the Executive Departments during the twelve months, and how the President has carried out his pledges at the expense of his party.

The Treasury Department, which is by far the largest of them all, affords the most interesting example of what has been done. Its Assistant Secretaries have given place to Democratic successors, and five score of bureau officers who were, with few exceptions, active partizans, have given place to successors chosen on about the same principles. The Superintending Architect and Chief of the Secret Service retain their places. Among the deputy chiefs of bureaus, about one half have been displaced or reduced to lower grades. Of the chiefs of division, about one half have been displaced or reduced in salaries. Taking the Secretary's office as an example of its nine division clerks four have been displaced, one of whom was succeeded by the promotion of an efficient clerk of the other five have been retained. The Treasurer's bureau has been purged absolutely from partisan changes, and vacancies in all its grades have been filled by promotion. Assistant chiefs of division have been recognized as under the civil service classification and free from partisan change, the appointment of an assistant chief of the Appointment division being the only violation of this principle and policy. In the four service grades the civil service law has been strictly enforced and excuses for removals or evasions have not been sought.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, controlling more employes not protected by the Civil Service law than all the bureaus of the Treasury combined, has afforded the most conspicuous and perfect example of the triumphs of reform principles.

Throughout the departments, while assistant Secretaries were appointed, they have been superseded, with a single exception. With chief clerks the rule has been reversed. The veteran and efficient chief clerks of the State, War and Navy Departments, tested under Republican administrations, have [illegible] The chief clerks of the Department of Justice and of the Interior Department [illegible] only two who have been superseded in the Treasury and Postoffice Departments, voluntarily resigned.

The State, War and Navy Departments have been absolutely free from partisan changes above, below and in the class and grades. The Department of Justice has witnessed numerous changes in its higher assignments, the Assistant Attorneys General, the Solicitor General, and special attorneys, etc., but its chief clerk, supervisor, clerk and other prominent officers remain, and in the grades of division chiefs, clerical grades, and among the laborers and messengers, partisanship has had no victim.

In the Interior and Postoffice Departments, changes and reductions have been made among bureau and division officers, but the heads of those Departments have firmly resisted pressure for the removal of their most faithful and efficient aids, and from the lowest to the highest grades, a large proportion of the incumbents hold over from previous Administrations.

A REVOLUTION IN DAIRYING.

The Wapping creamery, at Wapping, Ct., eight miles from Hartford is co-operative. This creamery was started in the spring of 1882, having capital of $3,500, a model factory with the Cooley outfit, pays its butter maker $75 a month and gives him a helper besides, and pays the superintendent $50 a year for doing the business. It has paid three per cent. semi-annual dividends on its stock from the beginning and its best patrons have not been excelled by any other factory in New England. All farmers within its radius send all their cream, and the creamery has control of the supply. It has offered a most of [illegible] during the year; they certainly have had no [illegible] permanent improvements have been made and paid out of the earnings without materially affecting the patrons' returns. The farmers receive $100 to $120 per month for butter, the same being paid for monthly, quarterly or at the end of each month. There has been no complaint about the payments, patrons are most of them skim milk for one cent per quart to Hartford peddlers in summer some is sold at seven-eighths cents per quart. But [illegible] is mostly sold at seven-eighths cents per gallon—less than some creameries get. All the cream is well ripened before churning, and the butter is thoroughly worked twice, making a firm product of unusual excellence. Absolute cleanliness is insisted upon from the stable until the butter is packed. No poor butter is made.

The returns from numerous creameries for several years show that in New England an average of six and one-half expressed decimally, 6.5 spaces of cream on an eighteen quart Cooley cat are required to make 1 lb. of butter. It has been repeatedly shown that eight quarts of milk will average to produce this quantity of cream but it is more liberal to call it nine pearls or taking nine pearls eighths lbs. to the gallon as a standard and twenty one and one half lbs. Now the average payment per spaces of cream during 1885 by Anderson and Wapping creameries was 4.8c., [illegible] cents, or 24.8c. was paid for the six and one half spaces required to make one lb. of butter. This quantity of cream is furnished by nine qts. of milk so that the average price paid per quart of whole milk at these creameries during the whole of last year was 2.8c., or two and three-quarters cents to call it even. Deductions. That is to say, by the well managed co-operative system, the cream has been skimmed at the farmers' door and after paying every item of expense in the mat, factory and market the of the butter, including a handsome dividend on the capital the farmer has invested in the creamery, the creamery returns the farmer nearly equal to two and three-quarters cents per quart for the whole milk, leaving the skim milk on the farm. Many of these farmers have sold the skim milk for one cent per quart, this netting them two and three-fourths cents for their whole milk when all sold off the farm. It is safe to say that a skim milk as worth one cent per quart for pig feed or poultry, pork or veal. It is not that the farmer nets three and one-fourth cents per quart for the year for his milk at his door, and wasn't [illegible] farm of anything. This is the great point. When the skim or skim milk is sold off the farm it is virtually selling the farm by the quart for new milk production. It is enough to return to the soil through the manure the plant food carried off in the milk sold. Now when once the cream is sold, which is mostly fat or nearly as plant food the same thing [illegible] the very dry [illegible] of plant food in the bottle of milk. [illegible] the plant food is [illegible] the manure [illegible] is making a better profit [illegible] neighbor who sells whole milk. The farm is constantly [illegible] by the addition of [illegible] or with the addition [illegible] quantity purchased [illegible] to buy what [illegible] for according to our [illegible] special reports. [illegible] return of the [illegible] and New York and Boston during the past year has not averaged three cents per quart. At Boston condensing factories in Philadelphia, N. Y., the average price for the year has been two and [illegible] cents per quart, for [illegible] at the factory. At Brighton & Co., Boston milk contractors, Walnut Ave. creamery, the farmers were paid [illegible] per qt. for milk delivered, and took back the skim milk equivalent to a total of [illegible] per quart, but some farmers sold a part of whole milk to Boston. The Boston [illegible] creamery at Southington, Ct., which is run on the whole milk system, and an average price for the year has been [illegible] per quart for whole milk delivered at the factory. Many farmers have paid from [illegible] cents to [illegible] per qt. for whole milk delivered. This the last quarter of co-operative creameries run on the cooley cream gathering plan have sent back to the farmer [illegible] on the farm, [illegible] the work, and returned more for a quart than they other proprietary [illegible] factory can pay for their milk delivered. This is beyond question the perfection of dairy farming, both as regards the profits and as regards the fertility and improvement of the farm. This is no fancy sketch. It is based on figures derived from actual [illegible] and practical experience.

The average net returns to the farmers of Anderson and Wapping creameries during 1885 have been [illegible] farmers have had more of the work of butter making to do, the cream has been taken at their doors, paying the [illegible] on the farm and the farmer has received in clear cash 24 cents for every pound of butter produced from his milk during the year. Comparatively but a small quantity of butter in New England and New York is made by the most improved apparatus and [illegible] dairymen at as high a [illegible] cents. It is impossible to get at accurate figures but cents per pound net is probably a high average for the year for the small and favored class. Call the labor of manufacture worth two cents per pound, and it is worth [illegible] it is worth anything, and [illegible] dairymen with special customers, who enable him to retain the middlemen's profits get 23c where the patron of the cooley co-operative creamery gets 24 cents and none of the work. The market reports show that the average prices of butter during 1885 have been as follows, omitting fractions:

	New York.	Boston.
For creamery selections	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible] dairy selections	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Average [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Dairy [illegible] from Average [illegible] Washington [illegible] Cooley co-operative creameries [illegible]

Will creameries be overdone? [illegible] a question that at once suggests itself to the timorous, the conservative or the poor man. Perhaps no reason on this point. There is a wide [illegible] between good butter and poor butter [illegible] good butter [illegible] poor article that does not find a sale. Experience has also shown that, unless a creamery pays wonderfully well and often times even then, there will be no more or little more milk made than at the home dairy. The creamery merely makes a product that sells and brings a better price. There is no danger of the land butter [illegible] being materially increased unless creamery patrons make money at it, and if they make money at it that is just what they want. Moreover, a high quality creamery butter of established reputation does not suffer from oleomargarine or other bogus imitations that crowd the market for poor dairy butter. In this connection we desire to answer a correspondent and say that John Boyd, Chicago, is the owner of the patent and manufacturer of the Cooley creamer in the West.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine

For April is an exceedingly interesting number, containing articles to please all tastes. It is especially rich in engravings from paintings and the art lover will also find congenial matter in the sketch of Leonardo Da Vinci, with its two accompanying portraits. "The protestant Sisterhoods of New York," will attract much attention, as it refers especially to the Sisters of St. Mary, whose Convent of St. Gabriel at Peekskill has been much talked about recently. "Church going in Virginia in 1585," by John S. Patton, is a local article of great antiquarian interest. There are portraits of Bishop Hannington, who is supposed to have been martyred in Africa, Archbishop Gibbons of Baltimore, the second American Cardinal, and the late Vice president Hendricks whom Dr. Talmage eulogizes as a "Christian Politician." There are many other articles of present and future interest, and the number is full of beautiful pictures which please all young and old.

Spring Medicine

When the weather grows warmer, that extreme tired feeling, want of appetite, dullness, languor, and lassitude, afflict almost the entire human family, and scrofula and other diseases caused by humors, manifest themselves with many. It is impossible to throw off this debility and expel humors from the blood without the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I could not sleep, and would get up in the morning with barely ability enough to get out of bed. I had no appetite, and my face broke out with pimples. I bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon began to sleep soundly, could get up without that tired and languid feeling, and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Ecel, O.

"I had been much troubled by general debility. Last spring Hood's Sarsaparilla proved just the thing needed. I derived an happiness about it." [illegible] Mass.

At no other season is the system so susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable tonic and invigorant. The impure state of the blood, the deranged digestion, and the weak condition of the body, caused by its long battle with the cold, wintry blasts, all call for the reviving, regulating and restoring influences so happily and effectively combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me a great deal of good. I had no particular disease, but was tired out from overwork, and it built me up." MARIA E. SANFORD, Cohoes, N. Y.

"For seven years, spring and fall, I had scrofulous sores come out on my legs, and for two years was not free from them at all. I suffered very much. Last May I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken two bottles, the sores healed and the humor left me." [illegible] Ashfield, Mass.

"There is no doubt in my mind that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my life." [illegible] Fulton Market, N.Y.

How meagre seems the life so briefly drawn
That I who noted if your earliest hour be dimpled in your dively cheek unfolded
With the first smile of all—that I who told
The promise of your beauty at some flower
Lain as across the dark days of the year
Promises summer—that I was in your first
Dear warble had divined the glorious song
Whose lilt in your throat that year should be
The season of some later minstrelsy—
How meagre seems the life so briefly drawn
That I shall never see the thousandth year
Lift its mist-mail full-plumed as the young
Watch great and golden in the east where now
Our dawn seems ended! [illegible]
[illegible]
Shall be long in the dust ere [illegible]
Following the wheel over the [illegible]
I shall be [illegible] the [illegible]
[illegible]
The die-dial that turnest to the East
And falls [illegible] the [illegible] returns at last
To the bright long earth. Nor late nor soon,
Dead in the dark, shall it be known to me
That you, the one consummate flower and fruit,
Still show all men how goodly is the tree.

Thus murmured I when the child's boyish way,
With gracious graceless of lip and brow,
Filled all my yearning heart with sweet distress
And longing for the impossible. And now,
Less even than the loss inevitable and
A mere dim mental mist—the blowing breath
The child is gone, and I am gray and old,
And still I murmur to a heart as cold,
How meagre is the life so briefly drawn!

THE FORGED CHECK.

I hated him from [illegible] the last. I hated him when [illegible] I had only lately died.

Perhaps it was [illegible] though after all perhaps not.

I am an old man now, and much of the past is locked into [illegible] of my life which [illegible] as fresh in my mind to-night as it was fifty years ago, when we were [illegible] Halton & War[illegible]

Ted was very handsome, and I hated him for that, for I was plain and insignificant in appearance, and the comparison drawn by every stranger who entered the counting house made me ill-natured and cross-grained.

Before Ted ever really did me wrong I hated him instinctively, hated him in spite of better inclinations, as it always with me there was something [illegible] in the part he was to play in my life's drama.

I can close my eyes now and live over again those dim old days.

I saw Ted perched on a high stool at the battered and ink-besmeared old desk, with the spring sunshine streaming in through the dingy windows and glinting in his light hair, as he sat with his blue eyes [illegible] on the masts and rigging of the vessels anchored along the wharf, with one girlish hand twisted among his glistening curls, and the other toying idly with his pen on the desk.

Yes, I hated him; I hated him for his elegant manners and complaisant ways.

I hated him for his merry laugh, his melodious voice, hated him for his fine, slender figure, his graceful walk; but I hated him, more than all, for his great influence over Mary Halton.

Mary was the only child of the head of our firm, and a girl whom I had learned to love with all the strength of my mind, my heart, my soul, and yet I never told her, and she loved me, too.

I know she did before Ted March showed his handsome face in Marley.

Mary was not beautiful.

I was conscious of that.

Many scarcely thought her a pretty miss, but to me from the first to the last, she was the fairest, sweetest and most lovely of women.

Ted fell in love with Mary and Mary fell in love with Ted before they had been acquainted through a single spring day.

After four every evening he would stroll across the street to Mr. Halton's and chat with and make love to the girl my heart was breaking for.

How I hated him as he hung at the gate wishing her good-night.

I thought that I could see the little white hand tremble as it waved an adieu to him as he strode away into the thickening twilight.

Should I dog his steps, and when he got to a lonely place, dart suddenly upon him and do him deadly harm?

Heaven knows how often I asked myself that question.

For months I watched him, and oh, the bitter, bitter pain, the anguish and despair I suffered human tongue can never tell!

I played the spy on March's every movement.

I knew the make-up of his life better than he did himself.

At night when he and Mary were passing the hours with music and song, I lay in the shadow of the hedge waiting his leave, blaspheming and cursing him under my breath.

After the good-night had been said, for the hundredth time repeated, I would follow him whithersoever he went, and often this would be to a certain gambling den.

Nightly he played for large sums—larger than I knew March came by honestly; but I never said a word—only watched and waited, and nursed the terrible vengeance in my heart.

Eventually, Ted became more careless and reckless, and I guessed what was working on his mind.

Then he became suddenly assiduously industrious; all day long he would bend over his desk, intently engrossed with his pen, and I was extremely anxious to know what he was doing, for I knew the business required no such steady work.

Perhaps he was writing love letters—love letters to Mary.

Of course I was determined to fathom the secret, and one afternoon, finding him wholly absorbed I stole up behind him and looked over his shoulder.

He was writing over and over again across a sheet of foolscap the firm's signature.

What a hideous, fiendish joy shot into my heart as I comprehend what this meant.

For the past few nights March had lost heavily at the disreputable establishment—lost more than he received for a year's salary, and a blockhead would have seen why he was practicing the signature of Halton & War.

The very next afternoon I saw him draw up a check, for what amount I could not see, but I did see it was a check on the bank where the firm dealt.

As he left the office I followed, well behind, but not out of sight, down to where the firm banked.

the forged check?

In a short time he came forth again, and after glancing furtively about, he pulled his hat over his eyes and disappeared around the first corner.

Entering the bank I approached the cashier.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Rolls."

"Mr. Rolls."

"One of our clerks presented a check here a few moments ago."

"Yes, sir."

"May I look at it, please?"

"Certainly, sir." [illegible]

"Why, boy, it's the crack of the morning. There, Mr. Rolls, look at the crack of the morning. There, it and the yellow [illegible] and the green [illegible]

"Why, [illegible] changed [illegible] gone [illegible]

"Well, [illegible] March [illegible] And for the [illegible]

"What is the [illegible] Mr. Rolls? [illegible] you to be so [illegible] been a [illegible] March? [illegible] you to be so [illegible]

"Save me! How can we do [illegible] [illegible] check [illegible] the [illegible]

"[illegible] who will [illegible] the money [illegible] [illegible]

"[illegible] I believe my business is ten times [illegible] and, turn that over I am young, young, and I love poor Ted."

"But——"

"Oh, don't let us talk of it, Mr. Rolls; think of your own son, he's about Ted's age, and give me the slip of paper and cancel the check."

"Rolls," catching my trembling hand and shaking it heartily, "you are a noble fellow; there is not another man who would have done what you have done—a friend in need is a friend indeed."

I laughed aloud as I received the forged check in exchange for my own, although it doubled me of a mountain of years—made me a very pauper!

But what cared I?

I had not lost all that made life dear. What were ten thousand dollars compared with my darling?

Years rolled away, and March, for I watched night after night, never again visited the gambling house after the day of the forgery.

He had spared his debts, had rehabilitated, and started new in life with good resolutions and noble aspirations, secure in the secrecy of his crime.

one of the junior clerks to me one day, "and old Hal says he's the best business man. Just look at the business they trust to him, Rolls."

I said nothing, oh, heaven! I thought, with demoniac joy, now swiftly my time was coming on.

Rapidly was my enemy climbing the ladder of fame.

Let him, let him—let him mount it—up, up, up, until he reaches the highest round, and then—and then——

The crisis came at last.

March was made third partner in the great shipping house and shortly after his wedding-day was fixed.

He had mounted the highest round of the ladder.

Wealth, beloved, honored, above to wed the fairest of God's creatures, so thought I, and I was shipped here, [illegible]

What more could fortune do, now upon him?

For what should I wait?

The wedding day dawned.

All the clerks were invited to be present at the nuptials, and each of us had agreed to give Ted some gift as a token of the esteem and love we felt for our old confrere of the counting house.

"What are you going to give Rolls?" I was asked, the day before the wedding.

"Wait and see," I laughingly replied, as I pictured to myself the scene that would ensue when, after the ceremony, I handed March the forged check.

The grand rooms were crowded to suffocation, but I managed to reach the happy pair among the first to offer congratulations after the two had been made one.

A moment I stood before them, and the better feelings in my heart struggled hard for the mastery.

I knew that I was there to stab those generous, innocent, happy hearts, but I could not resist the demon of jealousy and revenge rankling in my bosom, and bowing low, I handed him the fatal slip.

The last I ever saw of March, he was lying there in the brilliant light of the gas, prostrate on the carpet, with the stream of life-blood oozing from his mouth and nostrils, while she—Mary—was kneeling over him, calling piteously his name.

For forty years they have been sleeping in the grave, he having died with quick consumption—a hemorrage of the lungs brought on by mental excitement, they said—and she—well, it's pretty well known that she died from excessive grief shortly thereafter.

Progressive Lunch.

A fashion straight from London is that of the "progressive lunch." It is supposed to promote sociability and at the same time to give each guest a chance to meet the others. Small tables are distributed around the room, and at each of which the hostess seats four of her guests. After each course each two couples move on to the next table, but in different directions, until at the end of the lunch, if there be couples enough, all the guests have met. This is considered a very welcome change to the usual mode of giving ladies' lunch parties, and will make this form of entertainment more popular than ever.

New York Flats.

Almost every flat now has its literary and artistic coterie, consisting of those "in the line" occupying suites in the building. In a big apartment house on Twenty-third street Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard, Mr. and Mrs. Whitla and Miss Enid Lee constitutes a little company that, it is needless to say, is very interesting. Howard returns to his native shores after a prolonged absence abroad of some years. He has just painted for Mr. Bronson Howard a little gem, representing two alabaster hands holding up to a window a bowl of glorious, full blown flowers.

A Matter of Business Sixth Sense.

"I guess the boys will have as much as they can do to prevent the clash between those bloodthirsty men," observed a southern innkeeper to a northern traveller.

"You don't mean to say there's going to be a duel anywhere about here?"

"Oh, yes. Major Chum has already challenged Colonel Starg for an insulting remark, and the affair is going to take place to-day or to-morrow."

"That's awkward. I expected to see each of those men a large bill of guests. By heavens, Church and State must be kept apart at all hazards."

Burlesque On the Stage.

Dixey, the burlesquer, has written a letter to the proprietors of a certain magazine in an admirable satire on such letters usually obtained from distinguished people. He says: "Since using your remark-inducing I have lost a wart on my hand and a freckle on my nose, as well as my memory for dates."

A FUTURE CATACLYSM.

The Sinking of the Atlantic Coast and the Recession of Niagara Falls.

The scientists have again unfolded to the public their views to the effect that the Atlantic coast line of the United States is sinking away and will be at length submerged by the ocean. The rate at which it is sinking is not such as to alarm the inhabitants. The most that is claimed is that the crust of the earth is falling in at the rate of a quarter of an inch a year, or about a foot in fifty years. At this rate the Atlantic Ocean will submerge New York City about the time when the waters of Niagara Falls in its recession have receded at half the rate they now do, and have lost a portion of their volume. The Falls will kindly leave an inlet for a harbor, which will open up a passage in the place so very conveniently at hand for the benefit of a city.

The sinking of the Atlantic coast has long been a theme of scientific conjecture and calculation. By what system of measurement the fact has been ascertained we are not informed. Instruments of a very delicate character which measure with considerable accuracy almost infinitesimal distances have been invented for such the calculation, and the results which they produce are sometimes very striking. It is not impossible that, as the earth's internal fires are still cooling, the process of shrinkage also continues and that the shell falls in as a vacuum is created by the decrease in the size of the central fiery core. But there are grave reasons why it may be doubted whether any uniform rate of sinking is perceptible by any means of measurement either along the Atlantic sea coast or elsewhere.

But that the Falls are receding there can be no doubt. That they were formerly located near the outlet of Niagara River as an established fact, and that they have receded within a recent era seven miles from Lewiston to their

When they shall back up so far that the dam across the outlet of Lake Erie shall give way, the outpour from the basin of the lakes will sweep down through the valley of the Ontario and out through the channel of the St. Lawrence in a flood that will devastate the entire East. Lake Michigan, owing to its great depth, will not, however, be drained dry, but will recede to some distance from its present shore. This, while apparently leaving Chicago an inland city, will merely provide it more ground over which to spread to the eastward, and will supply a long-felt want. As it is not possible, however, that this event can occur within the next two hundred and fifty thousand years, there will be ample time for future generations to make such preparations to meet it as may appear advisable under the circumstances.—Chicago Journal.

TOILING WOMEN.

Money Earned by Those Who Know How to Use a Needle.

The number of women in this city who earn a living by the needle is difficult to ascertain. There are hundreds of establishments on all the business streets where sewing is either done or given out to be done. A reporter recently asked two sewing girls what sort of living they made.

"How much are you paid for making those garments?" asked the scribe.

"We get twenty-five cents apiece," was the ready reply.

"And you do all the work necessary on them for a quarter of a dollar?"

"Yes."

"How long does it take you to make a garment?"

"I do very well if I make four a day," said one.

"But it takes more than ten hours to make four, work as hard as you will," rejoined the other.

The jackets they carried were thick woolen goods. They were wadded, lined with alpaca and had the finished appearance of a garment made by an adept. The sewing machine did most of the straight work, but the buttonholes, putting in the lining and other work had to be done by hand. The seams had been pressed, the threads picked off, and the garments were neatly folded and already to be sold. Wages for the making of underwear, and, indeed, for gentlemen's entire apparel, have dropped considerably during the last few years. The pay of the girls who make up all the smaller articles, such as gloves and neckties, does not average more than two dollars a week. Many have to be content with less, and six dollars is considered good pay nowadays. Most of the work is done by piece. Men's drawers are made complete for fifty cents a dozen pairs. For the hickory shirt that laboring men wear, made out of stout striped blue, fifty-five cents a dozen is paid. Overalls are made complete for fifty cents a dozen. Striped flannel and white shirts are made for sixty-five cents a dozen. The foreman examines the pieces and sees that the work is satisfactorily done. That is not good if it is not paid for. For women's wages vary from fifteen to twenty dollars a week. A button sewer gets nine dollars a week during the busy season, and six dollars during slack time. When the new skirts come from the laundry she counts the buttons to see that none are missing, fastens them and puts them in the boxes. There is a general rule in factories that those who work there are fined for being late—five cents if they earn five dollars a week and ten cents if they earn ten dollars.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

—Those whose eyes are nice to discover typographical errors have no conception of the mistakes which the painstaking proof-reader corrects before they reach the press. Among the examples of last week we noticed that on the first proofs "them asses" was corrected to "the masses," and "intercessory jinjams" to "intercessory prayers."—N. Y. Independent.

THE SPY OF SHILOH.

The Spy of Shiloh has been played by Frank H. [illegible] towns in Michigan during a period covering 17 years. The 18 tableaux presented during the Spy of Shiloh are said to excel anything of the kind ever seen in our village. Read what neighboring cities say about them:

The Tableaux presented in the Military Drama, The Spy of Shiloh, last night, were certainly the finest ever witnessed in our city.—Saginaw Evening Telegraph.

Our Local Post G. A. R. cleared the handsome sum of $[illegible] at a season when country attractions were most plenty. If any exception were wanted for the Spy of Shiloh, the above statement would be ample.—Flint Daily Journal.

No act of play ever presented to our city gave such unbounded satisfaction as has the "Spy of Shiloh" which has just closed the most successful season ever played here.—Hillsdale Standard.

Elaborate preparations are now being made to make the presentation of the "Spy of Shiloh" the event of the season of 1886. Rehearsals are in progress, drills are nightly being perfected, and if indications count for anything the boys of '[illegible] will have no cause to find fault with their friends, as we have heard numbers say that they will surely be there, others that they would not miss it for anything and above all is the most reasonable charge for admission, 25c and 15c no extra charge for reserved seats. Watch for bills and programs.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

OFFICE OF TECUMSEH, Council Room, March 1, 1886.

Present the entire council except President House and Councilman [illegible].

On motion Mr. Hall was called to the chair.

[illegible] read and approved.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

Seaton reported for the month of February showing five mad dogs killed, one not sold.

Accepted and adopted.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were presented and on motion were referred to the finance committee:

[illegible]

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably upon the above bills and on motion the bill of Wattenback, Burdine & Co., $[illegible] was allowed.

Report accepted and adopted and orders directed drawn.

The returns of the inspectors of the village election holden March 1, 1886 having been duly filed with the Recorder, the Council proceeded to canvass the returns thereof and duly declared the following named persons elected to the office written opposite their respective names:

President—Robert B. House.
Recorder—Fred B. Wood.
Treasurer—Jos. A. Boyd.
Trustees—Edwin Ames, Alfred Jay, Hock Tractor, Jehiel Davis, Edgar A. Tobias.
Assessor—[illegible]

On motion the council then adjourned to March 15th, 1886, at 7 o'clock p. m.

FRED B. WOOD, Recorder.

[illegible]

The examination of the Lingan Reading will occur Friday, March 26th, and in the branch buildings on Friday, March 26th. Everybody is invited as well as the ones named above.

To-day another change was rung in the management of the Patterson House, Mr. Geo. P. Patterson having purchased the interest of his father, Mr. B. A. Garlinghouse and R. J. Garlinghouse, and the firm now Patterson Bros. Mr. Geo. P. has been for a number of years, and will serve their first meal in their new quarters to-day. Mr. Patterson will have practical charge of affairs in the new house, which is a guarantee that everything will be first class in every particular. The Garlinghouse Bros are well known and prominent young business men of this village, and will no doubt share towards making the new enterprise a success. The Patterson House, [illegible] and Mr. Geo. P. [illegible] as this residence. Here's wishing the new firm of Patterson & Garlinghouse Bros the success they undoubtedly deserve.

Lessons from a Mastodon.

The tusks of a mastodon recently found in Illinois weighed 15[illegible] pounds each. What a gigantic toothache that animal must have been capable of. And such neuralgia, or nerve ache, generally proceeds from a disordered condition of the blood. Brown's Iron Bitters enriches and purifies the blood and drives neuralgia out. Mr. W. W. Redman, Dipsh, O., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters permanently cured me of neuralgia."

The Record suggests a plan for a public library in this city, which we think a very good one, and if carried out as contemplated, would give general satisfaction. The school library at present contains something over [illegible] volumes, and the ladies library association about [illegible] volumes. The will of the late E. L. Clark bequeaths [illegible] to the city. Follows [illegible] this sum to be expended in the purchase of books, and a request was made to Mr. Clark that the books when purchased should be united with those of the higher library. The plan of the Record is to combine the public school library, the ladies library and the Clark fund library, at the first floor of the city hall, place all the books therein, and make a free city library, but that would be a great [illegible] to the city. Climbing a flight of one hundred steps at the Central school building is a task that [illegible] proper care to perform, even for the sake of obtaining good reading matter, and if the city hall could be used for a public library many of our citizens would avail themselves of the opportunity to get reading matter, who now go without it rather than endure the fatigue of climbing to the top of the Central building. We should be very glad to see the city hall utilized in this manner, and believe it would be the best use it could be put to.—Adrian Press.

ADRIAN.

Anna C. Lyons to Michael Leary, land in village, $[illegible].

CLINTON.

A. Hanford to E. R. Smith, land on sec. 1 and 12, $[illegible].

ISMS.

H. C. Wilber to James Brown, land on sec. 5, $750.

TECUMSEH.

J. J. Clarkson to T. P. Clarkson, land on sec. 28, $6,500.

Mr. Joseph A. Stowell, of Dundee, died last week and the funeral was held on Sunday last. Mr. Stowell was a resident of Ridgeway for many years and moved to Dundee where he owned a large farm, and became one of the leading citizens of that village. He was an active promoter of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad project and paid liberally towards the road. The fact that the funeral was held on Sunday, and the day was such an inclement one, prevented some of his Tecumseh friends from attending the funeral, who would gladly have done so.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

Apparently Harmless Symptoms Prove to be a Deep Danger.

Some Scientific Facts Which Are Astounding the Community.

The Chief Source of Heart Disease and Apoplexy Made Positive.

A Terrible Danger That Can be Readily Avoided.

HOW IT MAY BE CURED.

There is no longer room for doubt that sudden deaths are not caused by heart disease, apoplexy or paralysis but by chief infinitude of which death is only the final stage. And physicians and scientists agree that rheumatism in some one of its forms is the cause which has stood in the background so long and caused so much misery. Any man, woman or child troubled with the slightest muscular rheumatism is in danger and a danger from which instant of escape is imperative. A man well known in this community awoke one morning with a feeling of pain in his muscles. He took a cold bath, thinking the reaction would drive the pain from his system. It did drive it from his limbs but went to his heart, and before night he was dead. This is only one of many similar cases. They all show the necessity of driving rheumatism, which is a blood disease, out of the blood, and for this purpose no modern discovery has ever equalled Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. Mr. C. D. Denio, of Jackson, Mich., who was paralyzed on one side was completely cured by its use, and believes he would have been in his grave to-day if he had not fortunately learned of and taken this great remedy. Should any one who reads these lines be afflicted even in a slight degree by any rheumatic trouble, we would earnestly warn them against a delay which may prove fatal.

About 800 Michigan business men left Detroit yesterday. On reaching the city they were portioned out to the seven leading hotels for dinner and supper. The leading attractions of the city were viewed, and the excursionists left for home at 8 P. M., well pleased with the trip and reception.

AN HOUR AT RIDGEWAY.

We spent an hour at Ridgeway one day last week between trains, and after transacting the business that called us there we spent a few moments circulating about the city.

We found Jay A. Santus the new postmaster at home. He seems to be well satisfied with his present situation, and from what we can learn, we believe the people are equally well satisfied with him.

J. D. Arner was on deck and ready for another tilt with his Britton neighbor. J. D., has increased in weight considerably during the past month. The lead pencil trade is looking up in Ridgeway, since the beginning of the repertorial war.

Hon. G. P. Waring is nicely situated in his new home. He is about as well fixed as a man can be, and it would seem that all his desires must be satisfied, and yet we predict that he will have one desire unsatisfied until the prohibition party shall be successful.

Peter Sharp holds forth on the old corner as of yore, and is apparently doing as well as when he was one of Uncle Sam's officials. He is giving more attention than formerly to the drug department of his business, having lately received a diploma from the State Pharmaceutical Association.

S. P. Smith was found in the same quarters, and he informed us that business was moving very much as usual with him. He is not getting rich enough to start a bank, but is making a good living.

Samuel Helm still makes harnesses those who claim to know say that his harnesses never rip and rarely wear out. He says that his business is as good as he could expect in these dull times.

Coryell & Lawton have charge of the local weather office. They keep the people posted on the changes in weather, and also sell stoves, hardware and tinware. This establishment has become one of the leading branches of industry at Ridgeway.

Geo. W. Clark & Son are still conducting their dry goods and general merchandise store. Their trade is a good one, and the outlook for the present season is encouraging.

We caught a glimpse of Dr. Loree as he was taking the train to go to Britton. Between his professional practice, his prairie farm, and his hay baling business, the Doctor is one of the busiest men in that part of the county.

Next Sunday morning at 10:30 the pastor of the Universalist Church will preach a sermon on "Wayside Opportunities." In the evening at 7 o'clock, a discourse upon "The Influence of What we Read." Besides the general public, the pastor invites for the evening, the Superintendent, teachers and scholars of our Public Schools. Remember the subject—"The Influence of What we Read."

The quiet community of Macon were taken by surprise on Friday last to learn that at a little gathering of friends at the residence of Robert McCune, in the township of Saline, two of its citizens who seemed so content to travel in the road of single blessedness had joined hands and hearts until death do them part. The ceremony that united the fortunes of Mr. Robert Hendershot and Miss Mary McCune was performed at 8 p. m. March 11th. It was a pleasant affair, and the wedding presents were ornamental and useful.

Election time is approaching which reminds us that the best place to get your election tickets printed is at the HERALD office. Best work and low prices.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Dr. Nixon of Adrian, was in town Monday.

Mat Rose was in Marshall on business last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones spent Sunday in Tecumseh.

Geo. Van Tyne visited the sick list the first of the week.

Henry Van Orner of Sylvania was in town last Monday.

A. W. Slayton is spending this week in Northern Michigan.

James Aten went to Jackson Friday returning Saturday.

Postmaster Jenkins, of Franklin, gave us a call last Monday.

New Goods in every Department.—W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

Frank Robertson and Miss Dacon, of Hillsdale, are visiting friends in town.

About one hundred schoolmasters and schoolmarms were in town last Saturday.

Rev. Mr. Adkin attended the Sunday School convention at Bay City last week.

Clay Sinclair, of Clinton, attended the examination in Tecumseh last Saturday.

The Chautauqua Circle met at the residence of Dr. G. D. Perry last Monday evening.

The trains on all the roads were school teachers.

There is considerable talk of organizing a branch of the Knights of Labor at Tecumseh.

Florence Boyce of Cambridge, has been spending three or four days with Minnie and Maggie Glasgow.

Thos. O. Perry of Chicago, has been spending a week or two at his father's in this village, Dr. G. D. Perry's.

Martin Palmer of Ridgeway, a student at the Hillsdale College, made the HERALD a visit last Friday.

Elijah Wilson is having the ague. He might better go to building bridges. There'll be more money in it.

Last Sunday was a bridle fly good day to stay at home, and church services were rather slimly attended.

Our New Carpets are now in; styles are very handsome and prices low—we shall be glad to show them.
W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

Mrs. James Wilson and Mrs. F. C. Stoepel of Detroit, were visiting at their parents' Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Sinton's, last week.

There were no services at either the Baptist or Presbyterian churches last Sunday, the pastors of both churches being confined to their house by sickness.

Most of the teachers in this section of the county were in Tecumseh last Saturday. The HERALD received numerous calls from the fraternity during the day.

Frank Swan's Mechanic made an artist. We lately saw one of his sketches, taken from a character in the Merchant of Venice. It was very creditable.

David Stephenson of Raisin, is going to Kansas to locate. Alva Waring has already picked out a farm for him. He expects to move about the first of April and his family will go about a month later.

Hannibal Osborn of Franklin, has rented his farm for a term of years, and will take a respite from hard work. We would respectfully suggest to him the propriety of buying a home in Tecumseh and taking up his residence here.

The committee of the Library Association, having in charge the Cantata of Esther, consisted of A. W. Mills, O. P. Bills and Dr. R. B. House. It is but just that the public should know this fact, as to their untiring efforts the success of the entertainment was in a great measure due.

Dr. George Sheeler of Cambridge, spent last Tuesday in Tecumseh as the guest of Mrs. Peter Waldron. He gave the HERALD a call during his stay and we were much gratified to see him looking so well. Uncle George is always a welcome visitor at the HERALD sanctum.

The three h[illegible] of the rink last Saturday evening was not the success it promised to be at the start, as Aten threw up the sponge after skating seven laps. He was not in the habit of skating on a track and stood no show with his opponent, Van Tyne, who was an old hand at it. The race was accordingly given to the latter.

The social given by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. church was held last Friday evening at the residence of Jehiel Davidson. About sixty were present, and after a literary program consisting of singing, recitations etc., coffee and doughnuts were served free of charge. Tally and the wash in side. Altogether a very pleasant time was had by everybody present.

Lute Bates has been on the sick list for a few days.

C. A. Sharp, wife, and son took in Detroit, Tuesday.

$50.00 Buys a good Second-hand piano. Enquire of Hough & Hosmer.

May Bodine, of Manchester, was in town yesterday, calling on friends.

The Good Templars of Milan will soon put on the play "Among the Brethren."

Haverly's Mammoth Minstrels will be in Adrian on the evening of Thursday April 1st.

Chas. La Tour, of Detroit, expects to visit Tecumseh Lodge No. 64, F. & A. M. Friday evening next, and lecture if so desired.

Burt and Will McNair gave a party last Tuesday evening, in honor of Mr. Robertson, of Hillsdale. A good time was enjoyed by all.

Miss Mame Spafford has returned home from Lansing, where she has been spending the winter with her sister, Mrs. Will C. Blood.

Our stock of Embroideries and White Goods is very large and attractive. We take pleasure in showing them. W. & S. W. Anderson & Co.

Mrs. Shuffle and daughter Georgiana, who have been visiting here and vicinity for a couple of weeks, returned to their home at Elkhart, Ind., to-day.

B. S. Scudder, of Macon, was in town yesterday and favored the HERALD with a call. He is getting his sewing machine donation scheme nicely started.

The maple sugar festival at the Baptist church last Tuesday evening, time was had. The proceeds amounted to about $15.

Will F. Baker was home spending Sunday with his friends. He has a good position in the wholesale house of James E. Davis & Co. at Detroit, and likes it well.

Regular communication of Tecumseh Lodge No. 69, F. & A. M., to-morrow, Friday evening. Work in the first degree. The brothers will please be on hand at 7:30.

Hugh Richards, of Jackson, was in town a couple of days last week, renewing old acquaintance. Mr. Richards does'nt seem to have changed a particle since he left Tecumseh years ago.

O. P. Bills & Co. have added an automatic punch to their office furniture. It is not only a convenience, but is a sure preventive against fraud by changing the amount of checks and drafts.

A lady fell dead between Toledo and Lenawee Junction, in the rear coach of the Toledo train last Saturday evening. She was taken through this place on the night train Saturday, en route to Jackson.

There will be a parish meeting for consultation at the Universalist church, next Sunday at the close of morning service. All members are requested to be present.
J. W. WOODES, CLERK.

John McKendry met with quite a severe accident last Thursday. He was splitting fence stakes when the wedge flew and struck him on the lower jaw, cutting a severe gash and loosening four teeth.

To-night occurs the wedding of Miss Manda Dewey, daughter of L. L. D. Dewey, our enterprising poultry dealer, and Mr. Will H. Neeley, of Cambridge. The wedding will take place at the bride's home in Raisin.

C. A. Wright & Co. have ornamented the ceiling of their store with some of the latest styles of wall paper decorations. People who wish to buy wall paper, can see the artistic effects of good material and good workmanship, right there in the store.

We adopt a new plan of make up this week, placing matter usually found on the fourth page, upon the second page, and giving Clinton the eighth page. We shall try this plan this week and next to see how it works.

Jeff Kennedy, of Battle Creek, has been visiting his old friends here a couple of days for three or four days. He was on the train last Friday which met with the accident, and got a pretty lively shaking up. Luckily he escaped without injury, but he says he has no desire to repeat the experiment just for fun.

Frank Howard is making arrangements to put on the Spy of Shiloh for the benefit of Co. "C." The boys are sadly in need of a new flag and they hope to make enough out of the entertainment to enable them to purchase a new stand of colors. The object is a worthy one, and we hope to see the entertainment well patronized.

Following is a list of pupils in Dist. No. 4, Macon, who have neither been absent nor tardy for the month end March 12, 1886:

Ida Bailey,	Lulu Gilmore,
Alta Gilmore,	Julia Gilmore,
Clarence Gilmore,	Frank Gilmore,
Ray Gilmore,	Bertie Bryant,
Gusteen Sisson,	Frank Sissons.

The population of Addison has increased over 200 since the advent of the M. & O. This of course, is partially owing to the moving into town of strangers.—Adrian Times.

Senator Jones, a man of the first Florida water, can set up the claim that he is engaged in legal business in Detroit. He is trying to set aside a young lady's will.—Bost on Record.

Arthur Root of Hudson, went to the Clayton masquerade dance and rooted home after the show minus an overcoat. Arthur will eschew masquerades hereafter, as he considers them an expensive luxury.

A Michigan editor has made a wonderful discovery which he announces thusly. "There is no record that any person that has paid for his newspaper in advance has ever been bitten by a mad dog." The preventative is certainly worth a trial.

The funeral of Ex Senator Chaffee of Colorado, was held at Adrian last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The services were held at the residence of Mr. A. H. Wood, on State street, and were largely attended notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather.

Before the close of summer we expect to see a handsome park laid out on the southeast corner of Lane and Adrian streets. We also expect to see a gravel road from the corner of Lane and Jefferson streets south to the corporation line, and thence to be continued by the township commissioner to the township line. It is certainly needed, but enough.—Blissfield Advance.

L. P. Wheeler, of Tecumseh, has just finished, what we are assured is a handsome picture in oil, which he has christened, "The Pride of the Harem," representing an Oriental Beauty. The question arises how did Wheeler manage to get a view of the subject of the sketch and the ladies of Tecumseh will not this "Pride of the Harem" scare our Adrian Record.

A little blaze in the office of Moore, Band, Bros. & Crane took place last evening. The chimney of a lamp was broken, and the draft upon the lamp drew the oil over the top which took fire, and a general excitement prevailed for some minutes. An over coat was damaged, and a quantity of freight bills on a hook caught fire and were partially destroyed. The lamp was finally got out doors and the danger was over.—Adrian Record.

At the residence of Rev. J. S. Holmes, last Sunday, Mr. Charles Bennett, of Tecumseh, and Miss Angusta Howell of Franklin, were united in marriage. Both are estimable and well known young people, and their many friends will join in congratulate them upon the happy event, and wish them a prosperous and happy life. The Press unites in tendering hearty congratulations. May they never see not the day that saw them united for the journey of life together.—Adrian Press.

John T. Clark had the misfortune to lose one of his valuable Jersey cows in a strange manner. Saturday night, it was cold, windy time and they were in the barn several hands were engaged in [illegible] the cows, except one to be milked, were lying down. One made a move to get up when started the others and caused a general stampede among the cattle. One made a quick move with her head, bringing down her [illegible] so suddenly as to break her neck.—Clinton Local.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON THE M. & O.

A serious accident occurred on the M. & O. road last Friday near Eckford, a station about midway between Marshall and Homer. The following particulars are gathered from the Detroit papers of Saturday, and from interviews with railroad officials since the time of the accident.

A bad railroad accident occurred on the Michigan & Ohio southwest of Homer, about 7 P. M. Friday. As the east bound passenger train, consisting of a baggage car and two coaches, was rounding a sharp curve at very high speed, the track spread and, after running three hundred yards on the ties the rear coach was hurled bottom side up thirty feet down the embankment, badly demolishing it. Fortunately it did not take fire. The engine, tender and baggage car passed safely over the track, stopping on the ties. The son of Station Agent Sharon, of Allegan, aged about 15, was severely and probably fatally injured, his skull being crushed. The brakeman had both wrists broken, and all the remaining passengers in the coach suffered more or less injuries. None are fatally injured. The injured persons were removed to Marshall and Homer. Young Sharon was sent on to Allegan by special train.

Below is a list of the passengers who were injured.

Mr. John Hurd, of Bridgeport, Conn., who is connected with the Dayton & Michigan elevators, had both wrists broken, and a terrible cut on the head; his injuries are not believed to be fatal, and he was sent to Marshall for treatment.

Max M. Eppstein was badly cut about the head and shoulders.

C. P. Cook, of Brooklyn, Mich., was thrown violently from his seat to the top of the car, striking on his head; he was taken out in an unconscious condition, and it is feared has received internal injuries.

[illegible] had both of her legs crushed, and was injured internally. She will probably not live.

Mrs. Wolcott, of Jonesville, Mich., was frightfully cut about the head and face, while her little boy was found, after the accident, sitting in one of hat racks, over the seat, entirely unhurt.

N. S. Brockway, of Jonesville, Mich., had his right knee dislocated.

Mrs. M. Friedman, of Muskegon, a sister-in-law of Mr. Friedman, of Roth & Friedman, of this city, had her head badly cut, besides sustaining other injuries.

The two sons of Mr. Shaefer, the agent of the Michigan & Ohio at Allegan, were seriously cut about the head, and one of them received a fatal fracture of the skull.

Mrs. Wm. Rundel, of Franklin, was seriously hurt.

Mr. C. E. Armstrong, of Toledo, received a number of severe bruises, none of them serious, however, and all the rest of the passengers were more or less bruised or shaken. None of the passengers in the other car were injured, and all of the train hands escaped.

Much credit is due Conductor Frank Vincent for his cool and daring action during and after the accident. When the coach was overturned the oil ran out of the lamps, and had Mr. Vincent, despite the fact that he was quite severely bruised himself, promptly extinguished the fire in the stove, the injured passengers would have been roasted alive before they could have been taken from the car.

The overturned coach is a total wreck and the loss to the company will be considerable. It is believed the accident came about in this manner. The ties of the road are of tamarack, and as the train rounded the curve, the spike holding one of the T rails in place drew out and sent the train from the track.

Jeff Kennedy, of Battle Creek, was on the train coming to Tecumseh. From him we learn some additional particulars. He was in the rear coach, that was overturned. The coach contained about twenty five passengers. It was dragged twenty yards or more after leaving the track and then pitched down an embankment and turned upon its side. The passengers were all thrown from their seats, and more or less bruised and shaken up. Mr. Kennedy received a slight bruise on his head, and one ankle was sprained. The wonder is that more of the passengers were not seriously hurt. Conductor Vincent exhibited the utmost coolness and courage. The moment the car left the track he pulled the bell rope to stop the train, and extinguished the fire in the stove. As soon as the train stopped he pulled off his coat and organized a relief corps to care for the wounded passengers. Too much praise cannot be given Conductor Vincent for his cool bravery and energetic work at the time of and after the accident.

George Sheeler of Cambridge, was in town Tuesday. From him we learned that Mrs. Chauncy Cooper was not as seriously hurt as was at first supposed. She is now improving rapidly and will soon be out again.

Last Saturday afternoon a serious affair took place at Milan. A negro by the name of Slaton, becoming too mossy from the effects of drink, was stopped by the marshal and requested to keep off the sidewalks. Leaving the marshal with the assistance of the deputy sheriff, James Richards, undertook to arrest him. The negro not taking the arrangement struck the sheriff cutting a severe gash in his cheek which in turn struck the deputy with the butt of his revolver. He was sandbagged again in the melee, Excitement preventing the negro was allowed to escape. Monday two officers from Monroe co. were in Tecumseh looking for the fugitive, [illegible] being tracked well up to the place. Mr. Richards is very badly considered dangerous.

BENEFIT FOR CO. "C."

[illegible] the well known popular play of the Spy of Shiloh, the net receipts to be applied to the purchase of a new flag for the company, and well drilled company it is which Tecumseh has at most reason to be proud.

This company is not a mere private organization but a part of the State Militia. An efficient militia is one of the safe guards of an enlightened commonwealth. It is an organization which drills and [illegible] year after year at expense of money and time to be ready [illegible] to go to the front in case of a sudden emergency. A good militia company is also an honor and business benefit to any community. The [illegible] fair and [illegible] of top company organization, [illegible] from the fact that they do not affect the legal status of these organizations nor reflect upon the public or local advantages springing therefrom.

At the state encampments the Tecumseh Guard has always taken the foremost position for excellent drill and the fine condition of her arms and equipments. Her boys are among our finest young men and we cannot afford to neglect her calls on us when they are so meritorious as the present one. Her old banner, by long use, has become hardly fit for service at the next encampment to be held this summer, and we should be mortified for our town, if by our own neglect, our boys should fail to present as fine a banner as any other company in the regiment on that occasion.

They will give us a fine entertainment, presented by good home talent, [illegible] ed manager, and will give us the full worth of the small sum charged for admission. Let us all respond by a generous attendance and a splendid benefit.

Last Saturday evening our quiet village was the scene of a female fight. The contestants, Miss Frankie Timmins and Mrs. Charles Kilburn met in front or near the M. E. church, when a quarrel commenced which ended in a hair and fist fight. We understand it was a draw. On Sunday morning Mrs. Kilburn being yet in a fighting mode, attacked her husband, Chas. Kilburn. A lively time ensued and the result was the skipping of Mr. Kilburn. Tecumseh regrets the voluntary removal of Mr. Kilburn from our community.

John F. Schroeder called the other day to liquidate his little account. He is still working Edwin R. Smith's farm on the section. Since his last purchase Mr. Smith now has 450 acres of land in one body on the Section and Mr. Schroeder will have charge of that farm during the coming season. We are inclined to think that he will have enough work to do to keep him out of mischief.

The Maryland Oyster Trade.

By a careful computation, there are employed in and about the numerous oyster packing establishments in the Maryland peninsula eight thousand men, women and children, white and colored, in the various capacities of shucking, washing, packing and packing. There are 500 boats and 2,000 men employed in the business, besides many hundreds who are kept busy in making boxes, barrels, kegs, cans and other packages, and in making ice, etc. Nearly every article used in the business, from the oyster boat to the oyster can, is made in Maryland. The oyster crop of Maryland is worth $5,000,000 per annum, and the business is a most important one to the state.

Tribute to a Mother.

Capt. Jack Crawford, the poet scout, pays the following eloquent tribute to his mother: "I said a prayer at my mother's knee, my earliest recollection of whom was kneeling at her side praying God to save a wayward father and husband. That mother taught me to speak the truth when a lie would have cried to follow her dust. I have tried to live up to that respect. It would require a large page to tell what this to me, the source of good angels, only my mother. The light of everything, everything good, pure and ennobling in my life, I owe to the memory of my mother. The inspiration of my earliest efforts, the hope of my latest years, the guiding star of my life, the source of all good in me, I owe to my mother. Her teachings, her prayers, her example, her memory, are all that save me from the lowest hell. Her memory is my religion. I have no other. I need no other. I worship at the shrine of my mother's memory. Around it all the tendrils of my being twine. Upon it I have poured the wealth of my love. Upon it I have lavished the treasures of my life. Upon it I have poured the vials of my wrath against those who would blacken it. Upon it I have poured the incense of my soul in worship. Over it I have poured the floods of my tears in sorrow. Upon it I have poured the benedictions of my soul in blessing. Upon it I have poured the ointment of my soul in anointing. Upon it I have poured the balm of my soul in healing. Upon it I have poured the oil of my soul in consecration. Upon it I have poured the libations of my soul in sacrifice

IN A PERSIAN STREET.

The Odd Things to Be Seen in the Thoroughfares of Teheran.

In such a climate as that of Teheran life is naturally passed chiefly in the open air. The chill of winter, rarely severe, seems to make little difference in the habits of the people. The shops are all open to the streets, the customers stand outside, and even the shopkeeper attends to most of his business from the exterior of the shop. If he is a baker, grocer or costermonger, in all probability he and the customer both stand in the street, retreating into the shop only when a string of camels or a dashing carriage forces them to move out of the way. A cobbler may frequently be seen attaching a piece of leathery to the pavement in front of his shop. The schools also lie in wait differ from the shops, in the midst of a crowded Persian street, only seen twenty or thirty lads seated on their heels repeating the lesson together in monotonous tone.

Another common sight in the streets of Teheran is the itinerant barber. The Koran enjoins the masculine Mohammedan to shave his crown. The Sunnees shave the entire head excepting a long lock in the center whereby, it is said, the archangel may pluck them out of the grave. But the Sheahs or Persian Mussulmans shave from the forehead to the nape of the neck, leaving a highly prized lock on each side. It is, therefore, common to see a man of the lower classes seated on the pavement, going through the operation of having his head shaved. The remaining hair and the beard are dyed, and it is rare that one sees gray hairs in Teheran. The first tint applied is henna, an orange-yellow vegetable dye. Many consider this so handsome as to prefer it without the further application of indigo which most select. The last tint, combined with the henna, imparts a durable and rather agreeable dark-brown color to the hair. The women also have their hair dyed and join the eyebrows with the pencil. All classes make use of the bath at least once a week, the wealthy having steam-baths attached to their dwellings. No Christian is ever permitted admittance to the baths of the Persians. The public baths answer the purpose of clubs and sewing circles; the women go in the morning to take their sewing with them, and, after being thoroughly steamed and scrubbed, devote several hours to smoking the kalian, embroidering, and discussing the scandal of the neighborhood, which they assiduously circulate on their return home.

Another street sight of Teheran is the tea-house, equivalent to the coffee-house of Constantinople or the beer-garden of Munich. These establishments are generally thronged towards the close of the day.

Both wine-drinking and card-playing are forbidden to true believers; and, therefore, neither is seen in these places of public resort. But both are freely indulged in at home. The card-players of Persia use a set of twenty cards in five suits of four each.

It is an interesting fact that America must relinquish the claim of having invented the gambler's favorite game of poker, for it was known in Persia centuries ago. The game played by the Persians is in principle poker or brag pure and simple, and betting often runs high with them.

Another characteristic sight in the streets of Teheran is the bread. Persian bread is made in sheets the thickness of sole leather; the best quality is somewhat thinner. It is formed in the shape and size of a side of leather. The baker with bare arms dexterously rolls a sheet of this dough from the counter where it is rolled out, tosses and rolls it over his left arm until reduced to the proper tenuity. With a rapid fling of both arms he then spreads it over the hot floor of the oven. In a few moments it is baked and spread out to cool. If there is a delicatessen lodge in the street near the shop one may see it covered with layers of bread. This bread is cheap, one cent a sheet, and what is more it is sweet and nourishing, and, with curds cheese and fruit, forms a staple article of diet with a large part of the population. Consequently, one constantly meets with people carrying sheets of bread home with them, the women helping them in front like leather aprons.—S. G. W. Benjamin in Cosmopolitan.

JOYS OF WALTZING.

Bill Nye Learns to Waltz and Experiences Unspeakable Pleasure.

I had just learned how to waltz around a ball-room to a little waltz music when I was blown across the Mississippi in September last by a high wind and broke one of my legs, which I broke in waltzing. When this accident occurred I had just got where I felt at liberty to choose a glorious being with starry eyes and fluffy hair and magnificently-molded form to sweep me around the rink to the dreamy music of Strauss. One young lady, with whom I had waltzed a good deal when she heard that my leg was broken, began to attend every dancing party she could hear of, although she had declined a great many previous to that. I asked her how she could be so cruelly and so gay while I was suffering. She said she was doing it to drown her sorrow, but her little brother told me on the quiet that she was dancing which I was not because she felt gay, but because she felt sorry. A friend of mine says I have a pronounced and distinctly original manner of waltzing, and that he never saw anybody, with one exception, who waltzed as I did, and that was Jonah. He claimed that either of us would be a good thinker. He could have the whole rink to himself. He said that he would like to see Jonah and me waltz together. He was not afraid that I would step on Jonah and not know it. You can see that a feeling of perhaps tinged it ever so little with envy when a man goes to the trouble to make a good spiteful story.—Bill Nye.

A woman will face an adoring world and sing to the man she loves through the keyhole of a door, but she wouldn't wear a hat that was out of style to save the government.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A ROMANCE.

How She Fell and How He Tumbled—A Love Story.

It was a corner,
On a public, icy corner.

As I approached it from one direction an angel approach it from the opposite. I mean an angel in female clothing—fourteen dollar hat—seal skin sacque—eight dollar boots—and such a face and form.

As we were about to pass she fell.

There was a big bag of sand business about it, but she might have a little slung—I never like to see—tossed up her right arm, and then gracefully settled down, in a heap, with one foot and ankle peeping out from under her dress.

I'll be hanged! I'll be hanged if it wasn't the most graceful thing in the shape of a fall I ever saw. I picked up my pretty, sweet, damaged and scarcely-to-be-paid-for angel in a calm lightning. I made up my mind to marry her. I had fully determined never to marry a woman who slipped down like a bow-legged quadruped and made herself an object of ridicule to the public.

II.

Months passed.

So did I.

My love never grew cold. She took occasion to fall again—this time off a step-ladder in the back yard as we trained a climbing rose.

Gracious! but how beautiful! She didn't go down with a swoosh and a kerplunk, but descended like a bird—slowly, gracefully, quietly, properly.

After that I hastened the marriage day. I had long ago determined never to marry one of these women who kick the step-ladder through the back fence as they take a tumble.

III.

We were spliced. My happiness kicked the beam at two thousand pounds.

Inside of a week she threw a clock at me. Next day she went into a mad fit and kicked two panels out of a door, and several panels out of me. She tried to saw me in two with a case-knife. She sought to explode a can of tomatoes under my chin as I slept. She stole my watch and pawned it—she plundered my wallet—she placed a torpedo in my path, and she fled with a man who was selling patent stove blacking—three packages for twenty-five cents, warranted not to raise any dust or spot the carpet.

IV.

Let 'em fall!

I stand on very icy corners and wait and grin and anticipate.

I cachinnate and chuckle. I am heartless. Let 'em fall gracefully or otherwise. Let 'em descend like feathers, or with a bump which shakes the earth. Let 'em scramble on all-fours, mad and chagrinned, or let 'em remain in graceful position until some soft-hearted fool rushes up to extend a hand.

I am there, but I am immovable, implacable, unrelenting.—Detroit Free Press.

THE WRONG TICKETS.

Why a Musical Critic Is Avoided as a Bad Man and Heavy Hitter.

A terrible mistake recently occurred in one of our most critical journals, which illustrates the danger of mixing up reviews of different art subjects, and the manner in which different branches of culture can be confounded. A sparring match and a concert took place on the same evening, and, by the chance, the tickets reached the wrong art critics of the newspaper. The musical critic, thinking it was merely a broadening out of his field of labor, boldly went at his task, and handed in the following review:

Science Punishing.—Thompson's Hall was well filled with an appreciative audience last night, who had the pleasure of being present at a delightful programme, which was charmingly carried out. Mr. Goldrick the accomplished and well-known pugilist, was the first on the programme, and he was received with a round of applause. Mr. Goldrick is a well-built man, and he showed to great advantage in his tights. He stripped very well, and showed a good deal of muscle. He was evidently in good condition. He at once struck out with his right, and followed up with a terrific left-hander, and managed to get away without return. He now set in some light work with both hands and for a short time seemed sparring for wind. A short rally followed, when Mr. Jones, the plucky little man, who had come out to meet Goldrick, was received with a round of applause. Jones is a game little

CLINTON PAGE.

C. S. SPAFFORD, REPORTER.

CLINTON, MICH., MARCH [illegible]

[illegible] and see Tom Thumb.

Best in town and the cold Folk's [illegible] Friday night.

[illegible] on Sunday evening.

Chas. Bell of Tecumseh was up to see his folks in Clinton, Sunday.

[illegible]

[illegible] Ladies seem to have all been in the sick list, and we understand the little girl was very sick.

Postmaster John Collen, of Sahine, was over to spend the Sabbath with his relatives and friends in Clinton.

The employees that have been taking a rest from their labors at the woolen mill are nearly all in their places again.

Rev. R. Northrup, of Monroe, spent the Sabbath in Clinton, and discoursed to the flock of the Baptist Church in the morning.

Henry Lancaster has a valuable horse that has been quite sick, but we are informed there are very fair chances for his recovery now.

[illegible] Schuler spent several days last week in Detroit, returning Monday, and entering upon his duties at the woolen mill.

The Saturday night rolling at Tecumseh still continues to draw upon the lovers of that sport, quite a delegation going down to participate last night.

Ed. Parker has given up the Evening News and Frederic VanDeMark has sold that paper and the Free Press with all the ease and promptitude of a long on the path.

[illegible] owing to the affliction of Prof. Laflin and wife had become somewhat mixed and irregular, but we think there is a chance to make up for the unavoidable omissions in the coming months.

Hammond & Gadd shipped cattle, sheep and hogs to Buffalo, last Saturday. They are bound to do their part to keep the line of trade, and if farmers would learn what is to their interest they would advise with them before disposing of their surplus bovine and porcine productions.

Prof. H. C. Rankin, of Jackson, says that the seekers of knowledge in the high school last Monday, by their presence and genial government, were aiding in the capacity of superintendent until the arrival of his friend, Geo. W. Loomis. The scholars spoke very highly of him, and we think deservingly.

[illegible] of Ayrtan, was in town Monday, on business pertaining to the leasing of his farm up north. He stated that the premises were in good condition to liberally compensate a good, faithful, energetic man and he had been recommended to this neighborhood by parties who were undoubtedly versed as his needs. The men in this section have not long to wait when a change is contemplated.

Prof. Geo. W. Loomis, of Albion, has come to occupy Prof. Laflin's position in our school while our time tried and faithful principal will be allowed the respite from his ardent duties that seem necessary to recover his impaired health. Mr. L. comes to us with the best of recommendations and from one of the most commendable educational centers in the Wolverine state, and the patrons of the school need borrow no anxiety as to its being kept up to the former high standard.

The regular meeting of the Ring Addison Club will take place next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the following program will be presented:

Recitation—Laura Sherwood.
Song—Belle House.
Reading—Nellie Martin.
Duet—Katie Leibelt and Bertha Gibson.
Reading—Mary Sinclair.
Recitation—Della Lane.
Recitation—Gertie Ward.
Recitation—Etta Stacy.
Recitation—Charlie Haggart.
Recitation—Leon Clark.
Reading—R. Randall.
Song—Mrs. Susie Fisk.

The High School Literary held its regular session last Friday evening, and after the debate which was well sustained on both sides through, volunteer substitutes for the absentees, in lieu of the main progs, the assemblage were treated to some very fine vocal and instrumental music by the quartet assisted by Charley Hay, Fred Morey and Melvin Coffin, with their guitars.

Mrs. Edgar M. Rose, has broken up housekeeping at Detroit, and is storing her household effects in the rooms just vacated by your reporter. We understand she will make her home for the present with his mother, Mrs. S. B. Rose.

Lyman Sweet, of Dundee, was in town Saturday, and we had pleasant chat with our old neighbor and acquaintance.

David Woodward took occasion to get the capacity of the mail bags, at this point, last Saturday, delivered to the office three bags full of mail matter, containing information pertaining to the mishaps derived from using the Clinton Chief and other implements manufactured at Clinton Foundry.

[illegible] has taken a desirable room, from the room back of the postoffice to the quarters previously occupied by it in what is familiarly known as the News building, on the corner of Chicago and Jackson streets, where we may be found at all times, in readiness to wait upon all who wish to transmit messages, and as we are located in the building, we can send a gentle lisping "hello," over the wire at any time, night or day, to places that are reachable.

Della Benham, Alice Race, Gertie Millspaugh and Nellie Monroe went to Tecumseh last Saturday and presented themselves as applicants for certificates, to the Board of School Inspectors in session at that place.

Mrs. Ed. Coffin is reported on the sick list.

Mrs. Wm. Keysor has moved into the house lately vacated by Mrs. D. Hixson, on Jackson street.

The sad intelligence reached here yesterday, of the death, at Freedom, [illegible] of Mrs. Kreisgeser's father, Adam Kress, aged 77 years.

Paul Kress, of Freedom, and John Kress, of Lodi, were in town, the guests of Fred Kreisgeser yesterday.

J. S. Kies started on a business trip to Cincinnati, Tuesday.

John McAdam and Chas. Nase were in attendance upon the Union School Inspectors meeting at Tecumseh, last Saturday.

Ray Blanchart was in town the first of the week shaking hands with his old friends.

Mrs. Nimocks' sister, who has been spending some time with her, started for Jackson Tuesday, where she will make a short stop with friends and then return to her California home.

President Brownell, of the woolen mill, took a trip to Cincinnati on business last week.

W. S. Kimball went to Chicago Wednesday, where he expects to meet A. C. Huntington and family, who will return with him to this village, we understand.

Mark Russell, the superintendent of the woolen mill, has had tendered him an excellent position in a mill at Blue Rapids, Kansas, and will shortly take his departure for that point. Mr. Russell, during his stay with us has secured the entire confidence and esteem, of the full force under his charge, by his untiring efforts to meet out to them that kindness a forgiving spirit prompts and which has its valuable reward wherever it is exercised and as far as we are conversant, has no enemies, but on the contrary, many warm friends in this place and vicinity, who unite in their best wishes for his future success and prosperity in whatever field of labor he may be called. He had intended to have gone east, where he also had an offer to take charge of a mill, but the Kansas offer proved more lucrative, and hence his determination to take the advice of Horace and go west.

A valuable team, belonging to A. P. Halladay took fright last Tuesday and run away, demolishing the wagon somewhat and breaking the evener to the whiffletrees near the postoffice, by being turned in at hitching post, one horse taking the inside and the other one the outside of the same, by parties who were endeavoring to stop them. They came from the west and left the wagon bear the wooden hill, having nothing but the neck yoke and whiffletrees to contend with as they were making up the village street at a breakneck speed. We were unable to learn the particulars but think no person was injured.

If we can make allowances for the amount of unilluminating gas already on hand, we may be allowed to state, that E. R. Smith is sinking a shaft in the lot back of his store with a view of obtaining gas of a different quality.

This weather is quite springy.

The pile of boxes opening up in front of E. W. Freese & Son's, disclose to the view of the passer-by an inviting assortment of new goods for their inspection.

Remember there is a good time approaching and be at the Hall tomorrow evening early.

FILLING A FLUSH.

One of Those Occasions that Sometimes Comes to the Poker Player.

I was on my way down the St. Lawrence on the Fall of [illegible] intending to stop at Ogdensburg long enough to pay up their bill at the hotel, and some $[illegible] for my own expenses. I may add that $300 was a considerable item to me, and it would have been different to refund it gracefully, as my personal expenses [illegible] for each day [illegible]

All this time I was swearing internally at myself, calling myself all kinds of bad names, and was thinking of giving some body to X [illegible] the [illegible]

The game proceeded, always some $[illegible] on, when another jack pot was started. I was getting desperate and seriously [illegible] whether I should risk the rest of my money on not. I found it went, jacks, queens, kings, aces, and there it stayed three times. Still on the table [illegible] the man two places at my right, the contractor, said: "I'll open it for [illegible]"

I looked at my hand, nothing at all—just a dirty little [illegible] I had been drawing for flushes several times, but never caught them. My [illegible] was too much money to [illegible] out, and the other [illegible] "Stay," said [illegible]

[illegible] the next man, still stay, said [illegible] I went [illegible] I was getting pretty low in my finances by this time. The other fellow stayed. It was a nice, big pot, too, to chance my getting it. I groaned [illegible] said the dealer. Two cards the opener asked up my finger, and card was thrown. My next deal it turned face up—just my luck, the queen of diamonds. I wanted a diamond to make my flush, but, of course, could not have it. Give me another one, I heard choking down my disappointment. The dealer carefully passed me another card, apologizing for his stupid mistake. I don't remember what the other men drew, my attention was caught by the appearance of the opener who was looking at his hand with a most fiendish expression of glee.

I hazed to pick up my cards, sure to be wrong. But there goes chucked out a jack of clubs and drew my face toward me—six of diamonds, caught my flush then, after all. Then, looking at my hand again—by all that's powerful—I nearly fell off my chair. Hadn't noticed I was only one short of a straight, and now I [illegible] six, seven, eight, nine, ten of diamonds, a straight flush! I looked at the dealer. Can it be possible. RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

Somewhat disturbed weather for the past few days.

Some have got a wrong impression by our report last week in regard to Mr. Wilcox's marbleizing business. He has not sold out the business, but [illegible] business was kept. He will fit up a set of rooms in the old cottage and move his business there in a few days.

Mr. Joe Pennington is among his relatives and friends once more.

Mrs. Robison of Mattawan, was with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Boss last week and is visiting her sister, Mrs. Warren Holdredge of Holloway, this week.

Augustus Montgomery who has been in very poor health for the past few months, was in the village Saturday.

John Hoy of Jackson, Mrs. Hoy's brother, is making them a visit.

Miss Eliza Ring of Grand Ledge, is the guest of the Misses Smith.

Mrs. Sarah J. Miller spent Thursday at her home, at A. Easlick's, of Macon.

Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Loree visited their daughter, Mrs. Lucking, of Detroit, from Saturday until Tuesday.

Mrs. Erastus Rappleye of Dundee, visited relatives here last week.

Mrs. S. H. Linn has been very sick for the past week.

Mrs. Joe Osborn is on the gain and is able to be up again.

Mr. Whiting, who has been very sick for some time, died Wednesday night of last week. The funeral was held at the house on Saturday at one o'clock P. M., Rev. W. J. Clack officiating. The remains were interred in the Friends cemetery, Raisin.

Rev. L. C. Chase of Adrian, will give an address on Prohibition at Exelby's Hall, Britton, Saturday, March 27th, at 2 o'clock P. M., after which the Union Caucus will be held to nominate a Township ticket.

The attendance at the social Friday night was very good considering the weather. The exercises passed off finely, and when the mum part of the exercises came in the President failed to hold her clack and was fined 25cts. Its nothing new, only a woman's weakness.

The literary will be held this week Friday night. A short programme of the usual character will be presented after which a mock law suit will be produced. The case is Mrs. M. A. Barrett vs. M. & O. R'y company, for burning her barn on Friday morning, March 12th, there is being quite a considerable interest taken by the main attorneys.

The social will give a Maple Sugar festival at the church April 2d, if sugar can be procured. Full particulars next week.

TIPTON TOPICS.

The "old folks" are going to have their "concert" Friday night, mud or no mud.

Magic Pyramid postponed one week.

The funeral services of Mr. Hardy were held at the Congregational church Sabbath morning. In spite of the almost impassible roads there were a good number present. Mr. Hardy was an old settler, having been a resident of Franklin upwards of 40 years, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He has been a member of the Congregational church some 15 years.

Mr. Reuben Langdon is moving his goods to the depot on stone-boats. The most convenient means of travel and transportation at present.

The recent frost has started the sap and sugar houses are beginning to smoke again. Some very nice syrup and sugar have been made in our bushes this spring, but in very small quantities.

It is understood that Mr. Buck has purchased the goods and rented the store of Mr. Knapp.

A much needed elevator has at last been obtained. It has long been evident that Tipton needed, and could not thrive without an elevator. The present one, though far better than none, is susceptible of vast improvements. It consists of a ten foot rail, and is of invaluable service in front of J. Fridd's.

Dan. Preston has been laid again with rheumatism. It is a good time to be sick, i. e. as good a time as we shall have in 12 months.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

[illegible] and [illegible] are looking up good every [illegible] without [illegible] and [illegible] with the halo of science are leading in the mysterious glow of conjection over what has been, is, will or might be. Yes if we only the universal clothe the same old picnic in its native white.

[illegible] of course, but when our ladies have no use for the weapon because they have nothing to carve, and cry because they are hungry, a surprising diffidence is manifested about righting the wrong, except by occasional spasmodic efforts of here and there individuals.

An invalid mother dependent for care on a drunken son, is almost as pitiable an object, as a man with a gash in his arm, no matter how he came by it. The law has kindly attached a penalty to slashing offences that can scare family figure heads into running away sometimes, but there is an indifference about starving the aged and helpless, that needs praying for. Prayers are such a cheap charity that I do not hesitate asking for that kind of help for an old lady here, but unless she is rescued from the tender care by carnal humanity, she will die of systematic starvation and neglect. Twice, during the past week, she has been found by different ladies, fainting from hunger; and as such discoveries are not new it seems time they were mentioned in the catalogue of accidents.

The Masonic fraternity have assisted her some in the past, but this son who has perhaps grown tired of seeing her around, assured society that their charity was superfluous.

Now I say she is cruelly neglected, and am ready to produce the proof. A great inquiry why church pews are deserted has convulsed the clergy of late. My desk is dusky because I am not in sympathy with profession that belittles practice. This old lady, who drags out existence amid squalor and dirt, is a member of a church, and is probably the only one that is really in need of daily bread within its aristocratic circle. She has been prayed for by rule, but an organized supervision of her waning life would probably be tolerated by the Lord, and look twice as respectable to your disagreeable correspondent.

FARMER'S SOCIAL CLUB.

Friday evening, March 19, the Farmer's Social Club held the last evening meeting for the winter at E. O. Rector's. The attendance was large as it usually is at the last meeting and when everyone is anticipating a feast of maple sugar. There was no question for discussion but an excellent program was finely carried out. Each one did his or her part so well that it is useless to speak of anyone in particular.

Mrs. [illegible] in regard to butterine, that might have called for considerable discussion had it been read at any other meeting. However it may get people to thinking and the subject may be called for discussion at some future meeting.

After the program, an excellent picnic supper and maple sugar, was served by a committee of young people. The remainder of the evening was spent in pleasant sociability until a late hour when all departed for their homes feeling that the meetings of the Farmer's club had been both pleasant and profitable.

The next meeting will be held Friday afternoon April 28th, and Friday at two o'clock. There will be a [illegible] following topics.

1st. Existing laws and changes governing Overseers of Highways.
2d. Construction of roads.

A WORD ABOUT PICKEREL

Otsego Lake, March [illegible]

Mr. Editor: I saw by the HERALD of last week that Frank James caught in Devils Lake what he thought was a big pickerel weighing only [illegible] lbs.

What do you think Hiram Dager of Otsego Lake will come up and we our smallest lakes the other day and caught a pickerel that weighed 21 lbs and it was not a very good day for pickerel either. We have a good many small lakes in Otsego county, and they are lined with big fish, as some of the Tecumseh people can testify. This is no fish story. Truth is stranger than fiction. We have plenty of snow, and still snowing.

O. H. Kellogg.

The President continues to date Congress in Sections. Last evening forty one Senators were invited. They were seated at the table in the alternate order of Democrat and Republican. The State parlors were brilliantly lighted, but there were no flowers, no music, no women.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[illegible]

It is all against which public sentiment has long manifested itself. Yet the jobbing goes on. It is estimated that the expense of transporting the remains of Senator Miller to California by special train and sending with it a congressional committee which will return in the same way, will be $20,000. The expense of the funeral train and committee that have gone with the deceased Representative Hahn to New Orleans, will cost at least half that amount.

No member of Congress has had the courage to declare himself against this senseless way of spending the people's money. It was a Mr. Oates, a one armed Democrat from Ala. He offered a resolution to amend the House rules so as to prohibit the appointment of funeral committees to accompany the dead bodies of members beyond the limits of Washington City. If it should be adopted, then the proposed plan of confining the delivery of eulogies over deceased members to special Sunday sessions would be next in order.

It is carrying the matter further than either duty or good taste demands to lay aside the nations business for a whole day when a member's death is announced, and for a whole day to honor his memory with panegyric oratory. No patriotic member of either House of Congress would wish to have his demise stop public business or desire a junketing expedition to celebrate it.

Death has been busy in the forty-ninth Congress, having already taken two Republican and two Democratic members from the Lower House, and from the Senate, one Republican Senator and a Democratic Vice President. The sudden death of ex Governor Hahn of Louisiana, a prominent Republican Congressman from that State, was ascribed to the bursting of a blood vessel from violent coughing. In his private parlor at Willard's hotel, he was found outstretched on the floor lifeless, attired in his night robe and covered with blood.

Among other changes proposed in Congress is one substituting the third Tuesday of April for inauguration day in place of the fourth of March. It is held that the latter day, which was adopted by the Continental Congress for the inauguration of the new government, now causes public disappointment, crowding and jostling the [illegible] Washington City. The first Tuesday in April is proposed that the anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington be commemorated by the inauguration of the President elect upon the anniversary, and that this shall be the day appointed for the beginning of [illegible] in institutions.

THE TECUMSEH MURDER.

THE LAST SCENE IN A TRAGEDY.

AARON PALMER'S CHEERLESS BODY FOUND IN A SWAMP IN THE TOWNSHIP OF RAISIN

Identification of the Body and the Coroner's Inquest—The Remains Delivered to the Father and the Funeral Services.

AARON PALMER

A RISE IN HOSPITALITY.

On the 28th of November last, with began hour of midnight, Tecumseh was shocked by a tragic shooting affray. Aaron Palmer shot down the Anderson Brothers, Ernie and Bert, on the public street near the post office, and taking advantage of the momentary excitement and bewilderment of the bystanders, he disappeared in the darkness and fled. He was pursued one block south of where the shooting occurred, and when passing between the houses of C. A. Wright and Mrs. Spofford, he eluded his pursuers and escaped. That was the last time Palmer was ever seen alive. The officers were upon his track without the least delay. Within an hour the sheriff had been notified, an Adrian mounted posse of warning had been dispatched in all directions. A reward of $200 was offered for his arrest, and every precautionary measure taken by the county officials to detect the fugitive, if he were concealed, and to capture him if he were a fugitive.

It is unnecessary now to recount the exciting scenes which stirred up this community during the week succeeding this event. There was but little rest for the citizens of this town on the following Sabbath. Our residents organized themselves into gangs and the woods were scoured in every direction, without avail, and during that Sabbath of turmoil and excitement two lives seemed to be trembling in the balance. On Monday it was learned that Bert was out of danger, but not until the latter part of the week, when the physicians announced that Ernie had passed the critical point in safety, and our citizens dispel their fears and resume the accustomed avocations.

Weeks and months have passed by since then. The Andersons have been restored to health, and are quietly attending to their daily business duties in the store. In the meantime the officers have been relentlessly pressing their search for the fugitive. Seven suspects have been arrested in different parts of the country since the shooting occurred, and released as in the post-mortem inquest elicited no evidence against them. Rewards aggregating $1,000 were offered for the capture of Palmer, and no number of officers could be employed in the search without exhausting the county treasury. Our officers were convinced, and so were the people, that Palmer was secreted in our village, and that he was being secretly fed by his sympathizers.

Such was the situation of affairs when, on the morning of the 19th of March, a little girl, while passing along the road, south of the village, saw a swale in the woods, and upon the ice she saw what she thought was a man's boot. She ran home and told her story. Her father, Mr. Stretch, and others, went to the place and found the body of Aaron Palmer, which was in very advanced state of decomposition. Rumors flew thick and fast. Also, two hundred people visited the place during the day. The body was found about ten rods east of the road and five rods south of the north margin of the swale, just east of a clump of willows, which concealed it entirely from view to persons traveling along the highway.

The following diagram shows the location of the swale with reference to the nearest buildings, and the place where represented by the figure 6, where the body was found.

How strangely things happen sometimes! This was the singular manner in which the DISCOVERY WAS MADE.

During the noon hour on Friday last, March 19th, in District school No. 5, two little girls who were attending school, Melda Russell and Nora Charles, aged ten and eleven years, wandered down upon this swale in search of willow buds to present to the teacher. After plucking a few buds from one clump of brush, they saw, on going around the brush, what appeared to be the body of a man lying flat upon his face. Melda discovered the object first and said, "Why, what is that? A man?" and they both ran back to the school house so badly frightened that they failed to report their discovery before the afternoon session of school was called. During the afternoon recess they told the teacher and some of their school mates. The teacher, however, put little credence in the story, think it a bit of childish imagination and refused to let the girls go until after they had spelled for night. But two other girls, they found, returned to the spot. Melda Russell and Melissa Baldwin then mustered up courage enough to approach the object and to satisfy themselves that it actually was the dead body of a man. They then returned to the school house and told of some larger boys to go with them to the spot. The boys then hailed some men passing by and reported their find to Mr. Cairns. He at once drove to Tecumseh and notified the officials, and dispatches were sent to the Sheriff and Prosecuting Attorney. Crowds of people went there from the village, as the feeling was prevailing that it might prove to be Palmer's body. The Sheriff and Prosecutor started for the scene at once and arrived in an hour's time, after a hard drive through the mud. Immediately upon their arrival, the necessary formalities were taken to hold an inquest.

THE INQUEST THE FARMER.

The body having been removed from the spot where found and where it was partly concealed by being frozen in the earth, it was taken to the highway and the nearest house beneath the light of the moon. His father and brother were both present, and fully identified the body. There was no room for any uncertainty on that point. His right hand clutched the same revolver he had used on the evening of his escape. Letters addressed to him were found in his pockets. He wore the same clothes as when he escaped after the shooting. Even his shoes were found laced in the same manner as when he left the house, as before described in my first fatal narrative. The features were in good preservation and were recognized at once when the face was removed. E. J. Russell, Justice of the Peace at Raisin, had charge of the proceedings as coroner, and the following persons were sworn: Dr. R. Cairns, Mr. B. B. Colvin, Mr. E. B. Colvin, Mr. E. Hall, R. F. Tiles. Only two witnesses were sworn, Mr. A. J. Palmer, father of the deceased, and Constantine Stretch. Their testimony is given in substance below.

A. J. Palmer, being duly sworn, testified as follows: I know the person lying here dead. He is my son Aaron Palmer. On the night of the 28th of November I last saw him alive near the corner of Chicago and Railroad streets in the village of Tecumseh. He had a fracas with the Anderson boys. There was some shooting done. I have never seen him since that evening until I saw him here dead. There cannot be any mistake but what it is my son Aaron. I first saw him in a swale on Mr. Stretch's land to-day. He was lying dead when I first saw him. He was lying partially on his side, face downward, was frozen fast in the ice. I identified him by his clothing and by his features and articles found on his person. From the condition he was in when I last saw him alive and the condition I saw him in here to-day, it is my judgment that he came to his death by his own hand.

H. W. Stevens was sworn and testified: Knew Aaron Palmer in his lifetime. I have examined the body of the person lying here dead. It is Aaron Palmer. I last saw him the 28th day of November last. He was on Chicago street in the village of Tecumseh. He was doing nothing. This was in the afternoon before the shooting. I should judge he was a person of good health physically. I next saw him to-day. I first saw him on land owned by Mr. E. C. Stretch opposite where we now are. I found him lying partially on his left side and face, dead. He was frozen in the ice. We cut the ice and pried him out where found. His right hand lay underneath him under his chest, and in his hand was a 32 caliber revolver. I examined the revolver. It had three cartridges left in it, and two empty chambers and one chamber with the shell in, but the load was shot out. I discovered a bullet hole in his head just above the right ear; it passed through the head and came out of his left temple. I did not discover any other mark of violence on his person. When I first saw him to-day he was lying on a low, wet, marshy piece of ground behind some willows from the road. It is my opinion he was not dragged there, but he fell. In my judgment he came to his death by his own hand by shooting himself with the above described revolver.

The jurors returned the following verdict which was duly signed by them and attested by Justice Russell.

THE VERDICT.

An inquisition, taken at the township of Raisin, said county, on the 19th day of March, 1886, before Edward J. Russell, one of the justices of the peace of said county, upon the body of Aaron Palmer, then lying dead, by the oaths of the jurors, whose names are hereto subscribed, who, being sworn to inquire in behalf of the people of this state, when, in what manner and by what means, the said Aaron Palmer came to his death, upon their oaths do say that the said Aaron Palmer came to his death by his own hand, by shooting himself with a 32 calibre revolver through the head, the ball entering the head just above the right ear, and coming out of his head in his left temple; and so the jurors aforesaid say that the said Aaron Palmer, in the manner aforesaid, then and there, himself voluntarily killed and murdered.

At the close of the inquest the remains were turned over to the family and were at once conveyed to Mr. A. J. Palmer's residence in this village.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

The necessary preliminaries for the sepulture of the body having been taken, the formal services were held at Mr. Palmer's residence on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The house was well filled with sympathizing neighbors and friends to offer their respects and condole with the bereaved parents in their affliction. The services were brief and were conducted by Rev. F. Atkins, pastor of the Baptist church, with appropriate singing by the members of the Baptist choir. Mr. Atkins's remarks were exceedingly pertinent to the occasion. They properly enforced the lesson conveyed by the sad event, and at the same time carried consolation to the broken hearts of the mourners. At the close of the ceremony the hearse slowly wended its way to the cemetery, and the poor boy's remains were then dropped into their final resting place.

After the excitement attending the discovery of the body was over, and the funeral rites had been observed, the inevitable reaction came. Public sentiment in the community underwent a complete change. It was felt that the erring boy had sufficiently expiated his crime, that nothing more could be done for the dead, and that our obligations were now due to the living. For more than three nights Palmer's body had been buffeted by the storms of heaven, and the wild wintry winds had chanted a dirge requiem over his fleshless form. The frail tenement of clay had been tenderly carried to the old home, where with prayer and music, and the tears of friends, the final farewell was said, and the corpse was laid away into its final home. Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust.

But the stricken father and mother, brother and sister, whose domestic circle has been so ruthlessly invaded, need our sympathy and aid in this hour of affliction. Let us forget the tragic deed and its tragic ending, and turn our thoughts to comforting the broken hearted and binding up their wounds. And shall we all, let us try and put up a public sentiment in this community which will demand and enforce the respect of law, the rights of suffering and woe.

MICHIGAN CROP REPORT, MARCH 1, 1886.

For this report returns have been received from 307 correspondents in 83 counties, and from one hundred and seventeen of these returns are from 821 townships in the four southern tiers of counties.

In answer to the question, "Has wheat during February suffered injury from any cause?" 409 correspondents in the southern four tier of counties answer "Yes" and 54 "No," and in the northern counties, 81 answer "Yes," and 183 "No." In the southern counties the ground has been bare of snow since the middle of February, but in the northern counties, as late as March 1, the average depth of snow was 8 inches. At Lansing the average temperature during February was 22.44° F., or nearly 12 degrees higher than the average for Feb. 1885. During the last 14 days of the month the average day temperature was 31° F., and the average night temperature 17° F. On seven days the thermometer registered above the freezing point and on seven nights it registered from 5 to 5 degrees above zero. During the first seven days of March the average day temperature was 32° F. and the average night temperature 12° F. The day temperature ranged from 19 to 42 degrees, and the night temperature [illegible] degrees above zero. With such weather the wheat crop has certainly been injured, but to what extent it is useless at present to attempt to estimate.

Reports have been received of the quantity of wheat marketed by farmers during the month of February at elevators and mills. Of these 314 are in the southern four tiers of counties, which is 38 per cent. of the whole number of elevators and mills in these counties. The total number of bushels reported marketed is 687,841, of which 36,649 bushels were marketed in the first of southern tier of counties, 208,742 bushels in the second tier, 109,452 bushels in the third tier, 114,626 bushels in the fourth tier, and 58,769 bushels in the counties north of the southern four tiers. At 35 elevators and mills, or 16 per cent. of the whole number from which reports have been received, there was no wheat marketed during the month.

The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in August, September, October, December, January and February is 10,606,997, or about 58 per cent. of the crop 1885. The number of bushels reported marketed in the same months of 1884 and 1885 was 4,626,892, or 28 per cent. of the crop of 1884. For these months in 1884 and 85 reports were received from about 48 per cent. and in 1885 about 54 per cent. of the elevators and mills in the southern four tiers of counties.

March April May

When the weather grows warmer, that extreme tired feeling, want of appetite, dullness, languor, and lassitude, afflict almost the entire human family, and scrofula and other diseases caused by humors, manifest themselves with many. It is impossible to throw off this debility and expel humors from the blood without the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I could not sleep, and would get up in the morning with barely life enough to get out of bed. I had no appetite, and my face would break out with pimples. I thought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon began to sleep soundly, could get up without that tired and languid feeling, and my appetite improved." R. A. SAXTON, Kent Co.

"I had been much troubled by general debility. Last spring Hood's Sarsaparilla proved just the thing needed. I derived an immense amount of benefit. I never fell better." H. F. MILLER, Boston, Mass.

At no other season is the system so susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable tonic and invigorant. The impure state of the blood, the deranged digestion, and the weak condition of the body, caused by its long battle with the cold, wintry blasts, all call for the reviving, regulating and restoring influences so happily and effectively combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me a great deal of good. I had no particular disease, but was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. C. F. STANDISH, Cohoes, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"For seven years, spring and fall, I had scrofulous sores come out on my legs, and for two years, was not free from them at all. I suffered very much. Last May I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and before I had taken two bottles, the sores healed and the humor left me." C. A. ANDERSON, Auburn, Me.

"There is no blood purifier equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E. S. PRUYN, Rensselaer, N. Y.

LITTLE SWEETHEART.

BY HELEN HUNT JACKSON.

She was very young. No man had ever made love to her before. She belonged to the people—the common people. Her parents were poor, and could ill afford any wedding trousseau for her. But that did not make any difference. A carriage was sent from the Court for her, and she was carried away just as she was in her stuff gown—the gown the Prince first saw her in. He liked her best in that, he said, and, moreover, what odds did it make about clothes? Were there not rooms upon rooms in the palace full of best silken clothes for Princess Sweethearts?

It was dark out of doors when she was taken. But, all inside it was high glare, rays reaching up to the ceiling and filled with flowers and curtains and laces and jewels—everything a woman could want was there and all of the very finest. What satins, what velvets, what and stockings of the finest silk. The Little Sweetheart gazed, breathless, at them all. But she did not have time to wonder, for in a moment more she was met by attendants, some young, some old, all dressed gayly. She did not dream at first that they were servants, till they began, altogether, asking her what she would like to put on. Would she have a lace gown or a satin? Would she like feathers or flowers? And one ran this way and one that, and among them all the Little Sweetheart was so flustered she did not know if she were really alive and on the earth, or had been transported to some fairy land; and before the fairy realized what was being done, they had her clad in the most beautiful gown that was ever seen. White satin with gold butterflies on it, and a white lace mantle embroidered in gold butterflies; all white and gold she was, from top to toe, all but one foot, and there was something very odd about that. She heard one of the women whispering to the other, behind her back: "It's too bad there isn't any mate to this slipper. Well, she will have to wear this pink one. It is too big, but if we pin it up at the heel she can keep it on. The Prince really must get some more slippers."

And then they put on her left foot a pink satin slipper, which was so much too big that it had to be pinned up in plaits at each side, and the pearl buckle on top hid her foot quite out of sight. But the Little Sweetheart did not care. In fact she had no time to think, for the Queen came sailing in and spoke to her, and crowds of ladies in dresses so bright and beautiful that they dazzled her eyes; and the Prince was there kissing her, and in a minute they were married and went floating off in a dance which was so swift it did not feel so much like dancing as it did like being carried through the air by a gentle wind.

Through room after room, there seemed no end to the rooms, and each one more beautiful than the last, from garden to garden, some full of trees, some with beautiful lakes in them, some full of solid beds of flowers, they went, sometimes dancing, sometimes walking, sometimes, it seemed to the Little Sweetheart, floating. Every hour there was some new beautiful thing to see, some new beautiful thing to do. And the the Prince never left her for more than a few minutes; and when he came back he brought her gifts and kissed her. Gifts upon gifts he kept bringing, till the Little Sweetheart's hands were so full she had to lay all the things down on tables or window-sills, whenever she could find places for them, which was not easy, for all the rooms were so full of beautiful things that it was difficult to move about without knocking something down.

The hours flew by like minutes. The sun came up high in the heavens, but nobody seemed tired; nobody stopped; dance, dance, whirl, song and laughter, and ceaseless motion. This was all that was to be seen or heard in this wonderful Court to which the Little Sweetheart had been brought.

Noon came, but nothing stopped. Nobody left off dancing, and the musicians played faster than ever.

And so it was all the long afternoon and through the twilight; and as soon as it was really dark, all the rooms and the gardens and the lakes blazed out with millions of lamps, till it was lighter far than day, and the ladies' dresses, as they danced back and forth, shone and sparkled like butterflies' wings.

At last the lamps began, one by one, to go out, and by degrees a soft sort of light, like moonlight, settled down on the whole place, and the fine dressed servants that had robed the Little Sweetheart in her white satin gown took it off, and put her to bed in a gold bedstead with golden silk sheets.

"Oh!" thought the Little Sweetheart, "I shall never go to sleep in the world, and I don't want to! I shall just keep my eyes open all night and see what happens next."

All the beautiful clothes she had taken off were laid on a sofa near the bed—the white satin dress at the top, and the big pink satin slipper, with its lovely pearl buckle on the floor, in plain sight. "Where is the other?" thought the Little Sweetheart. "I do believe I lost it off. That's the way they come to have so many odd ones. But, how queer! I lost off the tight one! But the big one was pinned to my foot," she said, speaking out loud before she thought. "That was what kept it on."

"You are talking in your sleep my love," said the Prince, who was close by her side, kissing her.

"Indeed, I am not asleep at all! I haven't shut my eyes," said the Little Sweetheart.

And the next thing she knew it was broad daylight, the sun streaming into her room, and the air resounding in all directions with music and laughter, and flying steps of dancers, just as it had been yesterday.

The Little Sweetheart sat up in bed and looked around her. She thought it very strange that she was all alone, the Prince gone, and no one there to attend her; in a few minutes more she noticed that all her clothes were gone, too.

"Oh," she thought, "I suppose one never wears the same clothes twice in this court, and they will bring me others." I hope there will be two slippers alike to-day."

Presently she began to grow impatient; but, being a timid little creature, and having never before seen the inside of a court or been a Prince's Sweetheart, she did not venture to stir or to make any sound, only sat still in her bed, waiting to see what would happen. At last she could not hear the sounds of the dancing and laughing and playing and singing any longer. So she jumped up and, rolling one of the golden sheets around her, looked out of the windows. There they all were, the crowds of gay people, just as they had been the day before when she was among them, whirling, dancing, laughing, singing. The tears came into Little Sweetheart's eyes as she gazed. What could it mean that she was deserted in this way, not even her clothes being left her? She was as much a prisoner in her room as if the door had been locked.

As hour after hour passed a new misery began to oppress her. She was hungry, seriously, distressingly hungry. She had been too happy to eat the day before. Though she had spoken and asked many delicious beverages and foods, which the Prince had pressed upon her, she had not taken any substantial food, and now she began to feel faint for the want of it. As more than one hour elapsed she was accustomed in her father's house to eat regular, the pangs of her hunger grew unbearable.

"I can't stand it another minute," she said to herself, "and I don't have to, either! I'm going to find something to eat. I will go down the back way, in the stairs. There must be a kitchen for use."

So saying, she opened one of the doors and timidly peered into the next room. It was one of the rooms with the lakes and glittering with the rays and lights upon them. She pushed the door open a little more and looked out into the room. No one was in it. Encouraged by this, she ventured to open the door still more widely and stepped out into the room. She ran across the room and took hold of the handle of one of the glass doors. Alas, it was locked. She tried another, another, all were locked. In despair she turned to fly back to her bed room when suddenly she spied on the floor, in a corner close by the case where hung her beautiful white satin dress, a little heap of what looked like brown rags. She darted toward it, snatched it from the floor, and in a second more was safe back in her room. It was her own old stuff gown.

"What luck!" said the little Sweetheart; "nobody will ever know me in this. I'll put it on and creep down the back stairs and beg a mouthful of food from some of the servants, and they'll never know who I am; and then I'll go back to bed and stay there till the Prince comes to fetch me—for, of course, he will come before long; and if he comes and finds me gone, I hope he will be frightened half to death, and think I have been carried off by robbers!"

Poor foolish Little Sweetheart! It did not take her many seconds to slip into the ragged old stuff gown, then she crept out, keeping close to the walls, so that she could hide behind the furniture if anyone saw her.

She listened cautiously at each door before she opened it, and turned away from some where she heard sounds of merry talking and laughing. In the third room that she entered she saw a sight that arrested her instantly and made her cry out in astonishment; a girl, who looked so much like her that she might have been her own sister, and, what was stranger, wore a brown stuff gown exactly like her own, was busily at work in this room killing spiders. As the Little Sweetheart appeared in the doorway, this girl looked up and said: "Oh, ho! There you are, are you! I thought you'd be out before long." And then she laughed unpleasantly.

"Who are you?" said the little Sweetheart, beginning to tremble all over.

"Oh, I'm a Prince's Sweetheart," said the girl, laughing still more unpleasantly, and leaning on her broom, she stared at the Little Sweetheart from top to toe.

"But——," began the Little Sweetheart.

"Oh, we're all Princes' Sweethearts," interrupted several voices, coming all at once from different corners of the big room; and before the Little Sweetheart could get another word, she found herself surrounded by half a dozen or more girls and women, all carrying brooms and all laughing unpleasantly as they looked at her.

"What!" she grasped, as she gazed at their stuff gowns and their brooms. "You were all of you Prince's Sweethearts? Is it only for one day, then?"

"Only for one day," they all replied.

"And always after that do you have to kill spiders?" she cried.

"Yes; that or nothing," they said. "You see it is a great deal of work to keep all the rooms in the Court clean."

"Isn't it very dull work to kill spiders?" said the Little Sweetheart.

"Yes, very," they said, all speaking at once. "But it's better than sitting still, doing nothing."

"Don't the Princes ever speak to you?" sobbed the Little Sweetheart.

"Yes, some times," they answered.

Just then the Little Sweetheart's own Prince came hurrying by, all armor from head to foot, splendid shining armor that clinked as he walked.

"Oh, there he is!" cried the Little Sweetheart, springing forward, then suddenly she recollected her stuff gown and shrank back into the group. But the Prince had seen her.

"Oh, how d'do!" he said kindly. "I was wondering what had become of you. Good-bye. I'm off for the grand review to-day. Don't tire yourself out over the spiders. Good-bye" and he was gone.

"I hate him!" cried the Little Sweetheart, her eyes flashing and cheeks scarlet.

"Oh, no, you don't!" exclaimed all the spider-sweepers.

"That's the worst of it. You may think you do, but you don't. You love him all the time after you're once begun."

"I'll go home!" said the Little Sweetheart.

"You can't," said the others. "It is not permitted."

"Is it always just like this in this Court?" she asked.

"Yes, always the same. Quality just like another; all whirl and dance from morning till night, and new people coming and going all the time, and spiders most of all. You can't think how fast brooms wear out in this Court."

"I'll die!" said the little Sweetheart.

"Oh, no, you won't," they said. "There are some of us, in some of the foomishers, that are wrinkled and gray-haired. The most of the Sweethearts live to be old."

"Do they?" said the Little Sweetheart, and burst in to tears.

Regina's Magnificent Distances.

Regina, in the Northwest Territory, is laid out ten miles square. The post office is in the centre of this square, and there are four government buildings at different corners. A gentleman who paid the town a visit says: I asked where the bank of Montreal was and was told that it was three-fourths of a mile down the road. Searching for a hotel I found it to be six miles away in one direction, while the station is two miles the other way. It is a city of magnificent distances and no prospects, beyond those freezing to death of its inhabitants.

No Difference.

Talmage says "women are an improved edition of men." Yes, like the improved editions of Shakespeare and Darwin, the improvement consists solely in a more costly and elegant cover, bedecked with golden ornaments and adornments, but in the book itself there is absolutely no change, for better or for worse.

STAMMERING.

An Affliction Which Can Be Easily Cured by Proper Treatment.

Stammering is an affection of the vocal organs, causing a hesitancy and difficulty of enunciation. The best authorities regard it as a mere habit, as distinct from a physical defect. There can be no doubt that the impediment is aggravated by the greatest exertions of the mind to overcome it, but, by proper training, it may be entirely overcome, and the natural tones of the voice restored. A painful effort to articulate certain letters. This trouble arises from disordered respiration and disappears when the habit of closing the glottis is overcome and the air is allowed to pass freely in and out of the lungs. Another trouble consists in the reiteration of syllables before words can be fully formed. The cause of this difficulty arises from the habit of trying to speak with the mouth rather than the throat. All effort of speech should proceed from the throat, and when this change is made there can be easily regained. Stammering is in nearly every case quite curable by the cultivation of a habit of correct speaking. This can only be acquired by studying the processes of speech, the relation of breath to articulate sounds, the position of the tongue and other vocal organs, and a patient application of these principles in slow and watchful exercise. The lungs constitute a pair of bellows, and the mouth, in all its varying shapes the nozzle of the bellows. The passage of the throat must be kept open and the breath expelled by means of the action of the diaphragm, not by downward pressure of the chest. All sound originates in the throat, and all effort in speech must be thrown back behind the articulating organs, which must be kept passive, yielding to the air, always opening to give it exit, and never resisting it by the ascent of the tongue or of the jaw. The head must be held firmly on the neck to give free play to the organs, and the fact never forgotten that the efficacy of speech depends upon the unrestrained emission of the material of speech, which is breath. The one difficulty found in curing stammering by the application of these commonsense principles is that the victim of the habit has not the needed patience and persistence to apply them.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

One of the passengers on the Katahdin on her recent memorable trip was a Massachusetts doctor who had made a specialty of a remedy for seasickness, which he has recommended very frequently to his friends, and in the efficacy of which he had the most unlimited confidence. The Massachusetts doctor was seasick that remedy, no more. As the steamer went into Portsmouth harbor he came on deck, and in a sorrowful tone of voice spoke thus to one of the officers: "I never take any more of that villainous stuff. I hope I may be hung and quartered. It made me sicker than a horse."—Forest and Country.

CATARRH.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern therapeutics has been attained by the Iodon treatment for catarrh, out of 500 patients treated during the past six months, fifty-three per cent have been cured of the stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most intelligent men that the diseases due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues. Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished he claims the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is mentioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and so other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The Application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured by one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

Default of payment having been made of a mortgage made by Cecil Clark to Horace Brewer, Albert E. Brewer and Hudson W. Conking, bearing date the 4th day of August A. D. 1880, and of record in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee County, Michigan, in Liber 33, of mortgages on Pages 57 and 58, on which mortgage there remains now due and owing of the principal and accrued interest, the sum of seven Hundred and three dollars and forty-nine cents ($703.49) and no proceedings at law or in equity have been taken for the collection of the same.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power and provisions in said mortgage contained and by virtue of the statutes of the state of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys above mentioned and interest at seven per cent per annum to accrue the costs of this foreclosure including an attorney fee as provided by law, I shall on the 4th day of June A. D. 1886, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, sell at public vendue to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian in said County of Lenawee (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said County of Lenawee) the land and premises described in said mortgage, viz: All that parcel of land situated in the township of Ridgeway, Lenawee County, Michigan, described as follows:

The West half of the South East quarter of section number twelve (12) containing eighty acres of land more or less, all in town six south of range five east.

Dated March 4th, 1886.

ESTATE OF JOSEPH W. GRAY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the 1st day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Joseph W. Gray, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of Sarah Gray, widow of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament, and allowance and relief therein, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Charles Burridge, surviving executor named in said instrument or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 29th day of March, 1886, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.
A. H. Bagley, Probate Register.

FARM DRAINAGE

trating deeply into a warm loose subsoil, they are forced to spread out [illegible] partial growth. That crop on such land should suffer from drought seems impossible, but they are most likely to do so when the water is lowering by evaporation, leaving a hard soil with the roots near the surface. None but aquatic plants can send roots into cold water land. Experience shows that a well drained and thoroughly cultivated soil will give the soil of the dew can support vegetation with the moisture condensed from the air which circulates through the lower strata. To [illegible] place dry mulch of earth in a [illegible] depth of inches feet, will [illegible] the lower part [illegible] but weather [illegible] have been said we have [illegible] that the effects of underdrainage vary with varying soils and [illegible] climates. The system used for [illegible] satisfied only because they do not know what the best results might be. But nothing at the present time compares with good drain tile in the point of economy and durability combined. The best shape is now conceded to be the round form, for several reasons. The laying these a small per cent of extra care, labor or thought, may in time prove worth a large per cent of the original cost. So much outlay of money should not be endangered by the lack of small considerations. These drains should receive special care in securing for them a uniform descent, except with very heavy fall, good discharge, tight joints and the perfect laying of each section. The first in consequency is generally taken with running water. This may not prove correct if there is much volume of water, and is a failure where there is but very little or none. No one should attempt to grade with the eye alone. Book rules, the experience and variations of a good in the work of the best catchers, he knew by testing it with his level. The less fall there is proportionately increase the care required. The underdraining of clay positively demands the use of the level. Some one in this section should equip himself for this kind of work. A complete instrument is sold by C. H. Harris, of Jackson, for ten dollars. It is known as the Harris grade level. After the grade is taken a fine string cord may be stretched our rests above the line of the drain as to form a reliable and expeditious basis to grade from. Perfect grading will cause a good flow with very slight descent. Drains may be sadly neglected at the outlet. The want of proper protection here, and a solid foundation to prevent the lower sections from being displaced, exposes a drain in a weak spot. To secure a free discharge of the laterals they should enter as near the upper end of the main as possible; extra care being required at the junctions, to make it impervious. Let the laterals discharge at an acute angle, and so nearly as little as possible with the main current; for laying there is little danger of placing the sections too closely together though nearly all the water must enter at the joints. Eight, in a 2 inch drain 1-10th will give the capacity of the drain. The rule is, divide the diameter of the drain by ten, then the length of the point. This does not allow for the friction but the passing water. Water is absorbed by machine made tile, but does not pass through them too large [illegible] by capillary attraction. Sewer drain will prove a failure if the joints are made tight. An inverted sod proves as good as any thing, for there is little shrinkage from decay, which proves dangerous in open pipe, perishable matter is used. It may be best to use these sod to fill the trenches made in hard clay, and so offer a ready channel for the water from above. In time clay will allow the water to pass down, having reached the water level it simply raises it and forces it into the drain. The water [illegible] way will for some time be higher than directly over them, but comparatively little passes straight to them, for it is undesirable. From rightly made drains of some shielding the discharge should always be clear, not carry off vegetable matter, but salt will bother most new drains for a time. A covering of firm soil in some form of gravel and or loose muck may make them permanent. Stiff clay requires four foot drains about every thirty feet. More porous soil further in proportion.

If water loving trees grow near a drain the roots must be shortened, or the drain must be protected by cement or by laying the drain in far off the roads to drake [illegible]. Absorbent willows are very dangerous as a small root will spread inconceivably when once [illegible] the drain. Difficulties will be encountered in [illegible] but there are certainly remedies for them. Now will this expenditure bring ample returns? that is, will it pay? That which is not profitable is not an [illegible].

John Johnson of New York, the Scotch pioneer of drainage in America, was a poor man, and borrowed money to drain his heavy land in the western part of the state. He asserts that it will pay for [illegible] money to learn such [illegible]. In most farms there are spots which need this care, and which are filled with more cost than it is good condition, but with uncertain results, often failure; by this process, with less labor and fertilizers, success can be made as certain as it is on our best land, the crops on an average will be more than doubled. Johnston says thorough underdrainage pays for itself in two years, and sometimes in one. This statement has proven true in multitudes of cases, but as a general rule needs qualifying. Land in some places is very cheap and certainly drainage can not make a rich soil out of that which lacks the elements necessary for the support of plant life. There is land not worth draining, not worth cultivating, and never will be till we are crowded for room. Farmers here, however, would resent such statement made about their lands, and that for good reasons. By passing air and rain water through the hardest clay it can be made good land, for it makes use of all that is given to it by washing and [illegible]. Underdraining is a benefit from a sanitary stand point. It prevents evaporation from making a cold damp atmosphere. Mortals cannot change fixed laws of creation by underdraining but they can turn the elements into beneficial channels and convert foes into warm friends. Let me close by giving you the Voice of [illegible] by M. [illegible]

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, In the providence of Almighty God, Macon Grange has been deeply affected by the removal by death, of our worthy sister, Mrs. Asel Russell, who was one of the charter members of Macon Grange, which had remained an unbroken circle until now, the term of eleven years. During this time sister Russell has made many friends, and all who knew her learned to love and respect her, and we shall miss her genial face at our Grange gatherings. The family will miss her, the Grange will miss her, the church will miss her, of whom she has been a consistant member for twenty years.

Therefore, Resolved, That we, the members of Macon Grange, do heartily sympathize with our afflicted brother and family in their sad bereavement, and hoping that at last in may be said of us, "Well done good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

Resolved, That a copy of these Resolutions be presented to the family of the deceased, and to the Tecumseh Herald for publication, and spread upon the record of our Grange.

The Farmer's Social Club has placed the HERALD office force under obligation for a delicious cake. It was distributed around in proper form. We should be pleased to know the name of the lady who made it, as she is entitled to a good word for her excellent pastry cooking.

In another column of this issue will be found the advertisement of the Arkansas Land Improvement Co., who offer a million acres of Arkansas farming land for sale. Those seeking a milder climate and wanting a cheap home or wish to secure an agency for the sale of those lands, should read the advertisement.

We have received a memorial copy from Mrs. Rose Craig, of Branson, complaining about some items that have lately appeared in the HERALD. Although we do not deem it best to print her letter, we can assure her that we take no offense therefrom, and we shall endeavor to scan our Franklin news more closely hereafter.

A special school meeting was held at the Central School Building last Monday evening. On account of the night being so rough, but few were present. The only resolution voted upon was the following. Resolved, That the Board of Trustees of this District (No. 7, Tecumseh) be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to issue the bonds of the District in the sum of Three Thousand Eight Hundred Dollars, as follows, namely: Sixteen Hundred Dollars to be due and payable the 1st. day of February 1887, and Twenty two Hundred Dollars to be due and payable the 1st. day of February 1888. The above resolution was voted for by ballot and not a vote was cast against it.

THE CO "C" BENEFIT.

The Spy of Shiloh is now so far advanced in the rehearsal that the manager has fixed on the exact day for the presentation. The entertainment will be given at the Opera House on Wednesday evening, March 31st, and will continue every evening for the balance of the week. There are twelve characters in the play and eighteen beautiful tableaux will be presented between the first and last drop of the curtain. The best of talent will be in attendance. We hear the programme is the best ever arranged for the village, and we have every reason to believe the house will be crowded every night. The music will be good and abundant, the exhibition scenes and tableaux are all in good order and fully rehearsed, so that our citizens may look for an enjoyable entertainment. The proceeds will be devoted, in part, to draw out a generous attendance. The plan to give the play four nights we think will prove a good one. In case of a storm, evening or two, it will not interfere with the exhibition. Now people from the surrounding section outside of the village can select the pleasantest evening of the lot to come in with their uncles and aunts and cousins. People from the west towns can come down on the M. & O. Friday afternoon and return the same night, as the train will be held that evening until after the show.

People from Clinton can come down on the train any afternoon and return the same evening. Residents of the village can attend the first night and repeat the process by request every evening during the week. The entertainment will be first class in every respect. The admission fee will be ten, twenty and 15 cents, with no extra charge for reserved seats. The object is a most worthy one, let all turn out and give our unfortunate boys such a boost, that they will remember it for months to come.

A CORRECTION

EDITOR HERALD: Will you make a correction of the following item in your last week's issue.

"There were no services at either the Baptist or Presbyterian churches last Sunday, the pastors of both churches being confined to their houses by sickness."

Rev. Mr. Adkins, though quite indisposed, preached to a good congregation, and to their edification, at his church in the morning, and there was a prayer meeting at night. Rev. Mr. Vincent gave an excellent discourse to a large audience, in the Presbyterian church, the pastor, Rev. W. H. Babbitt, sitting on the platform and assisting in the services. There was also a service in the Lecture Room at night. Last Sunday also, for there were services in both churches and will be every Sabbath. Editor Herald and all others heeding the Gospel invited.

CITIZEN.

The correction and criticism contained in the above are merited, and yet it might be well to disclose the manner in which the original misstatement found its way in print. The item, as written, contained the word evening after Sunday. The printer in setting up copy for omitted the word evening, and the intelligent proof reader failed to discover the omission. All of which shows how easily and yet how innocently mistakes sometimes occur in a newspaper office.

MEMBERS OF THE L. A. W.—ATTENTION

The ticket for officers in the Michigan Division, as sent out by the Detroit Bicycle Club, is as follows: Chief Consul, A. H. Johnson, Detroit; Representatives, W. H. Burnham, Adrian, and Wm. Swyandist, St. Johns.

Dons Cutting of Clinton, was in town this morning.

Miss Hattie Prentiss returned to her home in Clinton, last week, after a visit of several days at this place.

Last evening a happy social event occurred, at which time the marriage of Miss Maggie Elliott and Mr. Dora McWilliams was celebrated at the residence of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Babbitt in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends who were unanimous in wishing the happy couple a pleasant voyage through life. As evidence of their popularity they were the recipients of a large number of elegant presents.

THE EXCURSION TO TOLEDO.

We had time and space to make only a brief mention last week of the Business Men's Excursion to Toledo over the M. & O. road which took place on Wednesday. It was a well planned affair and most admirably executed from first to last.

From our Toledo exchanges and from talks with participants, we gather the following salient features of the trip and the royal entertainment bestowed upon the guests during their stay at Toledo. The special train bearing the Michigan contingent over the Michigan Central Railroad was delayed and did not arrive until 11 o'clock, city time, (it was the one hour earlier.) But every one was on the best to receive them, and the Solid Wolverines received a royal welcome and shone out brightly and the sun came out brightly and the day was pleasant with which added a great deal to the impression upon the visitors. Hundreds of people found their way to the Wheeling & Lake Erie depot, Cherry street, where they patiently awaited the arrival of the city's guests. By a slight time they were due at 12:35 o'clock, and the delay made it 1:10 p. m. before the train rolled into the depot.

A party of gentlemen, representing business houses and newspapers of Toledo, headed by the genial General Passenger Agent Mr. H. H. Machell, of the M. & O. Railroad, departed at 5:45 last evening on that road to meet and escort the excursion of Wolverine retail dealers to Toledo. The train arrived at Battle Creek about 10:45 p. m.

After passing a pleasant night at Battle Creek, resting upon downy pillows, the party arose this morning refreshed for the journey. Promptly at 7:30 a. m. the Toledans made their way to the depot and boarded the train to return. There were about 75 Battle Creek merchants already on board and the two parties speedily became acquainted and just let themselves out to enjoy the trip. The officials were kind and courteous, as usual. Mr. Machell's cigars were in attendance provided, and nothing but words of praise for the road and city of Toledo were heard on all sides.

The run from Battle Creek to Toledo was hugely enjoyed. After leaving Battle Creek the train stopped at Marshall where a large delegation was added to the party. An air of enjoyment pervaded the entire train and the fresh crisp air added materially.

At Hudson, Tecumseh and other stations along the line of the road, other delegations boarded the train and were cordially received by their brother Wolverines and Buckeyes. Representatives were boarding the train until it crossed the State line and the last person that boarded it was received as kindly and courteously as the first.

Many of the Michiganders remarked that Toledo had made a big strike by inaugurating such a move, and they were her friends "forever and for aye."

THE MAYOR'S WELCOME.

Mayor Forbes greeted the excursionists as they stepped from the train and gracefully said:

On behalf of the people of Toledo I greet you with a hearty welcome to our city.

Once upon a time we, I mean our fathers and elder brothers, were not strangers for your coming—in fact, they were ready to welcome you with bloody hands to hospitable graves, but this was in the days of the famous bloodless Michigan war.

But time makes all things even. Then your slightest movements set thrills of fear and excitement among us. Now the howl of the Wolverine in our streets is music to our ears. Then we would cast you out, to-day we invite you to us, and now we throw open the gates of our city and bid you enter and accept our hospitality. Eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow you will go home—home of your natural and geographical relations to us I need say nothing, you know that better than I do. But of our sincere desire to become better acquainted with you, not only in a business way, but socially, I desire to assure you.

We hope you will come among us often and that this and all future visits may prove both profitable and pleasant to you.

Again I welcome you most warmly to our hearts and homes.

MR. SAYMOUR'S WELCOME.

Mr. F. W. Seymour, chairman of the Reception Committee, followed the Mayor and said: I will add a few words to the remarks made by our Mayor, and that is to say that the merchants and manufacturers of Toledo desire to show the appreciation of the business favor conferred by the Michigan Wolverine Railroad Company in their having seen and we hope they will now and often visit our city.

[illegible] Mayor of Marshall, Mich., responded briefly. The citizens of Marshall very heartily reciprocate the feelings of the citizens of Toledo. There was a crowd from Marshall which gave your humble servant a "Well, the only way you shall be" in bidding your Toledo friends good bye. Applause followed. One thing sure, we will be [illegible] Marshall. The ladies should be [illegible] through.

The guests were then distributed among the [illegible] where they dined upon [illegible] and were [illegible] with rather they were [illegible] the city and meet the [illegible] and business men.

The return trip to Toledo between [illegible] and arrived at Battle Creek before [illegible] without a mishap. The Toledo [illegible] got home about [illegible] o'clock. They were loud in praise of the entertainment they received [illegible] at the hands of the citizens of Battle Creek and from the hitherto much of Toledo. The idea was a happy one and the reception on the part of Toledo and Battle Creek people was most hearty. Luncheon and [illegible] parties were served.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, and has never caused a wound with which it comes in contact to smart or pain, the greatest multitude of cases on application.

Its virtues are concealed, and the [illegible] are ignorant of its composition.

WHAT IT CURES.

Burns, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Scalds, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Catarrh, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Serious Irritation, and all disorders requiring an anti-inflammation.

Unlike other ointments, its natural functions do not end in the exudation of the blood. The most marvelous antiseptic power is gained over the most malignant germs of disease, [illegible] even down to the bottom of the human frame, [illegible] bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament, [illegible] and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to make a note of their experience with it. Inquiring friends, if but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

CLINTON PAGE.

[illegible] PARKER, REPORTER.

CLINTON MICH. MARCH [illegible] 188[illegible]

Maple Cider at Tecumseh, was the popular drink last week.

Mr. Truesell, of Manchester, was [illegible]

[illegible] Hill and family have moved to Tecumseh. We understand they intend to make that place their home.

[illegible] and wife attended the funeral of Aaron Palmer, in Tecumseh, last Saturday.

Miss Emma Palmer of Tecumseh, spent Sunday at her uncle's, last [illegible] at her home Saturday [illegible] receiving the sad intelligence of the finding of her lost [illegible]

[illegible] F. Blosser and wife, of Manchester, were down last Friday evening to look at the entertainment at Union Hall.

Last Saturday was a lively day and the streets looked business from one end to the other.

Thomas Wadsworth, is moving into the Hall house, now owned by Chauncey Spencer, near the depot.

Wm. Ward has sold his place lying [illegible] of the village, to Murphy, who has for some time been the employ of Mr. Schneider.

Mr. Starrett, from the Gale manufacturing Co. of Albion, was in town last Saturday, on business connected with the interest of machinery.

[illegible] Sisson, of Ravin and Bert [illegible] of Tecumseh, were among the visitors last Friday night.

Spencer Case and Miss Sarah Spafford of Manchester were down to the Old Folks Concert.

And right here we would like to say, we spend all the time we can possibly give to find out the truthfulness of the articles we compose, and if we make a mistake and give to the widower a companion, it is through mistaken information received. It has been said "misery loves company." Therefore, never fear.

Bridgeman & Hause having two funerals to attend last Tuesday, procured assistance from J. S. Kinney, of Tecumseh, and hence the appearance of Harry Tinsey and his hearse upon our streets on that day. He attended the obsequies of the late Chas. Crane, of Bridgewater.

Will Bedford, of Manchester, was down Tuesday looking to Charley's interests in the horse market on the corner, which is constantly supplied with the best nags, also [illegible]

W. S. Kimball has disposed of his children's acres of small fruits in the eastern suburb of the village, to D. Atkinson, receiving therefor $200. The duties of Secretary at the Auction hall took too much time to allow of proper attention to the fruit business.

Wm. Ward, of Grand Rapids, was seen looking over his former friends and acquaintances, the first of the week.

The meeting is approaching [illegible] to see the week [illegible] on the orchards and fruit prospects generally.

The Rose Bud meeting at Tecumseh last Saturday was the occasion of a full house and the exercises were enjoyed throughout. We [illegible] in the parlors during the [illegible] but by about [illegible] that it was necessary to decide the matter in order to adjourn in time for church. [illegible] Ball, N. Y. were present and favored the audience with a few [illegible] songs. We hope to see them again, and feel sure they will be welcomed by a full house.

Postmaster [illegible] of Tecumseh, [illegible] a very pleasant call last week. We will see that happy [illegible] is mailed during your vacation.

A happy party of Young Americans passed up Chicago street yesterday, in advance with a chippy hoss, [illegible] and an [illegible] pet in his right, [illegible] the [illegible] were plowed, sawed, saw-horse and patent [illegible]

That will make mince pies, start a country. If it takes a [illegible]

[illegible] brought [illegible] to us Tuesday. It had been a little more than a [illegible] since we received and hearing of [illegible] concerned to offer convenience, we sent them, tacked down, [illegible] and made preparations for a [illegible] the Chinese Puzzle. [illegible] Meeting a friend at return, we [illegible] yesterday [illegible] going to [illegible] tomorrow.

Ed. VanDemark has received the appointment of postoffice inspector at large and will enter upon the duties there to about the 8th of April. He has been [illegible] years and the age of four [illegible] only a befitting one but deservedly so.

A. W. Sawyer, of Tecumseh, was in town yesterday, looking after some property matters of which he has charge. We find every person with whom we meet, [illegible] We wish we may [illegible] the lumber and [illegible] his thousands [illegible] contract.

A. S. Boothby [illegible] from Ann Arbor, [illegible] comes to fill his [illegible] superintendent of the Western [illegible]

[illegible] section [illegible] with [illegible] and he goes to make [illegible] residence in the far West. Mr. H. and family are to strangers [illegible] community, and were welcome [illegible] of former friends and [illegible] George W. Lewis, formerly superintendent of the Woolen Mill, and in a mill at South Bend, had was the guest of William Spencer over Sunday.

Fred Taylor of Rome was in town yesterday.

Wm. Kimball returned home from a business trip to Chicago, last Friday night.

We are glad to learn that Alonzo Clark has so far recovered from his late illness as to able to come down town yesterday.

Frank Parker has taken the agency for the Evening Journal, and we hope our citizens will give him a liberal share of the patronage.

We are glad to learn that the new superintendent is giving general satisfaction, and the school is moving right along, with, we understand, pecuniary benefit to the former superintendent, by the agitation.

The Old Folks' Concert last Friday evening drew a large audience, and they were well repaid for their attendance. The supper was omitted, and some tickets were held over from the previous entertainment, consequently the receipts did not reach a high figure, but we are advised that the society will be able to make a good payment on the principal after paying the interest upon their debt. The receipts Friday night were $[illegible].

The Lone Rider and [illegible] will be the next meeting for the reading of poems next Monday evening at the residence of S. F. Marsteller, and it is hoped there will be a good attendance.

S. F. Marsteller is in attendance at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors in Adrian, to finish up the year.

A [illegible] in the pocket [illegible] has relieved us of three [illegible] handkerchiefs, one new one. They [illegible] mark everything a knot [illegible] the finder would [illegible] please return.

MARRIED.

VAN DYKE—SCOFIELD—At the residence of Jonas Waldron, in this township, Wednesday evening, March [illegible] Rev. P. F. Vogelsang, Mr. Isaac Van Dyke and Miss Sophia J. Scofield, all of Clinton.

DIED.

CAMBRON—In the town of [illegible] Sunday March [illegible] 188[illegible] William [illegible] Cambron, [illegible] of Lenawee and Washtenaw counties, died at the residence of his son, [illegible] of Sharon, on the [illegible] March [illegible] 188[illegible] He was born in Orange county, New Jersey, in [illegible] and came to Michigan in the early [illegible] settled in Macomb county, where he married Miss Lydia Lewis, and lived there until about [illegible] when he moved to Lenawee county, where he resided until about [illegible] when he came to Sharon, where he resided until his death. He was a farmer and [illegible] of his neighbors and acquaintances. He was married twice, his first wife died [illegible] years ago, and he married the second about [illegible] years ago. The second Mrs. Cambron survives him. He was a [illegible] Mason, and was buried under the auspices of Sharon Lodge, No. [illegible] Funeral services were held at the house of his son, Rev. [illegible] Cambron, on Tuesday afternoon, March [illegible] at 1 o'clock, and were [illegible] by a large number of his old neighbors and friends, who came to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of a man who was so well known and so universally respected in the county. The deceased was a man of [illegible] character, and his death will be very sorely felt by his family and relatives, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. The deceased was [illegible] years old, and his death was caused by a cancer on the face, which had been [illegible] for some time. The deceased was a brother of Mr. Cambron, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. Cambron, of Ann Arbor, and a cousin of Mrs. Sherman Day, of Tecumseh, who joined him with his wife in the journey to the land of shadows and of [illegible] He leaves to mourn his loss a large circle of relatives and friends, who will miss the venerable form of their grandfather, and who will long remember the kindness and courtesy of the deceased. The funeral was held at the residence of Mr. Geo. Hanford, on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, and was largely attended. The remains were taken to Cambridge, Mich., for interment.

[illegible] marks of Mr. Cambron's occasioning were these:

[illegible] the beauty of his white hair, the remembrance of his [illegible] grow [illegible] the enfeebling hand and the [illegible] his calm preparation for [illegible] and the [illegible] to you a [illegible] but of [illegible] to remember that he [illegible] at last [illegible] the falling [illegible] years, and like a shock of corn gathered in its season.

A Tecumseh artist has painted a picture called "The Pride of the Harem," which is much admired for its beauty. It is said to be a very accurate likeness of the HERALD editor. Monroe Observer.

Does the young man who pushes the quill for the Observer intend this as a compliment, or otherwise? If the former, we cheerfully forgive him. If the latter, we will just hold our coat, if you please.

Mrs. Amanda Wilson, of Milan, visiting relatives in the village.

Miss [illegible] visited in Ann Arbor last week.

Rev. W. F. [illegible] preached in the Methodist church at Deerfield Sunday morning.

Prof. Clark has caught unwards of [illegible] in his steel trap during the past winter, sometimes it is a mink or a muskrat for the other.

[illegible] of a pleasant visit [illegible] during the past week.

Miss Ada Loree left Friday for a few weeks visit with her sister, Mrs. A. Lucking of Detroit. Let the Britton poet note the fact.

Miss Anna Smith accompanied Miss Ring to her home at Grand Ledge, Saturday, and will spend a few months with her sister, Mrs. Cora Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Rappleye are repairing their house, and will paint it outside and in, and when completed, will have a very pleasant home.

Mr. Warren Jones is putting an addition to his tool house.

The church social will give a maple sugar festival at the church this week Friday night. The ladies are requested to furnish the necessary refreshments to go with the sugar.

The Woman's missionary society will hold its regular monthly meeting next week Wednesday afternoon in the church.

Mrs. Cheever went to Dundee last week to see Mrs. Lucy Griffith, her daughter-in-law, who is quite low with consumption.

Dr. D. W. Loree has a bell telephone from his residence to H. Rauch's store at Britton; it is a success in every respect.

The funeral of aunt Margaret Schofield was held Sunday morning at the regular hour for service; the attendance was quite large. The Rev. Mr. Adkins of Tecumseh officiated.

The Prohibitionists met in caucus at Exelby Hall, Britton, Saturday afternoon. Rev. C. L. Chase gave a very fine talk in favor of the cause and the following ticket was nominated:

Supervisor—Norman Ackley.
Clerk—Lyman Hause.
Treasurer—Frank E. Pockrington.
Justice of the Peace—Geo. Grigg.
School Inspector—Chas. Knellin.
Road Commissioner—David Cornell.
Drain Commissioner—Justus Lowe.
Constables—James Pockrington, Thomas Smith, W. L. Nisewaner, Albert Knellin.

The attendance was very large at the Literary, Friday night. The exercises were quite interesting. The mock trial was a success. Court was called to order by the sheriff, A. R. Arner. The Judge, T. H. Temple, called the case, McA. Barrett vs. M. & O. R'y. The Clerk, J. D. Arner, then called the jury and swore them. The Attorney for the plaintiff, G. L. Arnold, assistant, H. J. Williams, then opened the case. Several witnesses were questioned and cross-questioned by attorney A. E. Palmer and assistant, G. P. Waring, for the defendant, after which the attorneys made their pleas, followed by the Judge charging the jury, and were sent to the jury-room and returned a verdict of disagreement.

BROOKLYN BALLADS.

The Literary Dramatic Club played "Blue Stocking" at Union Hall, Thursday night, and are said to have done themselves credit.

There is a couple of plays in this village which are [illegible] with [illegible] and politics, each other's crops, [illegible] the same work. No [illegible] vice dovetailing [illegible] and [illegible] Among that women who really suffer [illegible] wrong, while those who have no real knowledge of the subject are [illegible] a pet [illegible] theory.

Now, about how many women in any community own a temperance theory not based on actual knowledge. If there is one who puts forth such a claim, watch where some relative or next friend spends time and money, and you can demolish her petty deception in a week. I suppose detesting liquor sellers would annoy them some, but is it fair to persecute a man for being a favorite among his fellows? He is the real embodiment of public sentiment, or he would not be here.

The doctor who can [illegible] no better remedy for sickness than intoxicants is but a traveling salesman for distillers, and by such aid almost any home can be undermined, and very few are out of danger. If you doubt it, go on a railroad excursion and see how doctors advise aunts women courage to drink any and all kinds of liquor publicly and become as noisy as fourth of July drillers. There is lots of pansy based prating about the sanctity of home [illegible] but bad habits attain perfection there in one fourth the time it takes to grow them before the saloon bar, and while women drink to enable them to do church work, or tend the baby, or go to society, don't be so talk of boycotting saloon keepers. The man who sells is as pure as those who sell him the privilege, and both particular better than those who empower them to run their own children, or the sons of a drug in law.

The condition of Secretary [illegible] is improving with [illegible] while assuming the duties of the Treasury Department he is considerably [illegible] and [illegible] for Baltimore, [illegible] Md. Mann is a very hard worker. And his [illegible] is attributed to the [illegible] Sacrifices has imposed [illegible] Treasury [illegible] often working until [illegible] was enough to prostrate any man.

Owing to Mr. Manning's size and weight it was a difficult matter to remove him from the Treasury to his home. He was placed in a chair and carried to the elevator. In lifting the chair from the elevator to carry him to the carriage, one of the chair legs broke under the heavy weight, and a fall was narrowly prevented. In their efforts to support him the men who were carrying him had their clothing almost torn off them, giving those who saw him taken from the building the impression that he was in a dying condition. His friends are very apprehensive about his recovery, since his flushed face and laboring breathing indicate that his accident was of apoplectic origin.

The House of Representatives is now trying to act upon some of the practical questions of the day, while the Senate is still discussing the political question, "What are public and private [illegible]" and "How to get them."

The labor troubles throughout the country are occupying the attention of many members of Congress. THE SUNNY SOUTH

We are permitted to take a few extracts from letters that Mr. N. M. Sutton has recently written home from Florida, and which we think will be interesting to our readers.

TALLAHASSEE, MARCH 12, 1888.

[illegible] expected to be here as soon as the mail boat, but we were struck by a Northeaster and [illegible] two days, and then we got a nice wind that sent us up to St. Marks and during the night a Northeaster struck us and we lay there two days. We had the most pleasant and peaceful sailing we ever had on the Apalachicola Bay. We [illegible] with which we [illegible] to St. Marks. We had [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] which was six miles. [illegible] Tallahassee [illegible] and [illegible] the south that sent us flying along and we sailed fifty miles in seven hours. The waves rolled high and we had [illegible] and one near we ran ten miles. So we arrived here at [illegible] o'clock, and [illegible] time to wash and change our clothes before supper. We took some walk and had a good time and feel as fine as a fiddle. We will take the boat from here tomorrow for Sanford and stay over from there to Jacksonville, arriving in Jacksonville Sunday morning in time for a night [illegible] Augustine.

[illegible]

We arrived here first day morning at about eight o'clock, in time for Magnolia. Came to our old boarding place though a new landlord. Found things at [illegible] same as in the house, though [illegible] are not as much crowded as last year. [illegible] Yesterday we went to Magnolia and spent the day. INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

BY REV. FRED. B. HARGREAVES

SUBJECTS IN THE WRITINGS OF ST. JOHN.

Lesson Second Quarter. April 8th.

The Word Made Flesh.

John i. 1-18. Golden Text, John i. 14.

[illegible] commonly called Augustus Cæsar, emperor of Rome. Herod the Great [illegible]

This lesson is the vestibule to the dispensation of Christ. We have below it the world, to the Old Testament, with all its teaching, history, law, poetry, and prophecy, and we are about to enter upon the New, the dispensation of Christ by deeds and words.

The travels through Palestine we recently supposed with the [illegible] which he was born [illegible] Bethlehem, the house of bread, [illegible] Jerusalem, the city of peace, [illegible] Jordan, the river of judgment, [illegible] Jericho, the city of the moon, [illegible] Dead Sea, the salt sea, [illegible] Jordan, the river of judgment, as its waters were plentifully supplied with fish. One of these men, called Zebedee, had accumulated wealth in the prosecution of his business and he found a place on the market for his fish in the city of Jerusalem. His wife's name was Salome, one of the women of Galilee, who ministered to Jesus. She was with Him at the cross, and was one of the first at the sepulchre. She is said to have been the own sister of the Virgin Mary, and hence her children were first cousins to Jesus, and distantly related to John the Baptist. By the side of their father's boat on the shores of the lake, the boys, James and John often prayed. Bright and happy in their boyhood, with pleasant surroundings, they grew up in the traditions and customs of their country and especially of their province. When John was a young man he was sometimes sent to Jerusalem to superintend the sale of his fish. While there he saw one Easter, he heard that a new prophet had arisen, called John the Baptist, who was preaching on the banks of Jordan. Crowds were flocking to hear him, and amongst them we find John, the son of Zebedee and Salome. He heard, believed, and was baptised. When Jesus was afterwards recognized by the Baptist as [illegible] "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world." John and Andrew turned their attention to the Divine Teacher. The next day when the Baptist exclaimed, "Behold the Lamb of God!" they [illegible] where he dwelt. They asked the question, "What are you seeking?" They addressed Jesus as Rabbi, which means teacher, and asked, "Where do you dwell?" They went and saw, they believed, they followed, they [illegible] Jesus.

The [illegible] of this quarter to which we have [illegible] are taken from the writings of John, the beloved disciple, and follower, of whom it was said, "Whom Jesus loved." [illegible]

The ministry of John the Baptist, his teachings during many years, are here recorded, and they form the [illegible] of the story of our Lord. In this lesson he speaks of the Divine Nature of Jesus, showing that He is not only the bearer of Divine truth to men but He is also the Creator of the world. Science and religion must be in harmony, therefore, because He who inspired the sacred narrative, himself fashioned this world of ours. Then John speaks of the manifestation of this Divine Nature to men. It was the light of God revealed to the human race, scattering the night darkness which prevailed. In the last lesson Malachi described Christ as "The Sun of Righteousness, with healing in His wings," and this lesson speaks of Him as the Light of the World.

Before the effulgent glory of His Divine nature all darkness is forever banished, and in His Light we have Life. Then John speaks of the way in which this manifestation is made. "The Word was made Flesh, etc., v. 14. The Divine Nature took up his abode in a human form, and the Christ dwelt among men. He took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men, and being formed in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2 7-8. So the very God became man, and the Messiah dawned upon the world.

LESSON THOUGHTS.

[illegible] God revealed, since He is the author of nature.

The universality of Christ's gospel. It is a light for the whole world.

The incarnation of Christ. He is our Savior.

The privileges which accrue to those who receive Him.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10, 88.

A board of examiners consisting of one physician, one attorney at law and one educator, will convene at Adrian on Thursday, April 19, at 9 A. M., for the purpose of examining such young men as desire to be examined for appointment to a cadetship at the United States academy at West Point. The applicants must be between the ages of 17 and 22, unmarried, of good character, and free from any defects or bodily disorders and ailments from any deformity, disease or infirmity which may render them unfit for military service. They must be well versed in reading and writing, including orthography, in arithmetic, and have a knowledge of the elements of English grammar, of descriptive geography, particularly of our own country, and of the history of the United States. The person who is appointed will have to deposit with the treasurer of the military academy $300 on his arrival, to defray the cost of his outfit. Any person desirous of applying for examination will write to A. J. Millard Adrian, giving his name, residence and whether his father was a soldier or not. None but residents of the second congressional district can be admitted for examination.

MISS MOUSEWORTH.

[illegible]

"I suppose Aunt Priscilla never means to die," observed she with a shrug of her pretty white shoulders. "She must be 70 at the least."

"Sixty-three," said Hetty, with the delicacy wherewith to regards threescore and three. "Often, dear aunt she'll live to be 100 at the very least. The Mouseworths are all long-lived."

Hetty, Paulina and Judith were cousins and orphans. Hetty copied for lawyers, Paulina did "fancy dressmaking," and Judith Pease bore the whims and caprices of a rich relation who needed somebody to keep her company.

And with all this they had an aunt worth $100,000!

But even A-bell, had a vulnerable spot, and why was Aunt Priscilla Mousewith that she should be richer than the tailed hen? Judith Pease had discovered the weak point.

"I mean to be an heiress yet," said she, right now! I shan't be shamed the other girls.

"Oh, you'll see."

For Judith had perceived that Aunt Priscilla was benevolent. But first in her affections towered the "Home for Ancient Apple-Venders and Refuge for Penniless Peanut-Girls."

"Judith, my dear," said Aunt Priscilla, "you seem really to have this enterprise at heart."

"It's the noblest charity I ever heard of," sighed Judith, in her most melting tones.

"You speak wisely, child," said Aunt Priscilla, patting her niece's hand. "What I have to propose is this. That you leave Mrs. Willys Wyllonghby and come to live with me. And think how useful you could make yourself to the society!"

"Oh, Aunt," said Judith, "I could wish no greater boon—no higher object in life."

Hetty over her legal cap and Paulina with needle and silk felt that their wily relative was outgeneraling them.

"Judith," said Aunt Mousewith, one day, "If it wasn't for the Ancient Apples and Penniless Peanuts I'd almost feel like adopting you."

"I ask no higher sphere, dear aunt, than that which I am now privileged to move," said she softly. "Only let me be useful to you. The poor apple-woman and the dear little barefooted peanut girls are more, far more to me than myself."

"Do you really feel that way, Judith?"

"Dearest Aunt Priscilla, can you doubt me?"

"Well," said she, "we'll see, my dear; we'll see!"

The next day Miss Mousewith went out alone and returned early. Hetty Penstable was sitting with her niece, when she bounced into the parlor.

"I've done it, Judith," said she, fumbling her shabbily gloved hands.

"Done what, Aunt Priscilla?"

"Made over all my fortune to the apples and peanuts! I've been thinking of it for some time. And, now, girls, I'm as poor as yourselves. My trust can be given to them prettily to the mission!"

"Then, aunt," said Judith, "you're the biggest fool in New York city. And I, for one, wash my hands of the whole affair. What possessed you to throw away your money in such a way, as of impostors! How dared you so to deceive me?"

But Aunt Priscilla put both her hand in a blind, wandering way to catch her niece's dress.

"Going, Judith? To leave me?"

Judith shook off the feeble grasp.

"When I came to live with you I supposed you had at least common sense," retorted she. "I little dreamed I'm going back to Mrs. Wyllonghby's."

"Judith," cried out impulsive Hetty, "you ought to be ashamed of yourself! Don't go! I can work extra and earn money, now I've got the Pease & Penstable business for both of us, and you can visit around among the societies where you please."

"My dear, you're a good girl," said Miss Mousewith, patting Hetty's curly head. "But let me understand—work in earnest, and my money alone, that [illegible] of which she owes [illegible]."

"What a sight you'd be, poor if was insolently questioned the [illegible]. Did you think you could be attractive that?"

"Ah!" said Aunt Priscilla, [illegible] compliment the [illegible] stay with me. Hetty wasn't [illegible] woman."

"Not unless you need me very [illegible]," said the little law copyist.

So Judith swept out of the [illegible] Aunt Priscilla looked after her with a sly [illegible].

"Won't she be dearly [illegible] when she finds out it's all a hoax?"

"A hoax, Aunt Priscilla?"

"About the apples and peanuts! The girls of the society they are [illegible] money in time, but they [illegible] poor. Judith should have [illegible] carts quite a pretty fortune. Now, my [illegible] kind, Hetty?"

And when she died, [illegible] afterward, not in [illegible] people, but sitting bolt upright in her chair, with her bonnet on and her shopping [illegible] Hetty Penstable.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Cora Jones returned from Portland last Thursday.

Frank Potter and Grant Hanford returned from Ann Arbor last Saturday.

Miss Alice Tinline returned from an extended visit at Lansing last Thursday.

The Cohoctah Mills are now running on a good order to be shipped to Detroit.

Miss Minnie Kneer is spending the vacation with Miss Bertha Sage at Grand Rapids.

Miss Mae Hoyt, of Manchester, was the guest of the Misses Hersey over Sunday.

W. H. Passmore, the old landlord of the Lilley House, was in town a few days last week.

Misses May Temple and Hattie Montgomery, of Albion college, are home for the vacation.

Row Vescelius, of York, was in town over Sunday, having come up to attend Mrs. Peter Vescelius' funeral.

Hudson will soon have a little pill doctor. The physicians of that town all belong to the blue pill and calomel school.

Election printing done at this office on short notice. Tickets and pasters printed in good style and at the lowest prices.

Again the news comes from Detroit, and this time it is a boy, and when he gets old enough he will call John B. Whelan "pa."

Kies Bros. of this village, have a large advertisement in the Dundee Reporter. They believe in letting their light shine.

The teachers and pupils of our village schools are enjoying a vacation this week. The spring term will begin next Monday.

We regret to learn that Abe Hanford has a dangerous attack of the western fever. We hope he may change his mind soon.

S. W. Beakes, proprietor of the Adrian Record, was in town last Thursday on business, and favored the HERALD with a call.

Dan Hanford, of Franklin, will be a nearer neighbor after this week. He has bought the old Saviers farm and takes possession at once.

Will Osborn left last Monday for a week's visit at his brother's who lives at Unionville. He will stop over one day on his trip at East Saginaw.

Rev. Mr. Atkins went to Ridgeway last Sunday to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. Scofield, and his pulpit was filled by Rev. Mr. Clack, of that place.

The young people of the Baptist church will hold a "Fagot social" at the residence of Mrs. Abbie Fisher Thursday evening, April 8th. All are cordially invited.

A new American Sewing Machine and an improved Singer, both entirely new, just from the factory, will be sold cheap for cash. Call and examine them at the HERALD office.

"Consequences." Subject of sermon at the Universalist Church next Sunday morning at 10:30. For the evening at 7 o'clock, a discourse upon "Samson, a Bible and Its Lessons."

Last Friday was Will H. Hayden's twenty-first birthday, and in honor of the event his mother gave him a fine gold watch. Will can deposit his maiden vote at the coming town election.

Editor Smith, of the Adrian Record, has left his whiskers in the barber shop. Will it have the same effect upon him that it did on Samson? The many admirers of the Record await the result with some anxiety.

The School Board have let the contracts for the mason and carpenter work on the new school building. Theo. Crane took the carpenter work at $1890; F. Pocklington the mason work at $1118.88. Seven bids in all were presented.

We introduce a new feature this week, the International Sunday School Lessons. Each Sunday's lesson will be printed on the Thursday preceding the Sunday on which the lesson comes. If this feature shall meet the approbation of our readers we shall continue it permanently.

The HERALD job rooms turned out last week a lot of handsome circulars for Frank L. Silvers, giving a full discription and pedigree of his famous trotter, Banker Rothchilds. Banker has made a 2:19 record during the past three years, and his reputation has extended over all the counties of the state. Farmers who wish to improve their stock should give Mr. Silvers a call or write for one of his descriptive circulars.

George Henderson, who has been attending school at Valparaiso, Ind., came home for the vacation last Friday.

At the Universalist parsonage this evening will be given Mary Jane's Courtship, to be followed by maple syrup and hot biscuit.

Joe Langton's 10 year old boy, of Franklin, let a tenon rail fall on his left thumb last week, smashing it so that it was necessary to amputate it.

Harriet Allen died last Tuesday. He has been in feeble health for a long time, but was confined to his bed only a few days. The funeral services are held at his late home this afternoon.

H. Brown & Co. are running a full set of hands now and on full time. They have fifteen orders for file machines now on hand, which they are filling as rapidly as possible.

Shubal Mosher, an old resident of Tecumseh, died at Detroit last Thursday at the advanced age of 87 years. The funeral services were held at that city on Friday and his remains were brought here for burial the following Saturday.

Mark Hendershott will leave the News office this week and will move his family to Brooklyn, where he will hereafter live. We understand he will take control of the Brooklyn Exponent. Finlay Dedick of the Hudson Gazette office, will take Mr. Hendershott's place.

A letter from Congressman Eldredge to the HERALD contains the announcement that a Board, consisting of Hon. A. L. Millard, Prof. D. A. Hammond and Dr. H. D. Hud, will convene at Adrian on the 15th day of April, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of examining all persons who desire to compete for an appointment for a cadetship to the U. S. M. A. at West Point. Candidates must be unmarried; between the ages of eighteen and twenty two and physically sound in every particular.

The Spy of Shiloh was presented last evening to a small house. We expected to see the play well presented, but our expectations were more than realized. The leading characters were most admirably sustained, the military scenes were finely presented and the tableaux could not be surpassed. We shall give a more extended notice next week. Meanwhile we advise everyone to be sure and witness the play some evening during the week and judge for themselves.

At a meeting of the School Board on Thursday, March 25th, all the five members were present. The bids for erecting the new school house were considered. In each case the carpenters include all labor and material except mason work, mason's material and excavating. The masons include all mason work and material except brick and field stone. The bids were as follows, viz.:

Henry Mensing,	Carpenter,	$2150.50
C. M. Miner		1871.00
T. H. Crane,		1890.00
Millis & West		1650.00
F. S. Wilson,	Mason,	1542.32
J. W. Cook & Co.		1440.00
F. Pocklington,		1118.88

In advertising for bids the Board had reserved the right to reject any or all bids. After discussing the whole matter carefully, the Board proceeded to vote by written ballot, voting on the carpenter's bids and mason's bids separately. By a unanimous vote in each case, the Board decided that, in their opinion, it was for the interest of school district that T. H. Crane should do the carpenter work, and F. Pocklington should do the mason work.

Will Harding is home from Albion College.

We understand that a few families of this place are about moving to East Saginaw to locate.

Mrs. John Werner was called to Ypsilanti last week to see her daughter [illegible]

THE VANDERBILT BOYS

Two Well-Trained, Well-Behaved, Level-Headed Millionaires.

The young Vanderbilts—I mean Cornelius and William K.—the present heads of the family—have grown up as if they meant to double the fortune their father left them right speedily. [illegible]

[illegible]

Where he was twenty he was made a partner in the bottom of the ladder in the Hudson River Railroad office, and his young brother, William K., was put at work there the next year. For more than [illegible] years now, they have showed [illegible] in that great concern, and they are as likely as any men there to be found when [illegible] was in all the details of the business.

They are not fast men. They own no yachts. They are nothing for show. They are modest, up to the present time, with one wife apiece. They love their children, and each feels a thing into each [illegible] like a pair of gentle spring [illegible]. They are fine for fast horses. They do not swear. Cornelius is superintendent of a Sunday school, and both attend, and are loved by the various churches of the city.

Cornelius is first vice president and head of finance. William K. is second vice president and master of transportation. Each knows his brother's thoroughly. The most strikingly alike thing about them is that they work as hard as if they were hired by the job. When they are, by the way, and [illegible] assignment, [illegible] [illegible] with them. On the whole, the present [illegible] of the Vanderbilt [illegible] [illegible] authorities of the [illegible].

Circumstantial Evidence Extraordinary.

The legal papers have been [illegible] of a case which puzzled members of the criminal bar so well as to make a case of it. A woman was put on her trial for strangling her baby, and at the preliminary examination she confessed her crime. At the trial medical evidence was heard, and the doctor told the judge he did not believe the woman was the culprit. The finger marks were fresh on the [illegible] throat when he made his examination, and the marks were those of [illegible] hands. The woman's hands and [illegible] were of a size and shape [illegible] the man's were of a size and shape [illegible]. The first [illegible] was almost [illegible]. On this the prisoner [illegible] [illegible] and she was fond of the child, and destroyed it [illegible] [illegible] of a [illegible] life with [illegible] she declared is domestic [illegible]. The arrest followed, and the doctor proved out that the prisoner's hands were [illegible] the child. A second [illegible] [illegible] the first, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] not testing, first as showing [illegible] [illegible] looks like [illegible] that a prisoner, though [illegible] confess guilt, and secondly that circumstantial evidence may be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

The Genius of Common Sense.

[illegible] a good edition, a [illegible] of a paper [illegible] is [illegible] [illegible] born not made. On the [illegible] papers all the historians, poets, essayists have been [illegible] [illegible] nearly all have failed. [illegible] [illegible] after a display of brilliancy [illegible] [illegible] they died out literally. The springs were exhausted. A man, [illegible] late editor of the Times to Horace [illegible] any number of men of genius to write for us, but very seldom one of common sense. The "thunderers" in the Times, there [illegible] have so far as I know, been men of common sense. Nearly all successful editors have been men of this description. Franklin, Bulwer, and Dennie failed. Harris, Snerting and Phillips succeeded. A good editor seldom writes for his paper. He reads, judges, selects, [illegible] [illegible] combines, and to do all this well he has but little time for composition. To write for a paper is one thing, to edit a paper is another.

Calamity Sam's Jokes.

Repentance is the lost [illegible] upon which we pull off the brogans of our sins here we lie down for the last time to sleep.

Remorse and Regret are a team that takes us by the shortest route to the end of life's dreary journey, and I am in the wagon behind them.

The "imitator" is the whip. Wears the plug hat stolen from the hall of "Genius."

The press is the plow that rips up the garden of our political and social systems and lays bare all their grubs and worms.

Nothing so surely destroys my faith in a religious man's zeal than to surprise him in the act of plugging a silver quarter.

A Fruitful Five-Dollar Bill.

A little money sometimes goes a great way. As an illustration of this read the following founded upon an incident which is said to have really occurred.

A owed $5 to B. B owed $5 to C. C owed $5 to D. D owed $5 to E. E owed $5 to A. [illegible] were [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

B had a [illegible] to D. D had [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] will [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

It is to be hoped that these early, refreshing showers may add to the appearance of the production of "staff."

A nuisance that is very much to be regretted, predominates here and elsewhere with the junior part of the community. We refer to the rubber slingers and they are shooting missiles at pedestrians, horses etc., as they pass. The experiment was tried upon a valuable nag owned by G. D. Kiff, last Friday and came very near resulting in a sad accident, to the occupant of the vehicle. As it was, several parts of the harness were severed and some damage sustained.

[illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mary Minor [illegible] Tuesday. Their [illegible] George Wright and family attended [illegible] complimentary given M. Russell [illegible] Clinton Town [illegible]

We are sorry to learn that Dr. Cameron has finally effected arrangements which induce him to leave this field of labor and take up his practice in Hillsdale, and we are perfectly sane and sober as we compose this article.

A gathering was provised by the Baptist choir to take place at two Calhoun's on the Evening of March 30th, and a happy one it was. It was intended as a complimentary surprise to Mr. Mark Russell, their assistant in the choir, who is to leave today for the far West and the evening was spent very happily by a number of the friends of Mr. R. and choir. Ice Cream and cake were served.

At a business meeting held at S. [illegible] Monday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Mr. [illegible] Vice President—Mr. [illegible] Second Vice President—Frank Ewing. Third Vice President—William [illegible] Secretary—Nina Caldwell. Treasurer—Mame Moir.

Our quiet citizens in the north end of the village are [illegible]

Lobdell and Joseph McIntyre jr., and that the former had done some shooting, but upon inquiry we were unable to elicit much information and concluded that there was not much to be gathered from the occurrence, but Monday morning put a different complexion on things, when we learned that complaint had been made and the papers issued for the arrest of Lobdell, who was brought before Justice Brown to answer to a charge of assault with intent to kill, and the time for his trial was fixed on Friday, April 2, to-morrow. He procured the required bonds after which he swore a [illegible] against Joseph McIntyre sen., for having threatened the same. Papers were issued for his arrest, he was brought before the magistrate, had a jury trial, was found guilty and required to give himself under $[illegible] bonds, with two sureties of $[illegible] each, to keep the peace, and pay the costs [illegible]

By reference to another column it will be seen that the firm of George Fisher & Co., have dissolved partnership. This firm has long been one of the most reliable business houses in Clinton, noted for its good reputation and extensive trade. A. B. VanDe Mark will continue the business at the old stand, and we bespeak for him the same generous patronage that the old firm has always received. One is no stranger among us and his numerous friends in Clinton will see to it that he secures his full share of the public patronage.

THE MINING INDUSTRY.

[illegible] in the Eastern States there are but few places where the [illegible] of mining [illegible] converting the crude [illegible] into gold and silver [illegible] which have been [illegible] of the Rocky Mountains in the State of Colorado this [illegible] are informed on this subject, there are to be found men of enterprise and good judgement who are ready to take interest and invest capital to secure shares in the great [illegible] of the goods [illegible]

The high and railroad transportation [illegible] the mineral ranges, the present knowledge of mines and mining, which has been acquired by great experience, the improved mills and machinery for handling and treating ores, and the unvarying and permanent cash markets for all products of the mines, have established this industry as among the safest and most profitable sources of investment for capital and labor.

Through a practical miner who during the past five years has made the Rocky Mountains near Leadville his home, and mining his occupation, eight valuable gold and silver bearing mineral claims have been selected and secured favorably located in the great gold and silver belt of that range in which the mining camps of Leadville, Alma, Kokomo, Breckenridge and Georgetown are situated, only about fifty miles in length, and which has yielded a hundred million dollars in the precious metals within the past few years, which vast sum has been shared in many fortunes among persons in nearly every State of the Union, who have invested capital in stock of the companies which own and operate mines in this small but rich section of the Rocky Mountains.

To secure interest in and control of these great mining properties, the Star Mountain Mining Company has been organized under the laws of the State of Michigan, for the term of thirty years by good and responsible men of the county of Washtenaw, who desire to hold shares in these mines and propose that a large combination of good citizens of this and neighboring counties, join in this enterprise, own its stock and control its management, that there may be harmony in conducting its business and results in building its stands by orders received mainly from their own number, whose interests shall be identical with that of all others concerned.

[illegible] AND CONDUCT [illegible] COMPANY.

The Company will be managed by a board of nine Directors, selected by the stockholders from their best business men, residing in neighboring towns. The principal office of the Company will be located at Ann Arbor, in the State of Michigan, where the President, Secretary and Treasurer will reside, to keep and transact all the business of the Company.

By inviting your neighbors and friends to join in this enterprise we should be fair to state that we have no agents, and do not expect to have any, but will leave the matter open for all who desire to do so, to subscribe for stock on a strictly business basis, and on such terms as shall be agreed upon by the Board of Directors, and applied only to pay for work done in the mines taking out the ore, and in conducting the business of the company, the properties of the company will be used to the best advantage for the benefit of its stockholders.

We cannot of course attempt to state the exact profits which will accrue from this business, but feel confident it will be satisfactory to stockholders, when we say from reports of experts, and the same mineral [illegible] we have seen and know of, that the business will be a very profitable one for those interested.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

[illegible]

Faddyog Bishop, returning Monday [illegible] He is receiving a good many [illegible] orders for house work for the coming season, satisfied by the satisfaction of all.

The attendance at the maple sugar festival was very small. The society received over $[illegible] clear of all expenses.

Burtis Morley moved his family to the village Saturday. They will live on part of Mrs. Mary Arner's house during the summer.

Mrs. Dr. Nelson and Miss Belle Barlow went to Dundee last Thursday to visit friends.

Miss Salome Clark was out for a ride Saturday, the first since her severe illness.

Mrs. S. H. Linn is reported a little on the gain.

Mr. Larkin was out on Monday, the first for several weeks.

Chas. Burnett left for Missouri Monday, where he will seek a Western fortune.

At a meeting of the official board last week, W. H. Arner was elected chorister, and Miss Belle Barlow as organist for three months, which is gladly accepted by nearly all in behalf of the choir and friends we return a vote of thanks to Mr. Arner and Miss Barlow for their kind services in the past.

Mrs. Winders went to Tecumseh last week and will make it her home at Mr. Joe Wilson's. It looks rather tough for an old lady that has battled with the ups and downs of life, not to have a home to spend her last few days in comfort and peace.

Mrs. Leach and Miss Brewer of Dundee visited friends and called on our village school last week Wednesday.

The Sunday School purchased three very fine maps of the Scripture world and Missionary journeys and travels of St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vanluven visited his mother, Mrs. Louis Miller, last week.

School in Dist. No. 5, began Monday with Miss Lizzie Bennett of Tecumseh at the switch.

We are informed by good authority that a certain merchant at Britton sent $500 to Hall Brothers of Detroit, for a bill of groceries, and have not heard anything from the money or order since. It was mailed at the office at Britton. The post-master says he received and sent the money, and Hall Brothers say they have not received the money or order either. It looks a little as if fraud existed somewhere along the line. A close search will be kept until satisfied behind of its whereabouts.

The Literary will [illegible] the interesting program this week Friday evening at the Hall. Preparations are being made for a public entertainment to be given yet in the near future. Full particulars given next week.

Election passed off very quiet Monday. A considerable hard work was done on all sides, as there were four tickets in the field, Democratic, Republican, Prohibition, and People's. The People's ticket was the same as the Republican, except Justice of the Peace. The Democrats were defeated on everything but Justice. The cooler was caused by the People's ticket at Britton. Party ladies were put in it was Jerit against Kingsley and the R's. After the result was decided a [illegible] was held at Britton. The band put forth some heart rending strains, and cider was as free as water. A large bonfire lit up their little village as light as day.

Levi Stevens, an old and respected citizen of Rome Township died suddenly Monday night of pneumonia.

The Good Templars social party at Jessup's Hall, Springville, Monday evening, was well attended.

We heard a defeated republican this Tuesday morning say he wondered if the democratic victory yesterday had anything to do with this storm.

Henry Palver has leased his farm to Sanford White 3d, and moved into his house in the village.

Owing to bad weather the social party at the church last Thursday night was not a success financially. Those who did go had a good time, and it was decided to try again some time in the near future.

NIGHT.

(From a poem by Longfellow.)

A little child, beside me, frail and fair,
Is sleeping so profound and so serene,
That if I speak my voice is hushed for fear
Lest I should hear the footsteps disappearing
Upon the threshold.

In the deep alcove the mother, as I write,
Receives a hundred little packets, bearing
The postmark of towns.

I hear the angels knocking at the doors of heaven,
And watch the pale, thin hands, like the primrose petals,
With tremulous touch, unfold and disclose the spread,
And, graved with sad thoughts of the dead, the sleep-worn faces
Of those who are gone.

One day will be my turn to sound the deep
Then I, like you, shall hear the morning dove
The night will be so dark, the rest so deep!
Then you will come, then you will come, my love,
And pay me back my gifts of fair white flowers
Prayers, tears and flowers.

—Argosy.

CURIOUS MARRIAGES.

Cupid's Disdain for the "Consistent" Actions of His Victims.

According to some of the novels of the present day, it is only the lovely nymphs of seventeen or eighteen, and the fascinating swains of three or four and twenty, who have any business to think of matrimony. The poor plain ones or those who have passed the meridian of life, are looked upon as completely shelved; the hymeneal torch is not to be lit for them, and the little god of Love passes them over with contempt. But is this really the fact?

On the contrary, there were never more extraordinary contradictions than we find in the history of marriages, we see women marrying men young enough to be their grandsons; crabbed Age and Youth often live together in perfect harmony, and May and December are constantly united with the happiest results. Almost every marriage is a nine-days' wonder, and creates much astonishment, speculation and lifting up of hands. Quite recently, a Dorsetshire clergyman of eighty years of age electrified his congregation by publishing his own banns in the parish church. It is always necessary to be prepared for these surprises. The blind, deaf, halt and maimed are not exempt from the contagion of matrimony, and so far from youth and loveliness being the only victims of Hymen, we find some of the loveliest women consigned to single-blessedness, while their less favored sisters are happy wives and mothers. The particulars of many curious marriages are not revealed to the public, but during the last century less reticence was observed in the matter, the ages of the respective parties were frequently put down without reserve, and the fortunes of the ladies were mentioned with much unction and gusto.

Among these announcements a few of the more remarkable are worth selecting. Here is one from an old magazine for June, 1778: "A few days ago, was married at St. Bridget's Church, in Chester, Mr. George Harding, aged one hundred and seven, to Mrs. Catherine Woodward, aged eighty-three. So singular a union could not fail of exciting the admiration and surprise of a numerous congregation, before whom the ceremony was performed. The bridegroom served in the army thirty-nine years, during the reigns of Queen Anne, George I., and part of George II. He is now particularly hearty, in good spirits, and retains all his faculties in an extraordinary perfection. This is his fifth wife, the last one he married in his one hundred and fifth year, and her Mrs. Woodward's fourth husband. It is also worthy of observation that the above old man's diet has been for the last thirty years principally buttermilk boiled with a little flour, and bread and cheese." As a pendant to this, we comes across another announcement a few years later: "Mr. Thomas Dawson, of Northallerton, aged ninety, to Miss Golightly, a bouncing damsel of sixty-four. The anxious bridegroom had been a widower almost six weeks."

As instances of youth and age going together, we may give the case of "Mrs. Horn, an agreeable widow with a genteel fortune, aged seventy-nine, who married Mr. William Sleptoe, aged about thirty." We are again startled by the following announcement in the month of January, 1805: "At Tynemouth Church, a young man about twenty-three, to a woman aged eighty-six, who had been the mother of seventeen children. Notwithstanding the banns had been but twice published, the experienced lady repaired to the church, where she was soon joined by her lover and declared she would not leave it without her errand. She waited till the afternoon service was over, during which time she was frequently requested to leave the vestry, but all to no effect. She complained bitterly at her negligence in having forgotten to bring her pocket bottle and tobacco-pipe with her. The groom apologized (or not) being acquainted with the forms of the church, as he had never been in one since he was christened, and if appearances could be behaved, water did not seem to have been upon his face since that period."

We find another curious marriage, which is announced in the following terms: "Lately at Newcastle, Mr. Silvertop to Mrs. Pearson. This is the third time that the lady has been before the altar in the character of a bride, and there has been something remarkable in each of her three conjugal engagements. Her first husband was a Quaker, her second a Roman Catholic, and her [illegible] was a Presbyterian. The bridegroom was twice her age. At sixteen, she married a gentleman of thirty-two; at thirty, she took one of sixty, and now, at forty-two, she is married to a gentleman of eighty-four."

A great sensation was created in the celebrated female historian, Mrs. Catherine Macaulay, who, was far advanced in years, with a bridegroom's mate under age, of the name of Graham. Mrs. Macaulay was quite a literary enthusiast, and Dr. Wilson, an elderly and learned admirer of her talents, had secretly built a house for her, called Albert Row, which he presented to her with furniture, and a yearly income. He wished, in return, to have made a distinguished lady his wife. Great, however, was the amazement amongst the literary and fashionable circles in Bath, when Mrs. Macaulay, who had always been considered proof against matrimony, married Mr. Graham, a young man, a mere boy, and a military man.

Mr. Cudworth, in describing a visit "Round about Bradford," his position as minister, caused the rounds of Whitby in the year 1841, and says that the gossiping, not the collection of oddities and eccentricities that passed through the streets of Bradford in that year, on the way to the Parish Church. On a couple of yards of painted calico, the secret of all the gossiping was told in the following words:

"At John's and Betty's wedding
We will merry be
For Johnny's sixty five,
And Betty's seventy-three."

Mr. Cudworth also relates that the incumbent of Wilsden, Mr. Barber, was once called upon to perform a "marriage in trust." There was a person living at Haworth Parish known by the name of "Moses o' Lukis." Moses having persuaded a woman to take him "for better, for worse," they appeared at Wilsden Church to be married, but when the knot was tied, the happy couple had no money to pay the fees! Moses promised to pay the reverend gentleman in bessoms; and honestly kept his word. This reminds us of a couple who, not having the wherewithal to buy a wedding-ring, the large key of the church door had to be temporarily used for the purpose.

Ireland was not behind-hand in the oddity of its marriages. We come across whole clusters of them in Walker's Hibernian Magazine. Among them are the following: "Mr. John Hagerty, of Ballymanduff, County Dublin, aged twenty, to Mrs. Flood of said place, aged eighty-six." "The Rev. Athanasius Hurring, aged eighty-two, to Miss Carr, aged twenty-two, an agreeable young lady, with a fortune of fifteen thousand pounds." Mr. Richards, gardener, to Miss Mary Roper. The bridegroom is in the sixty-second year of his age, and five feet four inches high. The bride aged twenty-one, and only two feet eleven inches in height."

A match in high life between a certain Dowager Duchess and a handsome Irishman, Mr. Hussey, created a great deal of heart-burning and envy. Banbury Williams, one of the rejected suitors, composed some very spiteful verses on the occasion.

The problem how to unmarry a couple was attempted by a clergyman in the West Riding of Yorkshire in the year 1810. He found out on inquiry that he had married a young man and woman who were brother and sister by marriage, probably a deceased wife's sister. The clergyman, afraid that he might be punished for uniting this couple, attempted to unmarry them by taking the ladies bonnet from her head and placing the church Bible therein, but the charm was not successful, and the loving pair firmly resisted this innovation of dividing the bonnet.

Some very curious changes of names have taken place in marriage. In Derbyshire there now lives a woman who has been married thirty times. Her maiden name was Wildgoose—quite a common one in that locality—she changed it first for that of Fox, then for that of [illegible], and finally settled down as Mrs. Derbyshire. A Mr. Bacon was once married to a Miss Boyne, and a Mr. [illegible] married a Mr. Glass. A few instances of the same sort might be multiplied, but enough have been given to show how strangely things sometimes work out in the important matter of matrimony.—Chambers' Journal.

KING LEOPOLD

How the Monarch of the Belgians Appears on the Promenade.

Leopold is one of the most democratic of Kings. He saunters about Brussels in the most leisurely way, and is as familiar a figure on the Rue Royale or de Midi as President Grant used to be on Pennsylvania avenue. He is forty-six years old, has an unguilty face and an awkward manner, and one day when I saw him on the Rue de Midi he had the gait so bad that he looked as though he stuffing but a kingly fashion. He has a dark complexion, wears a full sandy beard that is long and tinged with gray, and his small eyes are so close together that there is scarcely space for his big Roman nose between them. Here is the dress which he paid thanks the proper one for a King's street wear. A coat of dark blue broadcloth, cut in the style of a Norfolk jacket, and trousers of the same material, but a shade or two lighter in color. In all the seams of both coat and trousers was set a small gold cord, boots of heavy calfskin, with soles fully a half inch thick, cap similar to that worn by an American army private, with a miniature gold bee of Brabant over the forepeak, and gold rimmed eye glasses with a pendant chain. A heavy cane was held in a hand whose third finger was encircled by a gold ring that bore the square, compass and letter G of the Masonic order, set in diminutive diamonds. His only attendants were two portly middle-aged gentlemen, elegantly dressed in black broadcloth and fine linen, who walked a few feet behind the King, and who occasionally answered a question put to them by their royal master.—Cor. Boston Post.

—An eminent scientist attributes the remarkable longevity of a woman who recently died at the age of one hundred and nine to the fact that she never wore a high bonnet in a theater. We also understand that the vigorous health of a Philadelphia man now in his ninety-ninth year is due to the fact that he never went out between the acts to make astronomical observations through a glass.—Norristown Herald.

CATAARH—A NEW TREATMENT.

From the Montreal Star.

"Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh, out of 500 patients treated during the past six months, fifty ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that but five per cent of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adopted his cure to their extermination. This accomplished the cause the Catarrh is practically cured and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other agency has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.

ESTATE OF JOSEPH SLATER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 15th day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Joseph Slater, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Frederick B. Wood and Charles Burridge, alleging among other things that they are executors of the last will and testament of Edwin B. Wood, late of said county, deceased, that said Edwin B. Wood was, by his testamentary disposition, the heir-at-law of the estate of said Joseph Slater, deceased, that they are ready as such executors to render the usual account of said late administrator and praying for an allowance of said account, for an assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate to and among the persons entitled thereto according to the provisions of the last will and testament of said Joseph Slater, deceased, and for the discharge of the estate of said Edwin B. Wood from all further liability as such late administrator.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 19th day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be why the prayer of said petitioners should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioners give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
